EVANSVILLE POLICE PUZZLED OVER A CHARGE OF ASSAULT MADE BY WOMAN AND ESCORT

Negro Is Alleged to Have Been the Assailant.

Beat Escort and Carried Woman to Secluded Spot.

Officers Are Not Inclined to Believe Woman's Story.

Evansville, Ind., June 27.—Harry Smythe, an express messenger, ran into the police station today and announced that a negro had assaulted Clara Weinbach, aged 20 years, with whom he was walking a few minutes before, and that he had been driven away at the point of a revolver and with threats of death. He said the assault had occurred in the yard of the Chandler avenue school house. Officers were hastily detailed, and on reaching the scene found Miss Weinbach coming out. She repeated the story of the attack on Smythe by the negro, of her efforts to assist Smythe, of Smythe's flight for aid, and of her being dragged into the school yard and assaulted. She gave a description of the negro she accused. There was intense excitement. A sheriff's posse was organized, extra police were sworn in, officers of the National Guard were notified to be ready to protect the prisoner, and Baptistown, the scene of the race riots of July last, was searched. Several suspected negroes were quietly held.

Capt. Breennecke of the police department, while the search was being continued, after daylight, called at the home of Miss Weinbach and found her apparently in no serious condition. She talked calmly of the experience of the night, and leaving her Capt. Breennecke announced that he doubted the story of the negro. He intimated, under close questioning, Miss Weinbach had implicated a white man who was a rivas of Smythe for her affections. He intimated that a white man would be arrested during the day.

This announced belief by the police authorities quieted the excitement.

The search for the supposed negro has ceased and there is little fear of a violent outbreak.

The alleged assault by a negro upon Miss Weinbach is more puzzling to the police every hour. The alleged victim and her escort at the time the assault is said to have been made have told so many apparently conflicting stories that it is beginning to be a question if an assault of the nature described has been committed. A negro is under arrest at police headquarters, whom Miss Weinbach declares is not the man who assaulted her, while Henry Smythe, her escort, declares him to be the man who attacked him. The negro is not full-blooded and is not dressed in the manner described when the assault was made. Another story is that the young woman has two lovers and they quarreled over her at the place designated when she alleges the assault occurred.

Theer is no excitement here and there has been no talk of mob law.

CRACKSMAN WINGED.

Ohio Mayor Takes Shot at Safe Blowers.

Cleveland, June 27.—Three robbers blew the safe in the postoffice at Rocky River, a suburb late last night. The explosion awakened Mayor Mitchell and his son, living near by and they opened fire on the cracksmen. One of the men was wounded. He was picked up and carried away by his companions. No further trace of them has been found. Nothing was secured.

MILWAUKEE GETS FIRST PLACE AT TURNFEST.

La Crosse, Wis., June 27.—In the Wisconsin turnfest, the Milwaukee turnverein gets first place; Southside, Milwaukee, second; Bahn Fert, Milwaukee, third. In the second class Sheboygan was first; La Crosse, second; Fond du Lac, third; John, Milwaukee, fourth and North Side, Milwaukee, fifth.

The six high turners chosen to represent Wisconsin at the St. Louis national games were picked from the turnverein, Milwaukee.

EVENTS OF SECOND DAY OF YALE COMMENCEMENT.

New Haven, Conn., June 27.—Ideal weather greeted the opening of the second day of Yale's commencement week. The day was crowded with events. Both the Sheffield scientific school seniors and the men of the academic graduating class had class day exercises.

The anniversaries of the law school and the medical school were also on the afternoon program. Elihu Root, ex-secretary of war, was scheduled to deliver an address before the law school seniors while Professor William S. Halstead, surgeon in chief of the Johns Hopkins hospital, was named as principal speaker before the medical school.

PREDICARIS CABLES HIS THANKS TO GOVERNMENT.

"Profoundly grateful to the government for securing my release.

"PERDICARIS."

The Tangier report to the effect that the British minister and the American consul general had united in a demand upon the sultan for the punishment of Raisuli is supposed at the state department to be based upon the "Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead" dispatch sent before Perdicaris was released. It is repeated at the state department that there is no disposition to make further demands on the Moorish government, so long as there are no further outrages upon American citizens.

BOTH FACTIONS SAY THEY ARE SATISFIED

Republican Caucuses Send Gratifying News to Dunn and Collins.

Claims Are Conflicting But Dunn Seems to Have Advantage.

St. Paul, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Forty-four counties in Minnesota on Saturday held Republican caucuses to select delegates to the county conventions next Tuesday, these to elect delegates to the state convention of Thursday. While it is evident the Dunn element obtained a decided advantage in the caucuses, Judge Collins' managers declare that the returns are entirely satisfactory to them. The Pioneer Press, which favors Dunn, says its reports show "Dunn carried thirty-seven counties, L. W. Collins two, and the two candidates split even in four counties. The thirty-seven counties that Mr. Dunn carried have a total of 402 delegates in the state convention. This brings Mr. Dunn within 126 votes of a majority of the 1175 delegates in the convention with the three large counties, Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis, and twenty-seven other counties to hear from. Mr. Dunn's nomination on the first ballot is, therefore, assured. The counties carried by Collins give him but sixty-one delegates. A conservative estimate is that the Princeton candidate will have at least 700 delegates on the first ballot. Should the rest of the outside counties prove as favorable to Mr. Dunn as those that have already held primaries, the Princeton candidate could be nominated without Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis."

THE DUNN CLAIMS.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS WILL MODERNIZE GRAIN AGREEMENT

New York, June 27.—After a series of conferences with the local grain trade, extending over a year, a committee of traffic officials, representing all New York trunk lines, have agreed to modification or a modernizing of "the grain agreement." It has now to be individually adopted by the traffic departments of the following railroads:

The New York Central, West Shore, Erie, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Lehigh Valley, New York, Ontario & Western and the Baltimore & Ohio.

On behalf of the grain trade, the negotiations have been carried on by the trade and transportation committee of the produce exchange, who have forwarded the agreement to the board of managers for the latter's consideration at their July 7 meeting.

The new agreement relates to the inspection, grading, consolidation and delivery of grain arriving by rail at the port of New York. It is very lengthy, but provides in brief that the railroad companies may put together in elevators, warehouses, boats or barges, provided by themselves for the purpose, grain of the same kind and grade without regard to its ownership, after the same has been inspected and weighed in accordance with agreements. But nothing therein contained shall be construed as depriving receivers of grain of the right of preserving the identity of ex-lake grain, if they shall so elect, nor as depriving shippers of the right of preserving the identity of all-rail grain consigned to this market, if they shall so elect, subject only to such uniform conditions as may be made by the railroad companies for that purpose.

THE LOOMIS MYSTERY DEEPENS

Bremen, June 27.—All evidence available here shows that Kent J. Loomis, brother of Assistant Secretary of State Loomis, was last seen on board the Kaiser Wilhelm II. about midnight, June 19, when he went on deck after the usual captain's dinner had been given on the eve of the vessel's arrival. Shortly afterward William P. Ellis, Loomis' companion, searched for Loomis, but he was unable to find him. The captain and the head steward, both of whom knew Loomis well, were standing at the gangway as the passengers landed at Plymouth and they both declare positively that Loomis did not land. Government Councillor Muelled of Berlin, who was a passenger on the Kaiser Wilhelm II., drew up a report of the affair, according to which Ellis deposed that Loomis had sat in a reckless fashion close to the rail despite warnings. Ellis also said Loomis drank a good deal a few days preceding his disappearance. None but witnesses, however, remarked this.

ARCHBISHOP GUIDI IS DEAD

Washington, June 27.—A cablegram was received at the war department today from Manila announcing the death there yesterday of Archbishop Guidi.

Mgr. Guidi, former archbishop of Nicea, and later, at the time of his death, apostolic delegate to the Philippines, was 66 years of age and Roman by birth. He had vast influence in Roman circles by reason of his position as auditor to Pope Leo. He had access to the holy father whenever he wished it, and lived in the vatican palace in apartments adjoining those of Leo. He was the confidential adviser of the pope, the latter never undertaking any important matter without consulting him.

The papal auditor is almost invariably made a cardinal, and is usually named in pectore, so that in case the pope should die suddenly the promotion would follow just as though he had lived. When a cardinal is named in pectore his name is written on a slip of paper, which is deposited in a chalice kept for the purpose in the pontifical chapel. At some future time, either during the lifetime of the pope who named him or after his death, the slip is taken from the chalice and the cardinal announced or proclaimed.

There were many who thought that Mgr. Guidi was named cardinal in pectore by Pope Leo, but the usual rule was violated in his case and he remained an archbishop till his death.

Mgr. Guidi was sent to the Philippine islands nearly two years ago as the representative of the vatican in the negotiations with the Philippine commissioners for the sale of the friar lands to the American government. An agreement was reached early in December last by Governor Taft and the friars. The settlement provided for the purchase of 403,000 acres, comprising all of the friar lands in the islands. The price paid for the sale was $7,250,000.

MINISTRY RESIGNS.

Brisbane, Queensland, June 27.—The ministry has resigned, owing to the recent vote in the legislative assembly on an amendment to the address in reply to the speech of the governor of Queensland, Major Gen. Sir Herbert Chermside, when thirty six votes were cast for the government aginst the opposition.

EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

St. Louis, June 27.—There was no formal meeting of the National Educational Association convention during the day, but the time was devoted to the reception of delegates and assigning them to the different hotels and boarding houses, where they are to stay during the week. The reception and registration committees were kept very busy but the work has been so carefully planned that little difficulty has been encountered in providing for the hundreds of teachers who arrived on every train.

The national committee, which consists of about sixty prominent educators met today in the lecture room at the educational building and listened to three interesting addresses. Superintendent Rogers of the educational department of the Louisiana purchase exposition, spoke on the "Lessons of Education"; R. W. Lagerstedt, Swedish commissioner to the fair, spoke on "Swedish Educational Exhibit and Its Relation to the Schools of Sweden"; and S. Tegima, imperial Japanese commissioner general to the fair spoke on "Japan's Exhibit and Its Relation to Education in Japan."

OLD WOODSMAN FOUND DEAD AT BEMIDJI.

Bemidi, Minn., June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Nels P. Londing, an old woodsman of this vicinity, was found dead in bed at the Svea hotel, at 9 o'clock, Sunday morning. Death was apparently due to heart disease. Londing was 72 years old and well known in this vicinity.

GREAT ARMIES MANEUVERING FOR POSITIONS TO FIGHT THE DECISIVE BATTLE OF WAR

Desperate Conflict Between Them Cannot Long Be Averted.

Gen. Kuropatkin Has Assumed Offensive Against Gen. Oku.

Gen. Kuroki Is Moving Rapidly on Russians' Left Flank.

Ta Tche Kiao, (between Kai Chou and Hai Cheng, Liao Tung Peninsula), June 27.—A great battle seems to be impending. A portion of the Russian army has assumed the offensive against the Japanese forces, commanded by Gen. Oku and it is reported that Gen. Kuroki is moving along the Russian left flank against Hai Cheng. According to a high placed personage, Gen. Kuroki's army is strong enough to take the offensive and he presumably is anxious for a decisive action before the rains begin.

Sharp firing was heard in the hills yesterday at daybreak and severe fighting is reported to be in progress near the village of Ton Chen. An officer who galloped in yesterday evening reported that the Russians were gaining the upper hand and driving back the enemy. This, however, has not been confirmed.

All day yesterday Russian troops were hurrying southward from Ta Tche Kiao and as night fell battalions were continuously moving out briskly to the accompaniment of their battle songs. Clouds of dust hung over the marching columns and the chorus of the infantry singers was occasionally interrupted by the rattle and clang of guns drawn at a smart trot and followed by galloping squadrons of cavalry. It was a stirring spectacle to see the Russian army eagerly hastening, singing into battle. The old battle hymns last heard in the Balkans resounded among the hills and valleys, as with bayonets glitering in the setting sun, the regimental colors were borne majestically forward. For hours after darkness fell over the scene one could still hear the rattle of moving guns, the creaking of commissariat wagons and the tread of marching men, while occasionally, in place of the war songs of the soldiers, homely melodies recounting the joys of village life, which carried the minds of the men back to their distant homes in Russia echoed through the air.

At this dispatch is filed news has reached here that Gen. Kuroke is marching upon Hai Cheng.

There are very many military attaches and newspaper corespondents here.

St. Petersburg, June 27.—Dispatches received here from Ta Tche Kiao indicate that both the Russian and Japanese armies are moving into contact for a great battle, which even now may be in progress.

Gen. Kuropatkin yesterday assumed the offensive against Gen. Oku, while Gen. Kuroki from a position fourteen miles to the eastward, was moving against the Russian flank at Hai Cheng.

RUSSIANS EXCITED.

Believe Next Few Days Will Determine Campaign.

St. Petersburg, June 27.—Not since the war began has such an air of excitement pervaded the war office and the admiralty. The news received during the next few days is expected largely to determine the fate of the present campaign on land and sea. The spirits of the Russians have appreciably risen at the prospect that after all the sorties of the squadron of Rear Admiral Withoft, in command of the naval forces at Port Arthur, while it may have resulted in the loss of some of the Russian ships, has been successful. A dispatch from Che Foo this morning says that a Chinese junk reports having seen two big Japanese warships and several torpedo boats damaged on Friday near Port Arthur.

This strengthens the belief here that a great sea fight has occurred and that the Japanese, who alone are able, through wireless telegraphy, to be in constant comunication with their base are withholding the news. If the Vladivostok squadron is at sea with the purpose of effecting a juncture, as is generally believed, with the Port Arthur squadron, its appearance on the scene could easily turn the scale in favor of the Russians.

Some usually well informed personages at the war office are bold enough to see in a report received this morning by the Bourse Gazette of the hasty retirement of Gen. Oku evidence that the Japanes flet has suffred a reverse and that the communication of this inteligence to Gen. Oku, with the accompanying threat that his base at Pitsewo may be attacked, compelled his withdrawal.

All direct news from the land side indicates an immense and decisive battle near Ta Tche Kiao. According to the Asociated Press adices last night, Gen. Kuropatkin is there, personally in command. The presence of the military attaches and newspaper corespondents is also significant. Kuropatkin's purpose seems to be to try to prevent a juncture of Gen. Oku's and Gen. Kuroki's armies. The outposts are in touch all along the line. If Kuroki has met Kuropatkin's offensive move southward against Oku by an advance on Hai Cheng, as the advices of the Associated Press from Ta Tche Kiao, say, the Russian commander-in-chief seems to be seriously endangered unless he retires or is strong enough to present two faces to the enemy. Kuroki was only fourteen miles from the Russian army yesterday, according to a dispatch from the front, and the three armies are so close together that a decisive battle appears to be inevitable.

ADMIRAL TOGO TELLS HOW HE DESTROYED RUSSIAN SHIPS.

Tokio, June 27.—Admiral Togo's detailed report of his effective attack on Port Arthur last Thursday night has reached Tokio.

The report confirms the reported distruction of a Russian battleship of the Peresviet type, the disabling of a battleship of the Sevastopol class and a protected cruiser resembling the Diana and the injuring of a torpedo boat destroyer, but throws no light on the Russian plan.

The entire Russian fleet steamed out to sea in line of battle. Suddenly, when within fourteen thousand metres of the Japanese fleet, the Russian fleet refused battle and steamed back to anchorage outside the harbor where during the night the Japanese destroyers and torpedo boats made eight desperate attacks upon it. The Russian vessels re-entered the harbor on Friday since which time it has failed to reappear.

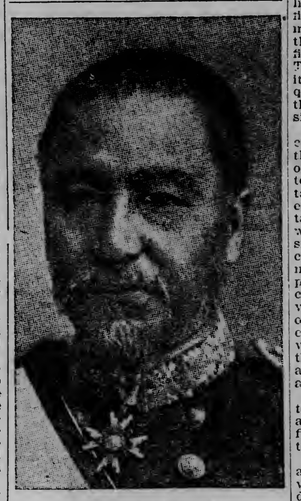

In his report, Admiral Togo says:

"The exit of the Russian fleet from Port Arthur harbor began early Thursday. The battleships Peresviet, Poltava, Sevastopol, the armored cruisers Bayan and the protected cruisers, Paltada, Diana, Askol and Novik, came first, a steamer leading them clearing mines.

"A warning flashed by wireless telegraphy by the Japanese patrol brought up Admiral Togo's fleet at full speed to a series of prearranged stations.

"Three flotillas of Japanese destroyers and torpedo boats steamed close to the harbor entrance and watched the Russian vessels. At 11 o'clock, the Russian battleships Czarevitch, Retvizan and Pobleda, joined the other Russian ships outside the harbor. Several steamers and boats were engaged in clearing and exploding mines in order to make a passage seaward.

"Captain Asai, commanding the Japanese torpedo flotilla, attacked the vessels engaged in clearing out the mines and hampered the work. At 3 o'clock seven Russian destroyers appeared and the Japanese vigorously attacked them. One of the Russian destroyers which was hit and set on fire retreated to the harbor burning. The Novik attacked the Japanese who scurried away. The vessels engaged in clearing the harbor finally made a passage and the Novik led the Russian fleet seaward. In the meantime Admiral Togo concealed the positions of his ships and at 4 o'clock sent the third squadron out in to the vision of the Russians with the object of drawing them out. The Russian fleet stood southeastward and then southward. During this time, Admiral Togo had concealed his first squadron south of Gugan rock. As the Russians approached Admiral Togo assembled his fleet and prepared to attack. At 6:15 p. m. the Russians were in plain sight six miles northwest of Gugan rock.

ADMIRAL TOGA.

The Czarewitch led and the nine others followed in a single line. The Novik and seven destroyers were placed at the right of the line. Admiral Togo waited, with battleflags flying from all the tops. The Japanese fleet formation represented the first letter of the Japanese alphabet inverted.

"At 7:30 p. m. the Russians headed for the Japanese and Admiral Togo veered slightly to the right in order to bring pressure against the head of the Russian formation. At 8 p. m. the Russians changed their course and headed northward. Admiral Togo followed in a long single line ordering the destroyers and torpedo boats to prepare for an attack after sundown. At 9:20 p. m. the small flotillas swung around the rear of the Japanese fleet and headed towards the Russians at full speed.

At 9:30 the fourteenth flotilla delivered the first attack on the Russian fleet, now in the rear of a point five miles outside the entrance to Port Arthur. Immediately afterwards the fifth flotilla delivered a second attack. The Russian fleet was confused and it was impossible for it to retreat quickly into the harbor on account of the narrowness of the channel and possibly the low tide.

At 10:30 p. m. the Russian fleet anchored in a single line extending from the foot of Wantsucing fort to the base of Chenaorhan. During the night the torpedo flotillas kept up constant attacks on the Russian fleet, going in eight times. The most effective attack was that of the sixteenth flotilla, which at 11:34 p. m. caught the Russians rounding Chenshen. The first-class torpedo boat Shirataka, Commander Wakabayashe, sent two torpedoes in a battleship of the Peresviet class. She was seen to sink in a volume of smoke and fire. Other effects of the attack were not observed on account of the heavy firing, which cast volumes of water over the flotilla and the heavy cannonading which rent the air. The searchlights from the ships and forts also blinded the Japanese.

At dawn Friday a reconnaisance of the entrance was made by the fourth and fifth flotillas, whose report confirmed that of the patrol ships as to the Russian loss.

Admiral Togo says the moonlight and the narrow line of the enemy prevented his fleet from inflicting greater damage.

The Japanese loss was unexpectedly small. The destroyer Shirakump was struck in the cabin and three of her crew were killed and three wounded.

The first-class torpedo boat Chidori was struck in the engine room. Torpedo boats 64, 66 and 53 were damaged. The others engaged were uninjured. In concluding his report, Admiral Togo says:

"The effect of the attack and the small loss must be attributed to the illustrious virtues of his majesty."

OFFICERS QUARRELING.

Russian Writes of Gloomy Situation In Far East.

Tien Tsin, June 27.—A correspondent of the Associated Press has seen a translation of a private letter from an officer high in command under Gen. Kuropatkin to a brother officer, giving a gloomy view of the situation for Russia, and making disclosures. The writer said:

"It is a shame to see officers constantly quarreling, divided into cliques and fighting for their own interests, until Japan, the common enemy, is forgotten. Every one, from the viceroy and Kuropatkin to insignificant subalterns, is quarreling and unwilling to obey orders. In the eyes of the correspondents and foreign attaches we are disgraced. Until the whole system is changed we cannot hope for victory. Jealousy and suspicion are rampant throughout the army. The members of our secret service are so busy spying on each other that they cannot apprehend the spies and Japanese agents, who work with impunity. Japan seemingly knows every plan made by us, which accounts for many plans having been changed suddenly. Our brave men go into battle like sheep to the shambles. No one can deny their loyalty, but until they are properly officered their loyalty and zeal are wasted. Europe now knows we are a divided house, and will profit accordingly. Those who have the welfare of Russia at heart cannot help feeling that if Port Arthur falls, and Japan takes Liao Yang, the powers will intervene, to our eternal disgrace."

TO ENTICE KUROPATKIN.

The Japanese Have Evacuated Senu Chen.

St. Petersburg, June 27.—The Japanese have evacuated Senu Chen, apparently with the object of enticing Gen. Kuropatkin south. In the meanwhile Gen. Kuroki is advancing on Hai Chen, ready to attack the Russian left, and is again moving troops north from Feng Wang Cheng.

The recent developments, it is believed by the general staff, will defer the prospects of a big battle.

JAPANESE WORKS

Have Been Built With the Greatest Care.

Gen. Kuroki's headquarters in the field, (via Fusan, June 26.)—A party of eighteen correspondents and military attaches has been conducted on a tour of the main Japanese works behind headquarters. That the greatest care has been taken in building them, the attaches remarked temporary defenses having been constructed with more pains than most European armies would take under similar circumstance. At Liao Yang, where it was hitherto thought the first meeting between the two armies in force would occur, the Russians have guns mounted in position on the city wall and trenches on the plain south of the city extending over an area of 180 degrees. Thees trenches are so constructed that they can be flooded during the rainy season. Recent rains indicate the beginning of the wet seasons when military movements upon a large scale will be greatly handicapped and, perhaps, rendered impossible for months or more.

The Japanese are completing arrangements for transportation whereby facilities for the supply of the army will be assured regardless of weather conditions. Koreans are bringing in many stories of Cossack outrages in Northeastern Korea. According to these reports the natives have been forced to furnish supplies to the marauders, who have in return burned the houses of the villagers and ill-treated their women.

In justice to the Russians, it must be said that the Chinese hereabouts have been liberally paid for work and supplies during the Russian occupancy. A few buildings were burned along the line of their retreat, but the towns were left mostly undamaged.

Within the Japanese lines the country is enjoying its usual prosperity except that the merchants suffer from the stoppage of traffic with the interior. Farmers find a good market for their products and coolies get unusual prices for their labor. In most of the towns the local magistrates continue their jurisdiction under Japanese supervision.

MURDERER GOES TO ELECTRIC CHAIR WITH SMILE ON FACE

New York, June 27.—Frank Henry Burness one of the most remarkable prisoners that ever occupied the death house at Sing Sing prison, went to his death in the electric chair today. With a smile on his face he walked from his cell, and seating himself in the chair assisted the men in adjusting the straps which were to bind him. Four electric shocks were given before he was pronounced dead.

The crime for which Burness was executed was the killing of Capt. George B. Townsend, of the schooner Charles Buckley, last November, but he also confessed to having murdered no less than four persons. Townsend was killed during a dispute over wages amounting to about $20 which Burness claimed was due him. When convicted of the latest crime he announced that he was willing to waive the six weeks that the law requires to elapse between the time of sentence and the execution. Despite his objections the case was carried to the court of appeals and after a long delay the sentence was affirmed. When informed that the end was to come at last, Burness expressed himself as pleased that there would be no more delay.

"I deserve to die," Burnss told the prison officials, "and the sooner they put an end to my troubles the better. I've got an uncontrollable temper and if released would only commit more violent crimes. I'd kill a man for 5 cents as quick as for anything else."

Burness was born in Butler, Pa., 44 years ago, and had followed the sea nearly all his life.

DISSOLUTION OF THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY ASKED OF COURT

Trenton, N. J., June 27.—Charles D. Henderson, Jr., of Jersey City, and Joseph M. W. Newlin, of Philadelphia, counsel for George Rice, of Marietta, Ohio, today filed in the court of chancery a bill for the dissolution of the Standard Oil company, a New Jersey corporation, charging that the company is illegal, and that it exists in violation of the anti-trust laws of the United States, and of the decision in this state relating to monopolies. The bill charges that the Standard Oil company in Ohio was declared illegal by the courts of that state, but that the company, instead of dissolving, in obedience to that decision, has, by subterfuge, evaded the Ohio decision, and that the New Jersey corporation is merely a holding company for the Ohio concern. The bill asks that not only the company be dissolved, but that its assets be distributed among its stockholders, after paying off its outstanding securities. For the accomplishment of this purpose it is asked that a receiver be appointed.

PROHIBITIONISTS TRY TO LOCATE GEN. MILES.

New York, June 27.—In connection with dispatches from Indianapolis to the effect that leaders of the Prohibition party, where the natignal convention meets tomorrow, had been unable to locate Gen. Nelson A Miles (spoken of as a possible nominee of the party), it is learned that the general was in this city Sunday and intended to leave for Washington on his way to the west.

Indianapolis, June 27.—The opening feature of the gathering of Prohibitionists for the national convention will be the biennial oratorical contest, which will take place at Tomlinson hall tomorrow night. It will show the result of two years preparation on the part of the contestants.

FORMER SENATOR, J. L. MITCHELL VERY ILL.

Milwaukee, June 27.—Former United States Senator John L. Mitchell is suffering from intestinal cancer and is said to be in a serious condition. The senator's health has been impaired for about a year. He is under the care of three physicians at his country home, "Meadowmere," near the national Soldiers' home in this city. Senator Mitchell has been interested in many public enterprises and only lately retired from the board of managers of the national soldiers' home.

Physicians say he may live several weeks, though death may overtake him very shortly.

Superior at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Winnipeg took the third game of the series with Duluth here Saturday afternoon by a batting rally in the fifth inning, after the game was apparently lost. The visitors broke into the scoring in the third. After Sheppard was out, Wilkes and Noldin hit safely. Clarke dropped a throw to the plate to catch Wilkes. Ball flew out, but Corrigan hit safely and came in with Noldin when Kelley booted Randall's grounder.

It looked bad for the Maroons, but they had a rally coming. In the fifth Howard led off with a safe one, but was forced out at second by Clarke. Wood walked and Clarke scored on Green's safe hit. Howells sent a long fly to Corrigan and Wood came in. Annis was hit by Noldin, and Kelley was safe on Quillan's error, filling the bases. Noldin forced in a run by passing O'Hearn, but fanned the next man up, Sullivan.

The visitors took the lead in the first half of the seventh, when Wood muffed Sheppard's easy fly. Sheppard stole second and came home on Noldin's single.

Winnipeg came back in the last half of the inning with two runs. Howells, Annis and Kelley hit safely, and Corrigan's error let in the winning run.

While both teams had numerous errors chalked up against them, they retrieved themselves by brilliant work at times. Howard's stop of a hard liner in the ninth probably saved the day for the home team.

Superior Captures One From Crookston at Last.

Crookston, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Superior captured the last game of the series with Crookston here Saturday afternoon, through the fast work of the infield and the hitting of Anderson and Rogers, each of whom had a home run to his credit. Simmonds kept the hits well scattered. The score:

SMITH IS RANK.

Umpire Work at Fargo Is on the Rotten Order.

Fargo, N. D., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Umpire Smith's umpiring was the feature of Saturday's game, and it was of the order that incites men to commit crimes. The crowd was worked up to a great pitch in the third when Nagel deliberately kicked a batted ball while running down to second and escaped a penalty of any kind. At other stages of the game the decisions were decidedly unsatisfactorily to the crowd.

The game was fast and exciting and it required ten innings to decide it. Fargo tied in the ninth and Grand Forks won in the tenth, when they made three hits, coupled with Fargo's two errors, counting twice at the home plate. Fargo could not connect in their half.

There was some brilliant infield work, in which Hess was the star.

ARREST AT CROOKSTON.

Sunday Baseball Is to Be Tested.

Crookston, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Manager McNeil of the Crookston team was arrested by the local police previous to the game here yesterday afternoon, but the contest was completed, the home team winning out by the score of 2 to 1. The Sunday baseball question will be fought out in the courts.

The game was a pitchers' battle between Thomas and Lempke, in which the former had the better of the argument, allowing but four hits, and fanning nine men.

Both teams played a fast and snappy game in the field, and the game was an exciting one.

Grand Forks today.

The Tigers are the only ones who have tied a series with Duluth.

If the White Stockings take two out of Grand Forks the other teams might as well quit.

Three games at Grand Forks, three at Fargo and then home for the holiday, and a long stay.

The White Stockings don't meet Crookston on this trip, but the Woodpeckers will be here early in July.

Crookston is still doing very nicely, thank you. She still seems to be afflicted with that climbing fever.

Crookston is having a fight for Sunday baseball. Manager McNeil was arrested previous to yesterday's game with Fargo.

It is Koukalik's turn to pitch today, but "Rusty" will probably be in the box. It seems to be the policy to save "Coke" as a utility pitcher and for exhibition games. Some of the fans would like to see him given a chance in a regular league contest.

Sheppard continues to show up well and has yet to make his first error. The fans will look forward to seeing "Shep" back in the game when the team returns home.

NINTH IS FATAL

In Luck to Come Out of It With Score Tied.

After winning yesterday's games against Ashland, the Duluth Fashions went to pieces in the last half of the ninth and allowed the home team to tie the score. The game had to be called with one man in the ninth to allow the visitors to catch a train, and it probably saved the Fashions from a defeat.

It was a hard luck story the Fashions had to tell. With the score 7 to 2 in their favor, they allowed Ashland to land five tallies by ragged work in the field. Cummings, who had pitched good ball for eight innings, let up and several singles were made off his delivery.

It was the first game the Fashions have failed to win this season, with the exception of the one against the Superior league team.

GOOD DAY FOR SAILING.

Yachts Have Fine Sport—Two Classes.

The first yacht races of the season were sailed in the local harbor Saturday afternoon.

A stiff breeze made the weather conditions about perfect for the race, which was witnessed by a large number of spectators.

There were two classes of entries, A and B. In A class were the schooners Water Lily and Mildred J., and in the B class were the three new boats, Feather, owned by Dr. Lynam; Miss Modesty, owned by H. E. Gooch, and the unnamed boat owned by G. N. Holland.

The boats in the latter class furnished some good sport. Miss Modesty appeared to be sailing in hard luck. Her skipper missed the turning point at buoy No. 2 and lost some three minutes by it. The boat also broke her port stay after rounding the fourth buoy and lost further time. In spite of these accidents she finished a second less than four minutes after Feather, which had been sailed in magnificent style by Dr. Lynam. G. N. Holland in his unnamed craft finished third.

Mildred J. was late in arriving on the course and she and the Water Lily did not get started until nearly 4 o'clock. They crossed the line together, but Mildred J. gradually drew away from her rival, pointing a little higher and footing it a little faster. She finished two minutes ahead of the Water Lilly.

AGAIN CITED TO APPEAR

Richard E. Nixon, the Duluth dentist who was recently before the district court for contempt because he refused to pay alimony to his former wife, Minne Nixon, as ordered by the judge, has ben cited to appear before Judge Dibell, in special term of the court, next Saturday, and show cause why he should not be held for the same offence.

Judge Dibell issued the order for appearance on the filing of a petition by Minne Nixon, Saturday afternoon. She declares that the defendant is delinquent in alimony since September, 1901, when the divorce was granted, and asks that back payment to the amount of $340 be made her. At the time of the divorce she was granted her request for alimony, on condition that her child remain with her. It is expected that the attorney for the defendant will ask for the custody of the child in the father's behalf, and then a reduction in the alimony will be demanded.

Nixon will be remembered as the subject of some sharp criticism by Judge Dibell at a recent hearing connected with the case.

BANK FAILS TO OPEN.

Saratoga Concern Closed at Request of Directors.

Saratoga, N. Y., June 27.—The First National bank, of Saratoga, was not opened for business today. A notice, signed by National Bank Examiner Van Vranken and posted on the door, stated that at the request of the directors and by order of the controller of the currency, the bank was closed.

A run on the Citizens' National bank, which was begun Saturday, was continued today by the smaller depositors.

New York, June 27.—The First National bank, of Saratoga Springs, according to a recent statement, owed depositors $890,000. Its paid up capital was $125,000, and it had among its assets $1,018,000 in loans, discounts, stocks and securities and $160,000 in cash and exchanges.

IS LABOR'S FRIEND.

"President Roosevelt's nomination has awakened no enthusiasm in labor circles. It has awakened no enthusiasm anywhere. The best friend labor has in this country is Parker. I think his is the finest judicial mind in the United States. He is a whole man. He has done more for labor than any man who has ever sat on the bench. Every time a question has come before him he has rendered a decision that was based on humanitarianism."

Pittsburg, Pa., June 27.—F. C. Dickens, of the American Flint Glass Workers union, Toledo, Ohio, said last night:

"The nomination of Roosevelt for president and the appointment of P. C. Knox as senator from Pennsylvania will make the Republican party trouble. The working clases will be heard from at the fall election."

FIRE LOSS AT SISSON, CAL.

Sisson, Cal., June 27.—A small blaze which started in a jewelry store has resulted in the destruction of the main portion of this town. The heaviest individual losers are Schuler & Knox, $65,000, and the Shasta Box & Merchandise company, $60,000. The other losses are from $500 to $8000.

THE STATE FAIR

Secretary E. W. Randall Is In Duluth In Its Interest.

Improvements and New Features Planned For This Year.

E. W. Randall, of Hamline, Minn., secretary of the Minnesota State Agricultural society, registered at the Spalding this morning. Mr. Randall is here in the interest of the annual fall exhibit of the society, which will be held at the state fair grounds for the six days beginning August 29.

"We believe the fair will be bigger and better than ever this year," said Mr. Randall this morning, "and every inducement that can be given will be offered the public both to put exhibits in and attend the fair. This coming fair will be the forty-fifth annual event for the state and my visit at this time is to interest the St. Louis county fair people particularly in our fair.

"By comparison of our ticket sales with those of fairs of other states, we find that the amount of tickets sold last year at the Minnesota state fair, a total of $113,079.15, is over twice as large as the amount of tickets sold for the next largest fair in the United States. That was Illinois. We are a younger state than Illinois, in many senses, not as thickly settled and without a good many of the advantages that that state has in some directions, yet we have far outstripped her.

"Last year we offered $45,000 in premiums and this year we are offering a little over $50,000. For shorthorn cattle, open to the whole country, we have a premium list of $4500, which is $500 more than offered by the International people at Chicago. There is a special $500 list offered for Minnesota. There are exceedingly large premium lists for other cattle and various farming divisions. The race program has a list of $25,000 in purses, including $5000 for the 2:13 pacing class and a like amount for the 2:21 trotting class.

"A new feature this year will be the manufactures exhibit, which will occupy the new building now being constructed especially for it, and which will mean an outlay of $30,000. It is now completed to the roof line the brick walls being up. A great deal of improvement is being made at the grounds in many directions. Other buildings are being improved and painted. All the exhibition barns and the main exposition building are having new roofs put on and are being painted.

"We are continuing to put in new sidewalks and by the time the new sidewalks now being put in are done, there will be two and a half miles of tile sidewalks within the grounds.

"One of the great innovations this year will be in the street car service. We have frequently seen some big jams of people trying to catch the cars all at once at the close of the races on big days, as many as 50,000 people or more, and we have made an effort to relieve this congestion. We have moved our freight station across the street, and where it used to be we have placed two loops of street car tracks running into the grounds, and the cars from both Minneapolis and St. Paul will run into the grounds over these loops. Within each of these loops we have had built storage tracks, there being a capacity of fifty cars within each loop, or 100 cars for both loops. As each one of these big cars will take care of 100 people when they are filled to their seating and standing capacity, we are able to put 10,000 people on the cars at one time when it is necessary. This, it may readily be seen, is a great item for the comfort of the visitors.

"Our sale of fine cattle, without reserve after every annual exhibit, we believe to be a good thing for the breeding interests of the state, and it is calculated to bring up the standard of cattle in the state, for the reason that most of the fine breeding cattle we sell stay within the state. I have taken particular pains to notice the disposition of the cattle which go at these sales, and find that 85 per cent of them remain in the state of Minnesota.

"There is hardly any farmer who comes to the state fair but what is impressed with the class of exhibits that he sees there, and when he thinks of the scrubby cattle that he has at home he is a very unusual man if he does not try to buy a little stock that will help him breed better animals than he left at the farm.

"I have been through a good deal of the farming section of the state thus far, and I find that crop conditions are in general excellent, with the one exception of corn. July and August are corn months, and if we have good weather through these months we ought to have no trouble in getting a pretty good corn crop, too. Of course, the corn fields in many places are damp and weedy, which is not good for the crop. But in general the conditions are very pleasing, and I think everything points to a fine general exhibit in the various varieties of crops and stock at the fair this fall."

WEST DULUTH

The West Duluth baseball team was administered a severe drubbing at the hands of the Cloquet aggregation yesterday, at Cloquet. The final score stood 14 to 3 against the locals.

The game was characterized by poor playing throughout on the part of the West Duluthians. Larson, in the box for the locals, was not in his usual good form, and appeared to be at the mercy of the Cloquet boys at all stages. Hits were secured off him with apparent ease. The only really interesting inning was the seventh, when West Duluth brought in her three scores. With two men on bases Brotherton made a neat bunt towards third base, safely reached first and then trotted on to second on an error. Hannel was next to bat. He succeeded in lining out a neat two-bagger, adding two scores to the one brought in on Brotherton's bunt.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Marquette—John Hentela was killed. Andrew Lehta, fatally wounded, and Robert Ward, seriously injured, by the premature explosion in the Hecla mine. Hentela's head was blown from his body.

Menominee—William LaValley, a 10-year-old Menominee boy, was drowned on the Wisconsin side of the Menominee river about four miles west of the city while playing on the logs with three of his companions. It was shortly after the noon hour when the lad and his playmates started to walk along the river. Following the Menominee shore for several miles they began to play on the logs. They started to run on the logs and go from the Michigan to the Wisconsin shore, and when about midway across the LaValley boy fell through the logs. His companions had all they could do to make their own way, for the water was deep and the logs floating rapidly. Men working near the Hutchinson farm were summoned, but no assistance could be rendered. The drowning occurred in sixteen feet of water and after falling in the body did not come to the surface.

Ispeming—The store of the John W. Jochim Hardware company was burglarized Thursday night. The place has been entered many times during the past fifteen years, but the latest robbery was the smoothest job of all. While the goods stolen do not represent a heavy loss, perhaps a little less than $100, the thief was careful to select the very best in the show cases. A number of revolvers, some shears, knives and razors, also cartridges to fit the revolvers, were taken. The only weapons left in the revolver case were a couple of cheap ones, which the thief doubtless did not consider worth carrying away. All the cases are in the front of the store, directly opposite the window, while the cartridges were also in view of the street. The thief must have been in the place some time, as the cartridges selected could not have been located and sorted in a hurry.

Kenton—Oliver, the 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, of Trout Creek, got beyond his depth Sunday evening in the pond at that place and was drowned. Every effort was made to resuscitate the boy when the body was recovered, but without success.

RECEIVES BIDS

Board Opens Proposals From Contractors For Three Jobs.

P. McDonnell Lowest On Improvement of London Road.

Bids for municipal improvements amounting to over $20,000 were opened by the board of public works, at its regular meeting this morning.

Three contracts in all were bid for. They were as follows:

Paving of Seventeenth avenue east from Superior street to Second street and the construction of a storm sewer from Second street to the lake.

Construction of a sanitary sewer in Huron street from Twenty-sixth to Twenty-eighth avenues west with an outlet at Twenty-eighth avenue west and grading of the same street from Twenty-seventh avenue to Twenty-eighth avenue west.

The improvement of London road for as great a distance as the appropriations will allow.

There were but two bidders for the improvement of London road, P. McDonnell and George R. King. The specifications called for a bid stating the number of square yards which each contractor would improve for the appropriation of $5000. The McDonnell bid was for 10,204 square yards. The King bid was for 90 cents per square yard, which would give but 5556 square yards for the sum of $5000. The contract was awarded to P. McDonnell, subject to the approval of the common council.

Figures obtained at the office of the city engineer this morning showed that 10,204 square yards would cover a strip in the center of the road, which alone is to be improved, for a distance of a little over nine blocks. The improvement will reach from Sixtieth avenue east to a point between Fifty-first avenue east and Pitt street.

There were five bidders for the Seventeenth avenue east contract, as follows: J. H. Johnson, P. McDonnell, George R. King, Alex. Sang, M. Fitzgerald. The specifications call for bids on both tar and Telford macadam. It will take some time to figure out the totals of the different bids, and the contract will not be let until late this afternoon.

Six bids were submitted for the Huron street contract. The bidders were J. D. O'Connell, Robert Jennings, P. McDonnell, George R. King, Johnson & Norgren, and M. Fitzgerald. These bids will also have to be figured and the board will not be able to let the contract until late this afternoon.

All of the contracts will go to the council this evening for confirmation.

The London road and Seventeenth avenue improvements are two of the largest contracts yet remaining to be let. The only two large improvements remaining after they have been let, will be the improvement of Twenty-third avenue east and the paving of First alley.

The Seventeenth avenue contract will amount to about $15,000.

REIGN OF MME. MODE.

Protest of Subservency of All Things to Her.

Brooklyn Eagle: Things have come to pretty pass when not only our dress, manners and opinions are regulated by Mme. Mode, but even our topics of conversation are parceled out to us, according to the dictates of fashion. Advices up to date have it that the correct subjects for discussion among the socially elect are automobiles and dogs. It therefore behooves any woman who has never visited a dog show or owned a pup and who holds the ugly, noisy, whirling auto in aversion to preserve a discreet silence at social functions this season. Time was when a fair knowledge of literature, art and music were supposed to be a desirable equipment for life, but automobiles and dogs have displaced these old fashioned subjects in Paris and London, and presumably in ultra fashionable America. A Paris corrsepondent writes: "Everything is a matter of fashion. Not long ago everybody had something to say about Wagner; now he is almost forgotten. Automobiles and dogs have taken his place, and everybody talks automobiles and dogs. Parisians have acquired a taste for dogs, and have managed to collect a very respectable number in the space reserved for the exhibition in the Tuilleries Gardens. Women come to see them in parties, and they dress for the occasion."

While feminine Paris has literally gone to the dogs feminine London has given its attention to the first meet of the Ladies' Automobile club, of which the duchess of Sutherland is president. The procession of automobiles was led by the president, and the omnipresent tea finished up the meet.

Sentiments of Great Men.

Unhappy is the man to whom his own mother has not made all other mothers venerable.—Richter.

I have hardly ever observed the married condition unhappy, but for want of judgment or temper in the man.—Richard Steele.

If women lost us paradise, she alone can restore it.—John G. Whittier.

A beautiful woman is a practcial poem, planting tenderness, hope and eloquence in all whom she approaches.—Emerson.

They govern the world, these sweet-voiced women, because the beauty and harmony are the index of a larger fact than wisdom.—O. W. Holmes.

BODY FOUND

Glendive, Mont., June 27.—W. B. Foster, coroner of Dawson county, returned Saturday from Thompson creek, about eighty miles Northwest from Glendive, where he had been called by the finding of the body of Thomas McWilliams, who perished in a blizzard last March.

McWilliams left Bar "U" ranch on March 23 in a one-horse buggy and was caught in one of the worst blizzards of years. Some time after his horse was found dead, but no trace of McWilliams was discovered until last week, when his mummified body, enveloped in the fur coat he wore when he left Bar "U" ranch, was discovered by a boy herding sheep. He was religious in life and in death the skeleton fingers were found clutching a Bible.

The coroner did not deem an inquest necessary and the body was buried in a tarpaulin at the spot where he perished.

IN LUMBER MARKET

Slight Improvement In Trade With Few Sales Made.

Interesting Discussion of Northern Market—Edward Hines' Opinion.

A slight improvement in the lumber trade has been noticed by Duluth firms during the past week. It is estimated that the business of the last week has amounted to about 3,000,000 feet. Prices remain the same but the demand from various parts of the country particularly the east seems to be increasing somewhat.

Among the important sales of the last few days are those of 1,200,000 feet by the Red Cliff Lumber company, to go east by water and about 500,000 feet to be delivered by rail in small lots. Recent lumber shipments have been heavy. So far this season 75,000,000 feet have been shipped from Duluth, Superior and Two Harbors. Fully 60,000,000 feet of this has gone out of Duluth according to competent estimators.

Capt. Alex McDougall has erected a small mill on the St. Croix river near Solon Springs, which will soon be ready for operation. Mr. McDougall owns a large tract in that region which is covered with small pine, spruce, tamarack and hardwoods, which will be gradually cut off and put into salable shape.

During the past winter the Lake Superior Timber company has cut 25,000 cords of pulpwood and 5000 piles. The piles will be used in Port Arthur and in the East. The pulpwood is being shipped to Appleton, Neenah and Menasha and the paper towns of the Fox river valley. This is the first time that the mills of that region have been forced to invade the Canadian territory to secure material.

The American Lumberman has been collecting views of the leading operators in northern pine as to the condition of the trade and in spite of the fact that there has been much talk of the dullness of the trade during the present season it is predicted that the big firms will go into the winter this year with a smaller stock on hand than they had a year ago.

This is largely due to greater care in buying occasioned by the increased difficulty in effecting sales, and by the smaller production of the operators. Edward Hines of the Edward Hines Lumber company, is reported as follows in regard to the present situation:

"Last week our orders were 187 cars as against 147 a year ago; this is the second week this year we have been ahead of last year. Our trade has only been about 80 per cent of last year's trade, but with the amout of stock we are manufacturing this year we will go into winter quarters on January 1, 1905, with considerable less stock than we went into winter quarters with in 1904. Of our lumber on the great lakes we have sold 75 per cent of our this year's manufacture and there will be no difficulty about selling the balance practically as fast as it is cut.

"Now the buyers have not bought as much proportionately as last year; first, because there has not been the stock to buy, nor do they feel this year warranted in buying as heavily They are sort of buying from hand to mouth. The manufacturers on the great lakes have maintained their prices fairly well."

CONVENTION TICKETS

At St. Louis Can Be Obtained Three Ways.

St. Louis, June 27.—No tickets of admittance to the Democratic national convention, which begins at the Coliseum on July 6, will be on sale, it is announced, and there will be but three ways in which they may be secured—from the Business Men's league, through the courtesy of members of the Democratic national committee, or through the delegates who are assigned three each, besides their own. Arrangements for the number and the distribution of the tickets are complete. The total of the seats in each division is ascertained. In all they amount to 10,804, plus a few excess, the number of which will not be known until the convention opens.

The distribution of those seats at the disposal of the committee will begin at 6 p. m. July 5, and will take place at the Hotel Jefferson, at the direction of the sub-committee on arrangements of the convention and under the personal supervision of Charles A. Walsh, of Iowa, secretary of the national committee.

RESTS WITH GOVERNOR

Bell Says He Is Prepared to Enforce Martial Law.

Cripple Creek, Col., June 27.—Gen. Sherman M. Bell, who is governing Teller county under martial law, has issued another statement for publication in which he says:

"There are 10,000 lies being written about me. I am acting under orders of the governor of the state of Colorado. He stands for peace and quiet and good government, and has instructed me to see to it that the Western Federation of Miners shall not—directly or indirectly—murder any more men, and they shall not. So far as placing Denver under martial law is concerned, that rests solely with the governor. Provided he should see fit to do so, I am his adjutant general, commanding the military forces of the state, and will see to it that hundreds of bad men are deported, and after martial law has finally been called off, if the citizens permit the cattle I intend to deport to return, that will be their business. No man who wants to work will be molested, but the person who lives solely and only by his mouth, provided Governor Peabody gives me the word, will have to emigrate. The time for temporizing talk in Colorado has passed. What we ought to do now is to act."

FOOD FACTS

What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent physician of Rome, Georgia, went through a food epexrience which he makes public:

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food and I also know, from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients, that the food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients always gain just as I did in strength and weight very rapidly.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely and go to the mountains of this state, but two months there did not improve me; in fact I was not quite as well as when I left home. My food absolutely refused to sustain me, and it became plain that I must change, then I began to use Grape-Nuts food and in two weeks I could walk a mile without the least fatigue, and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

'As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers I consider it a duty to make these facts public." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE GRAIN TRADE

Alarmed By Insurance Companies Refusing to Pay Losses.

This Attitude Hurts Credits In All the Northwest.

Minneapolis, June 27.—The Times says: As a result of the refusal of four fire insurance companies to pay losses incurred by the destruction of a country grain elevator on Dec. 12 of last year, the grain trade of the Northwest is overhauling its negotiable paper and is looking carefully into the character of the material held as security for loans. Fire insurance policies are being carefully read over for ambiguous phrases or possible technicalities, and many a grain man who has never done more than skim over the surface of the printed matter appearing on policies, is now reading daap into the context with critically analytic mind.

This sudden interest in the matter arises from the recent publication of a number of instances of payments gained only by recourse to law, and of the case now holding the center of attention, that of the Edwards-Wood company, of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. The companies involved in the case, which promises to become a cause cellibre in the North Dakota courts, are the Pennsylvania Fire Insurance company, Hartford Insurance company, Insurance Company of North America, and Liverpool, London and Globe Insurance company. Action has been brought by the Edwards-Wood company to compel the payment of the loss.

The case takes its rise from the loan of several thousand dollars by the Edwards-Wood company to the Farmers' Independent Elevator company of Denbigh, N. D. The loan was made on grain in store. The Farmers' Independent Elevator company assigned over to the Edwards-Wood company the insurance policies covering the house in accordance with the forms appearing upon the policies as prescribed by law, and in accordance with the long-established custom in the Northwestern grain trade. The house was destroyed by fire Dec. 12, 1903. The proofs of loss were forwarded promptly, but up to this time the Edwards-Wood company has been unable to get a settlement, any statement as to probable future date of settlement, or any statement as to specific causes for the delay.

Not for years has there been before the grain trade of the Northwest such an important question as is embodied in the case at point. Millions of dollars are annually loaned out from Minneapolis and Duluth. It is not unusual for a big house to have several hundred thousand dollars outstanding individually, and when the grain movement is at its height the total due Minneapolis and Duluth firms is very close to $10,000,000. Of this the great bulk is loaned upon their reliability or the ability to policies assigned by the original insurer to the lender of the money. The reliability of the policies as a quick asset has not been called into question by the grain trade, and from their ready acceptance has grown liberally on the part of the firms loaning money and a system of easy credits that has long been a favorable feature of the northwestern situation. Anything affecting these policies or tending to throw doubt upon their reliability or the ability to realize upon them with reasonable promptitude, would affect credits in the northwest very seriously.

The result of the Edwards-Wood case is already apparent, and it is free opinion in grain trade circles that unless the insurance companies adopt a more considerate policy their business will not only be affected, but the credit of North and South Dakota, states that borrow very heavily during crop moving time, will suffer, grain men and bankers will take an attitude of ultraconservatism with regard to the acceptance of assigned insurance policies as security, and rates will be higher, with restrictions more binding upon the borrower.

If the stand indicated by the action of the companies in the Edwards-Wood case is to become the regular mode of action, no firm may be sure that the money will be forthcoming in the event of a fire loss. The fact that the lender holds the policy as an innocent purchaser, as security for money loaned in good faith, is not a consideration with the insurance companies, nor is apparently the binding character of the policy upon the underwriters. Any minor technical quibble between the insurance companies and the original applicant for the insurance may invalidate policies covering loans of thousands of dollors and leav the innocent holder of these policies no re course except to bring suit against the insurance companies. This every man who advances money and takes a fire insurance policy as security, it putting himself in position where upon destruction of the property covered he is likely to find himself not with an asset good for reimbursement of loss, but rather with a suit at law with himself as plaintiff.

In the case of the Edwards-Wood company the four companies, the Pennsylvania, Hartford, America and London and Liverpool and Globe, are acting together and have taken a non-committal attitude, ignoring requests for settlement and refusing to give any reasons for nonpayment. The Edwards-Wood company has already waited six months, against the legal limit of sixty days allowed the insurance companies, and as the case cannot come up for trial before the fall term of court, may have to wait a full year for the money. That the money will be paid finally is not doubted by the grain trade, for in two comparatively recent cases in which the general circumstances were the same as those in the Edwards-Wood case, suits were brought by Minneapolis grain firms and the companies forced to pay.

The question that strikes the grain trade forcibly is not so much the doubt about getting the money, since precedent favors the plaintiff, but the idea of having to resort to law to obtain settlement. The effect upon the trade, upon credits and upon the general commercial stamina of the Northwest will be very serious unless the insurance companies are compelled by law or by public opinion to make full and prompt statements of exceptions taken when any dispute between them and the original insurer exists, instead of throwing the burden of drawing a statement from them by legal process upon the innocent holder of their policies.

THE KEY IS HELD

By St. Louis, Ramsey and Hennepin to Gubernatorial Contest.

Neither Dunn Or Collins Has a Walkaway In the Country.

St. Paul, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—St. Louis, Ramsey and Hennepin counties, which will hold primaries tonight to elect delegates to Republican county conventions, hold the key to the Republican gubernatorial contest. Returns from the fifty-six counties that have held primaries, although incomplete, indicate that neither R. C. Dunn nor L. W. Collins has a walkaway in the country districts.

Both sides in St. Paul are claiming nearly everything, and it is very difficult to get at the exact situation. The Dunn men claim that they have not lost a single county that they counted on and that they have gained about 100 delegates over their estimate. The Collins forces, on the other hand, maintain that the returns indicate a landslide for the St. Cloud candidate.

It seems practically certain that the Collins men have carried Wadena, the home of W. E. Verity, one of Mr. Dunn's managers, and Rice county, the home of Joel P. Heatwole. The Dunn men say they never counted on these counties. They, however, do not concede Rice. Dunn carried Northfield and most of the towns in the northern part of the county, whereas Collins carried Faribault and most of the precincts in the southern part.

The Dunn men last night claimed the following counties with the following number of delegates in the state convention: Aitkin, 8; Anoka, 9; Becker, 12; Beltrami, 10; Benton, 8; Blue Earth, half the delegation, 10; Brown, half the delegation, 6; Carlton, 9; Carver, 12; Chippewa, 11; Chisago, 9 of the 14 delegates; Cook, 5; Cottonwood, 10; Crow Wing, 12; Faribault, 17; Fillmore, half of the delegation, 10; Houston, 12; Hubbard, 9; Itasca, 8; Jackson, 12; Kandiyohi, 14; Lake, 8; Lesueur, 13; McLeod, 12; Martin, 12; Meeker, 13; Mille Lacs, 9; Morrison, 14; Nicollet, 12; Norman, 11; Otter Tail, 19; Pine, 9; Polk, 16; Red Lake, 8; Redwood, 14; Renville, 16; Scott, 8; Sherburne, 9; Todd, 14; Traverse, 8; Wabasha, 13; Waseca, 12; Wilkin, 8. Total 472.

The Collins figures are as follows: Aitkin, 9; Anoka, 11; Beltrami, 10; Benton, 8; Blue Earth, 20; Brown, 12; Cass, 9; Chippewa, 11; Chisago, 14; Clay, 12; Faribault, 9; Fillmore, 20; Grant, 9; Hubbard, 9; Lesuer, 7; Lincoln, 8; McLeod, 12; Marshall, 11; Meeker, 13; Mower, 17; Nicollet, half the delegation, 6; Nobles, 12; Norman, 11; Olmsted, 16; Otter Trail, 19; Polk, 16; Red Lake, 8; Redwood, 14; Rice, 17; Sherburn, 9; Stearns, 15; Swift, 8; Todd, 14; Traverse, 8; Wabasha, 9; Wilkin, halft the delegation, 4; Yellow Medicine, 12. Total, 443.

The fifty-six counties that have held primaries have a total of 669 delegates in the state convention, and, according to the figures of the two candidates Dunn concedes to Collins and Eddy 197 delegates and Collins concedes to Dunn 226.

Some of the claims on both sides are extravagant, according to best advices. Reliable reports give Aitkin, Anoka, Hubbard, Le Sueur, McLeod, Meeker, Norman, Polk, Red Lake, Redwood and Todd to Dunn. These counties are all claimed by Collins. On the other hand, Dunn, it would seem, has very little claim to Benton, Beltrami, Cottonwood and Renville.

Collins' claim of the full delegation from Blue Earth is not well founded, as the county has a local candidate, William Young, for railroad and warehouse commissioner, and the delegation will probably be split. The same is true of Fillmore county, whose twenty delegates are claimed by Collins, although Dunn won out in Lanesboro, and A. D. Gray, of Preston, is a candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner.

L. A. Rosing, of Cannon Falls, who was in the city yesterday, said that the delegates to the Democratic national convention at St. Louis will arrange, through correspondence, for a meeting to select a national committeeman and members of the several committees, including the committees on credentials, resolutions, permanent organization, and those to notify the president and vice president of their nominations.

Richard T. O'Connor, of St. Paul, is talked of for member of the national committee to succeed T. D. O'Brien, of this city.

Attorney General W. J. Donahower, of St. Paul, candidate for the Republican nomination for attorney general, who has been spending a few days in Duluth, is well satisfied with the outlook there. Mr. Donahower will get the unanimous support of the Ramsey county delegation, whether Dunn or Collins gets the county.

Senator E. T. Young of Appleton, Mr. Donahower's only opponent, is in the city. Mr. Young has the support of a large number of state senators who served with him in the senate. He believes he has a good show for the nomination.

EVENING GAME OF BASEBALL

To Be Tried For First Time In Duluth Next Week.

The first evening game of baseball ever played in Duluth will be witnessed next week after the team returns from the present trip.

During the Winnipeg series one of the games was postponed from the last visit of the Maroons here will be pulled off in the evening. The regular afternoon game will be called at 3:30 p. m. and the evening game at 6:15 p. m.

The plan has been tried with no small measure of success at both Winnipeg and Crookston. The evening crowds are almost invariably larger than the afternoon crowds. It will be given a trial at least in Duluth and should it prove popular all of the postponed games will be played at this hour.

The evening games give many clerks and business men who are not free until 5 or 6 o'clock an opportunity of witnessing a ball game, which they would not otherwise have.

SCATTERING BILLS.

Complaint That Circus Agents Violate Ordinance.

Residents of the East End and Lakeside are complaining that the advance agents of the circus due in Duluth July 4, are using London road as a bill-board.

Several citizens living in that locality complained to The Herald that a man drove along the road this morning in a wagon scattering large posters broadcast over the boulevards, road and sidewalks.

The claim that this is a case where the city ordinance covering such a nuisance should be enforced, as the bills are not only unsightly, but frighten horses passing along the road.

ON EVE OF FIGHT

Both Collins and Dunn Forces Claiming Everything.

Primaries Promise to Be Red Hot—Claims Conflicting.

This is the evening when the voters turn out to the primaries in St. Louis county to vote for their choice of delegates to the county convention to be held tomorrow in Duluth, and to show by their votes for such delegates whether they wish to have delegates sit in the county convention who will work in the interests of either Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, or Judge Loren W. Collins, of St. Cloud, for governor of the state of Minnnesota to succeed Governor Van Sant.

That Dunn is still supremely confident of carrying the state is shown by the following telegram which he sent this morning to Guy A. Eaton, who is a member of the Dunn campaign committee of St. Louis county:

"Have over 500 delegates already, and will have enough to be nominated without Hennepin and Ramsey counties, and am certain to carry both these counties. Collins' claims are bluff and bluster."

"Outside Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis, Collins has 503. Will be nominated first ballot by 723. Necessary for choice, 598."

The Collins people have a flyer out on the streets today issued from their headquarters in the Mesaba block, on which the above message is printed, and the dodger states that the telegram from Mr. Martin was confirmed over the long-distance 'phone.

Headquarters of both the leading candidates were busy places today, and were visited by a larger number of interested people, including Congressman J. Adam Bede. Campaigners on both sides are working like beavers and the interest is naturally more keen on the eve of the primaries than at any other time, and there are a lot of friends of both candidates holding forth at the respective headquarters.

Every effort is being made to get all the votes out possible and the workers did not worry about going to church yesterday as long as there was a man to be seen. Many valuable workers are being taken from their places in stores and offices for the day through the intercession of leading men on either side with the employers, where necessary to get a worker's services.

Both sides are claiming everything in sight, practically.

James A. Martin, Collins' state chairman, wires as follows: "Judge Collins has carried the following counties: Beltrami, landslide; Becker, by two-thirds; Benton, over three to one; Mower, by unanimous vote; Waseca, divided; Mille Lac and Itasca, for Dunn. Pioneer Press claims everything and gets nothing. You may not believe it but I expect to carry Ramsey. Wadena elects solid Collins delegation."

L. H. Bailey wires from Bemidji: "Beltrami county gives Collins 72 delegates out of 96. Convention next Tuesday."

The Collins people are giving much prominence to their claim that they have carried Rice county, the home of Joel P. Heatwole, manager of Dunn's campaign.

CREW PRACTICE LIGHT.

Poughkeepsie, June 27.—All the crews but Wisconsin were on the river today and the practice was light. The Wisconsins and probably all the others will go out again this evening, but the hard practice is now all finished.

WILL WIN COUNTY

So Says the Managers of Campaign of Judge Collins.

Efforts of Willcuts, Getty Clique Are of Strenuous Order.

This column is published today in the interest of the candidacy of Judge L. W. Collins for the Republican nomination for governor of Minnesota, and at the request of that large element of the party in St. Louis county which believes that he is the best man for the state to have as its executive head. The News Tribune, while the organ of the Republican party, is asserted by the Republicans who support Judge Collins, to be so intense in its advocacy of the candidacy of Mr. Dunn, that they cannot hope to get a presentment of their side, except through The Herald.

The active interest which the people of the county who have not been identified with political machines of any kind, are taking in this contest in the interesta of Judge Collins, shows that they are becoming tired of having everything dictated to them from congressional headquarters, by the appointees of the man who represents the district. They tried to dictate to the city voters last February and the result was the loss of the city administration which they had held for ten years.

When the fight began the same old crowd lined, Willcuts, Getty and all of that stripe. They have been getting some jolts of more or less severity in the past two or three years and they hope by carrying Dunn through to again perch themselves on the top wave.

Then there is G. G. Hartley. When was he ever known to work for anything that did not have something substantial in it for G. G. Hartley? And the way he has been legging it for the past few days in interest of Dunn has surpassed any exhibition that he has ever given before. He has been used particularly to pull off those of prominence and influence who were known to have arrayed themselves with the Collins side.

Much has been heard of Dr. Eklund's stand in this campaign. Here is what he says:

"I most emphatically favor Collins for governor. He is a very old resident of the state, with a clean record. He is undoubtedly a fit man for the position.

"There is no doubt in my mind that he will get the nomination. I base this conclusion on reliable reports from close personal friends in the southern part of the state and the Twin Cities, and from my own personal observations. In my judgment he will receive the nomination on the first ballot.

"As Mr. Dunn resides in our district it is but natural for most of the politicians here to favor him, but they do it from the politician's standpoint. Among the business men and common people I find a strong Collins sentiment. I think that he will easily carry this county, although he will not roll up so large a majority here as in certain other parts of the state.

"During the last two weeks the sentiment has changed very much for Collins. There is no doubt that a Collins delegation will be sent from this county.

"Judge Collins has, for a number of years, been an influential man on the supreme bench and in my opinion he will make us a very good governor."

W. W. Billson says: "Of the two candidates, Dunn and Collins, I think Judge Collins is much the better equipped and in every way better qualified man for the position. I have been absent from the state for several weeks and am not posted as to the chances of either of the candidates."

One of Judge Collins' supporters write thus:

"Judge Collins will be nominated for governor next Thursday and St. Louis county Republicans will demonstrate at the primaries this evening that they desire to have a part in the nomination of a winner. The Collins Republicans will elect a good round majority of the delegates in the city and the amalgamated association of political bosses will call in vain for the good Republicans of the range to pull them out of the hole. The true blue Republicans of the ranges have had the short and soiled end of the stick so long under these domineering dictators that they are getting a bit reserved. They are growing somewhat weary of being mere counters when making up the requisition for the appropriation but are never counted in the distribution.

"The News-Tribune is using black type on its editorial page. Whenever it does that things are looking good—for the other fellow. Its coarse allusions to the sturdy and worthy Republicans of this county who choose to differ with it, as to who should be nominated for governor as imbeciles, and its ranting raving that they should be swept from the face of the earth have been making Collins votes in great plenty and therefore no fault should be found from a campaign standpoint.

"We are given that time-tried and thread-bare argument that the Republicans of this district must stand together. These all-wise and know-it-all Republicans have been preaching that doctrine for thirty-years and what have they to show for it? Not a state office, elective or appointive, have they succeeded in getting in all that time.

"Having followed this obsolete political custom for so many years under such great political wisdom, the Republicans of St. Louis county two years ago concluded they would put a candidate in the field for state auditor. Having always stood by the district, the Republicans generally here expected the district to stand by them. Well, some of the counties did. And if they had all done so there would not have been enough. Even one district standing together cannot do much in a state convention. But strange to relate, after twenty years of our standing together, under a wisdom and guidance so marvelous in its results, not all of the district voted for our candidate, and still stranger to relate, one of the counties that did not was Mille Lacs, the county of R. C. Dunn. Another county was Aitkin. It is high time that the great big county of St. Louis should get out in the open. Might it not be as good political sense to form some political friendships in the southern, western and central portions of the state, as it is to stick to the district whose counties very naturally and sensibly assert their political rights without consulting this county?

"The Local Mutual Discredit Association, recently formed, otherwise known as the members of the St. Louis county delegation, has, with a single brave and sensible exception, recently aired themselves in a series of interviews. In common with my fellow Republicans and fellow citizens, I had the thought that we were most excellently represented in the legislature, and we are surprised to find it universally admitted by these gentlemen that they were wholly powerless without Mr. Dunn. With more faith and confidence in them than they seem to have in themselves, the Republicans of St. Louis county continue their confidence and faith, only asking that they be permitted to exercise their individual rights and preferences in the matter of choosing a governor for their state without advice or dictation. St. Louis county cannot undertake to nominate for governor every man who says a good word or does a good thing for it. There are too many of them.

"The News Tribune closes its Sunday morning frantic wail with this sentence: 'St. Louis county has made mistakes in its time, as when our Republican delegation, in the gubernatorial convention in 1896 went down feebly clinging to Judge Collins' coat tails.' This leaves an opening which I shall take advantage of in passing. The same old crowd in the same old stand-by-the-district way were then managing affairs for Judge Collins that are now managing them for Mr. Dunn. With enough of the state now heard from to nominate Judge Collins on the first ballot, it looks as though these seers and sages were tryin. in the same old way, to add one more to their long line of 'mistakes in its time,' and were once more asking the delegation to go 'down clinging feebly,' only this time the coat would be worn by Mr. Dunn."

James A. Martin, chairman of the Collins' state campaign committee this morning wired the local Collins' headquarters as follows:

"Collins now has 503 votes without Hennepin, Ramsey or St. Louis. He will have over 700 votes in the convention."

At the local headquarters telegrams have been received direct from the Collins' managers, which give Collins 378 votes in but twenty-five counties of the state.

Joseph B. Cotton has received a letter from President Roosevelt acknowledging Mr. Cotton's service to the president in seconding his nomination for another term in the White House.

The letter, which was received today by Mr. Cotton, was of the characteristic brevity of the communications of the Rough Rider president, and took only enough verbiage to express the bare fact of the president's appreciation of the kindly office performed by the Duluth delegate.

Mr. Cotton holds the letter at a high valuation, it is understood, and will retain it as a remembrance of a highly interesting event in his career.

LIGHTING OF CANAL PIERS

Belief That Another Night Will See Them Shining.

Plans for improvements amounting to about $25,000 to be put on the government lot on Park Point adjoining the south canal pier, have been forwarded to Washington for approval by the authorities there. Bids will probably be asked for the work about July 10.

The improvements will include a dock for the government boats and the moving of the buildings now occupied by the government at Seventh avenue west and the water front to the new site. Sealed bids for the work will be asked for as soon as the plans are returned to Capt. Potter and the local engineers.

The heavy wire which was needed to arrange the canal piers for lighting arrived in Duluth this morning and a force of men was immediately put to work to install it. It is expected that tomorrow evening all will be done and for the first time Duluth people will see the piers in a blaze of glory. Special effort has been made to have the piers lighted in time for the first trip of the steamer Northwest into Duluth this year. As the big white boat is expected to arrive about 9 o'clock tomorrow evening this will probably be accomplished.

The $30,000 contract for rip rap work on the breakwater at Ashland which A. Donald & Co., a contracting firm of Ashland, has been busy with since last summer, will be finished in a day or two. While the Ashland breakwater will not be in perfect condition on the completion of the job, nothing further can be done by the local engineers until further appropriations for the work are received.

A dredge under contract to the government is now working in the passage into the harbor of Grand Marais, Mich. About 40,000 yards of dirt will be removed from the channel giving it a depth of fully seventeen feet. Inside the harbor there is a natural depth of fifty feet, so the Grand Marais harbor will be one to accommodate vessels of any draft.

The breakwater at Grand Marais has been wrecked pretty badly by the ice during the winter and plans are now waiting aproval in Washington for about $15,000 worth of rip rap work to be done on it during the summer. This work will be very similar to that under way at Ashland.

A PARADISE AT HOME.

While residents of other sections of Minnesota are disputing about the relative merits of their different lakes and fishing resorts, Duluthians are content to keep still about the fact that right at their doors lies one of the finest water expanses in the state and one that is without a peer as a producer of fish.

Minnesota is a land of innumerable lakes and streams, many beautiful and picturesque besides being prolific in fish life, but none excel in natural beauty and grandeur the waters and shores of St. Louis bay and river. At this season of the year the shores and islands of these waters are beautiful beyond compare, while the green-laden hills rising to the south form a panorama of delight.

Here is opportunity for boating, with row boats, launches and larger craft, splendid beaches for bathing with water just properly tempered, while the waters abound with pike, pickerel, rock bass, crappies and other varieties of fish including a few of the gamey black bass. Numerous small streams empty into those waters and in nearly all of them are found the angler's delight, the beautiful speckled trout.

During these June days hundreds of Duluth's citizens take advantage of the opportunities thus afforded them of enjoying the bounties and beauties of nature right at home, where a summer resort has been provided that is not excelled in any particular by any in the country.

Some means should be taken to especially advertise the advantages of this delightful body of water. A knowledge of these spread broadcast ought to draw to Duluth thousands of summer visitors. If the reader has not already seen these things for himself let him go and he will at once become a convert.

THE CHARIVARI UNLAWFUL.

"I told my boy to join in and have a good time," said a fond mother in discussing a recent marriage and its attendant charivari. Perhaps this mother did not know that she was encouraging her boy to violate the law of the state. Not only is it the law, but it is one that is generally sustained by public opinion and should be enforced to the letter. That all good, law-abiding mothers may know the statute in this case, The Herald quotes the exact language:

"If any persons, of the number of three or more, shall assemble at or near any occupied dwelling-house, and shall there make any noise or disturbance, by discharging fire-arms, beating drums, blowing sorns, shouting or by any other means, with intent to annoy any inmate or inmates of such dwelling-house, or to give any inmate or inmates thereof a charivari, commonly called 'horning,' every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail not more than ninety days, or by fine not exceeding $100."

So it will be readily seen the charivari business may be made a serious offense if the victim is at all disposed to make it so. Because they are generally intended as expressions of good will, even if they are noisy and barbaric, the recipients of this sort of attention usually overlook the disturbance and annoyance. Yet the charivari party is not always of that character. Frequently it consists of a mob of young rascals whose only purpose is to hold up a bridegroom for money to buy beer or other refreshments.

Such affairs as these are not only unlawful, but an outrage upon decency and should not be tolerated by the authorities. Surely it is time that the people of Duluth were above giving sanction or approval to such performances.

CONSIDERATE LYNCHERS.

The latest negro lynching, which occurred at Euporia, Miss., yesterday, developed several new features which go to prove that the white people of that community are at least sticklers for the niceties and proprieties.

In the first place these good Christian people chose the Lord's day, no doubt to give emphasis to their strong religious belief and to offer better opportunity for all the people of the district to witness and be warned. Again they chose the public square, probably to give greater emphasis to their great respect for the law and its officers.

While there was a strong sentiment among the "best citizens" composing the mob in favor of burning Dunham at the stake, it appears that the officers in charge of the negro, by using the fine arts of diplomacy, and pointing out what a bad smell the burning flesh would create in the neighborhood, succeeded in prevailing upon the mob to give up this intention, but only after the officers had considerately agreed to avoid any unpleasantness by delivering over the negro on Sunday morning.

How orderly and cool were all the parleys and calculations. There was none of your fiery anger which prompts men to take the law into their own hands at sight of the supposedly guilty wretch. Oh, no. They could wait and do things right—and they did.

Although the suspect stoutly denied to the very end that he had ever seen the victim of the alleged outrage, Miss Wilson positively identified him as the man, and that was sufficient. There was no chance for error, of course; no chance of a mistake in identification; no need of a trial. A woman had been outraged, and a negro had to be lynched; it did not make much difference what one. If it should turn out later that it was the wrong one then they could hang the other.

The suspect was placed astride a black horse, and promptly at a given signal from the calm and composed leader of this gathering, the young lady victim led the horse from beneath Dunham and left him dangling at the end of the rope until life was extinct.

There was, indeed, exact and poetic justice in that arrangement. It not only shows that the men of Mississippi will protect their wives and daughters from negro rape fiends, but it shows the beautiful and noble character of the woman, in protection of whose honor and virtue they stood ready to sacrifice their lives if need be. It also bears witness to the weight of the argument usually employed in justification of lynch law that it is not right to bring a modest woman victim before a court to be gazed at while she is giving her testimony. No doubt when Miss Wilson was identifying Dunham, every chivalrous man in the mob turned his back that he might not witness her mortification and shame. Miss Wilson was considerately permitted to place the noose around the victim's neck as a further exemplification of her beautiful and lovable character.

While Governor Vardaman of Mississippi in his message to the legislature, declared that every negro should be protected in his right to fair and legal trial, no doubt he will be gratified to overlook this little violation of his instructions because of the fact that all the proprieties were so nicely and particularly observed. It was perhaps due to the same feeling that he did not take steps to protect the negro after the mob had concluded its preliminary negotiations with the officers. It is also probable that the governor will just naturally forget about causing any investigation of the affair to be made.

MINDING EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS.

No stronger arraignment of President Roosevelt's recent Cuban letter has been found than that contained in the Mississippi Democratic platform published elsewhere on this page. As this document closely coincides with views recently expressed by Congressman John Sharp Williams, it is fair to infer that he was the author of this plank in that document.

The purpose of the plank is to show that no president of this republic understood the Monroe doctrine to mean that it was the duty of the United States to guard the morals of other nations on the Western hemisphere. President Monroe did not so intend it when it was promulgated and neither has it been so interpreted by Jefferson, Madison, Jackson, Grant, Cleveland, nor any other president since Monroe's time.

The Roosevelt doctrine is entirely new and totally different, but it follows as a natural result of the imperialistic policy of the Republican party as exemplified in the Philippines and Porto Rico. If this country can first purchase the land and conquer the inhabitants of a territory by force of arms and then govern them against their will, why is it not equally justified in regulating the internal affairs of other nations which may be too weak to make effective protest? One policy is no worse than the other. Both are off the same piece.

A "PERFECT GENTLEMAN."

Perdicaris, the alleged American citizen, has been released by Raisuli, the alleged Moorish bandit. The Herald does not use the word "alleged" in this instance because it fears a libel suit, but because it believes that when Perdicaris assumes to be an American and when Raisuli assumes to be a genuine bandit it is largely a matter of make believe and opera bouffe in both instances.

Some days ago there was reproduced in this column the substance of a letter written by a Moorish gentleman to a New York paper in which it was shown that Raisuli was really in partnership with certain European powers which desired to fasten their claws upon the Morocco sultan's realm and that an alleged American citizen was the victim of Raisuli's great kidnaping exploit in order that the United States might have excuse for assisting said European powers in pulling their chestnuts out of the fire.

An interview with Perdicaris since his release practically confirms this conclusion.

Raisuli daily held long conversations with the prisoners. He said anarchy was reigning in the country. The animosity of the people, he said, was not directed against the sultan, but against his governors. Raisuli said he bore no ill will toward Europeans, but stated that the only way to bring the Moorish government to its senses was by capturing Europeans until the foreign powers awaken to a realization of the existing conditions.

Mr. Perdicaris said that Raisuli is posing as a patriot, who wants to see the country happy and peaceful and he is offering to accept the responsibility for maintaining the country from Tangier to Fez and clear it of robbery and crime, if he is backed up by the powers. He found in Raisuli an educated and intellectual man.

So we see that Mr. Raisuli is a gentleman who abducted an alleged American so that the United States government might assist him in compelling the sultan of Morocco to give up a large part of his territory to the government of Mr. Raisuli, who hopes to be assisted by the European powers in maintaining a happy and peaceful country. No wonder Mr. Perdicaris concluded that his captor was a "perfect gentleman." It is the "perfect gentlemen" of the United States who insist on holding up the people and taking the government into their own hands. But instead of resorting to kidnaping to gain their ends they make an illegal contract with the railroads and then bribe legislators, congressmen and other officials to see that the law is not enforced. The American plan is better than the Moorish because there is less of the element of personal danger, but both appear to be eminently successful.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

Speaking of the advocates of tariff reduction an esteemed exchange says: "It is noticeable that these Republicans that are smarter than the Republican party, are generally nine-spots." Then there are 35,000 nine-spot business men and manufacturers in Massachusetts.

* * *

The Herald would commend the suggestion of P. M. Shaw, Jr., that the washing of Superior street be done in the early morning hours, instead of in the evening as at present.

* * *

That decisive action in the far East has been a long time coming, but it serves as a splendid substitute for war news when there isn't any.

* * *

The Republican platform assertion that the tariff should be sufficient to cover the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad would be all right if the protection hogs were not always permitted to figure up the difference. The present Dingley tariff puts a heavy duty on articles that can be produced much cheaper in the United States than in any other country on earth.

Congress was adjourned several weeks ago. But the Congressional Record still comes to hand freighted with Republican campaign speeches and documents. The people pay the cost.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Do you thik it is a foregone conclusion that Roosevelt is going to serve in the president's chair for four more years?"

The question was asked J. F. Durham, former editor of the News Tribune, who is here representing the Maude Adams company.

"I am not so sure about that," replied Mr. Durham. "The fact of the matter is, as near as I can determine from what I have heard in the different places I have visited throughout the United States, that the Democrats might have a very good opportunity if they chose to take advantage of it.

"It all depends, however, on what action they take at St. Louis. Wise action there might result, I believe, in a surprise at the next election. The president is not particularly strong in the East, although he has a very solid following in the West. The people of the West seem to think he is all right, but the Eastern people do not hold him quite so much of a favorite.

"The East, particularly Wall street, does not care for Roosevelt because they take him to be a trust buster. The Democrats have a large assortment of candidates to select from, if they choose to take advantage of the opportunity. For my part, I would favor Arthur Pue Gorman, of Maryland, a present United States senator, for the Democratic nomination at St. Louis.

"There is strong talk, of course, for Parker, but just how that question will be determined at St. Louis is a problem that no man can well determine in advance. But there is no doubt that Judge Parker is a man of considerable strength. His weakness is his strength."

"How do you make that out?"

"Well, Judge Parker is not known and he is saying nothing. He has not a political record like most of the other men you hear of, and the very fact that he is not so well known, I believe is in his favor. He is saying nothing so that you cannot count either his statements or his record against him, unless one wants to consider his lack of record and lack of volubility as against him."

"It isn't often that a fellow runs across as soft a snap in a bar room as I did down to Sault Ste. Marie a few nights ago," said a traveling man the other day. "We fellows that had gone to make the town found things quiet, because the Clergue interests have not quite gotten back to their old-time form yet and there is not much business doing in general anyway. So a bunch of us that were over on the American side decided to take in the Canadian town and see what the place looked like."

"Don't you usually go to the Canadian side when you're down there?"

"Don't we? Certainly we do. But we had not been there for several weeks and we did not know but what somebody had painted a new sign or a new girl had come to town or something of that kind, since our last visit, and you know, when we traveling men have the time, we hate to miss anything of that kind.

"So we took the ferry over and after we had paraded up and down the main street some one of the boys suggested that we go have a drink. It was beginning to rain, anyway, and made walking disagreeable, as we had no umbrellas or mackintoshes. Well, the traveling man is usually willing to get wet inwardly when he is averse to the outward dampness, so we went into the hotel which is near the ferry and took seats at a table in a little back room.

"All the fellows ordered whisky with some seltzer on the side. The boy that brought the drinks took the money and left the whisky bottle and seltzer bottle on the table and we had a drink. The boy had been paid for one round of drinks and had left the room.

"We had several drinks out of that whisky bottle, and in fact, we did not let up on the corn juice until all the seltzer was gone, and then somebody ordered another drink and the boy had to bring in a new bottle of whisky and a full bottle of seltzer. The drink was paid for and he went out, leaving the bottes as before.

"Well sir, we sat there for over two hours and had all the drinks we could use without getting past the navigating stage, and only paid for two drinks. Maybe the charge at the bar is only one drink per hour. And it was Canadian whisky, delightful stuff. Drinks of it were only ten cents a piece, too, and they are about twice that on this side, where you only get as many as you pay for in the bargain.

"I am going to make the Sault oftener hereafter. I have been going there for six years and never discovered that place until the other day, so that I feel that I will have to work hard to make up for all the time that I have lost on the issue. I started to figure up how much money I had lost by not buying all the drinks that I could in the various visits I have made there. Visiting there four times a year for six years is twenty-four visits and at six drinks a visit, it would have made 144, I think that six drinks there would cost about 20 cents against $1.20 on this side. That's $23.80 that I'm out."

The President's Slip.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

New York World: Considered, however, merely from the point of view of the stand-pat-let-well-enough-alone Republicans the platform leaves nothing to be desired. To people who paraphrase Napoleon's maxim and insist that time and the Republican party can accomplish everything this is an ideal platform, because it leaves everything to time and the party. Everywhere between planks is this admonition: "Don't bother your blessed heads about anything. We have already solved all the political problems there are to solve; but if any have been overlooked we can be depended upon to solve them as they ought to be solved." McKinley's admonition that "we must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing" made no appeal to the convention. McKinley was long ago out-McKinleyed by his party. If he were alive he could have had no standing in the Chicago convention. Possibly he would have been denounced as a free-trader—a Cobdenite at the very least. The thing to do is to stand pat and fry the fat.

New York Sun: On the steadfast maintenance of the gold standard, the Republican platform rings true. No party can say less and deserve to live.—On protection, the platform is adroitly drawn so as to permit almost anything in the way of revision to meet changed conditions, so long as Republicans do the revising. On the policy of reciprocity the platform displays much less earnestness than President McKinley showed in the last of his lifetime. The reciprocity resolution is vague and practically meaningless. It is less definite than the corresponding plank of four years ago. On running amuck, the platform says that the anti-trust laws have been "fearlessly" enforced. It does not say that they have been evenly or impartially enforced, or that they will be.

Pittsburg Dispatch: The anxious dissenter may discover that the tariff announcement does not declare that inequalities now exist, that readjustment is now necessary, but it contains the more important pledge that when examination corroborates such claims alteration will follow. As to the trusts no additional plank is inserted. The aggressive work of the president in executing the laws of the past and those of more recent enactments stands as the pledge of party attitude and treatment. No promise is made as to the policy in the colonial dependencies, but reliance is had upon a recital of the steady progress made toward giving the Philippines self-government.

St. Joseph (Mo.) News and Press: "We" and "our" are used unsparingly in the platform, and to every possible advantage, and always proudly. When you see "they" you know the knife was out, and you can almost imagine Mr. Roosevelt gnashing his teeth. The doctrine of humility was on a vacation when the platform was written, and the mote in the mule's eye seemed as big as the elephant's ear. But such are political platforms. They are made for the masses and are to be swallowed in faith.

Toronto Star: So far, the reciprocity plank in the Republican platform has not caused any United States factories to close down under the stress of wild alarm.

Grand Forks Herald: The tariff declaration of the convention is about all that was expected. It is the result of grudging compromise on both sides, and will be perfectly satisfactory to neither. The "stand patters" were in control, and in the main the plank represents their views. The situation is left unchanged, and those who believe in the revision of the tariff will continue to work for that end, while their opponents will strive to raise instead of lowering duties.

Detroit Tribune: After eulogizing the president and taking credit to the party for the achievements of the passing administration, but without referring to the merger suit or the anthracite case, the platform makes promises of future action on tariff, trusts and subsidies that give every assurance of inactivity.

But President Roosevelt is his own platform. He has demonstrated his ability to strike a popular chord whether the party platform was strung in harmony or not. No platform planks trammeled him in his acquisition of the Panama strip, in his prosecution of a merger suit, in his interference in the anthracite strike, in his rebuke of importunate congressmen, nor in his efforts for Cuban reciprocity. Any platform which the Chicago convention might ratify could not by any inebrity of logic be viewed as representing the wishes of the rank and file of the party.

Louisville Courier-Journal: "We" have done this; "we" have done that; "we" have done everything that was worth doing; "we" have done nothing that should not have been done. In short, "we" are "it." It is such stuff as this that makes partisan politics ridiculous and sickens intelligent men with partisan pretensions. "We" found the country in "evil plight;" "public credit had been lowered" and "the standard of values was threatened," but we are careful to say nothing of the fact that this was the result of a monetary law which "we" ourselves had passed. "We" worked miracles with "a consistent protective tariff," discussed further on this page. "We refused to palter longer with the miseries of Cuba," because the Democrats hurried us to arms. "We fought a quick and victorious war with Spain." "We set Cuba free," and so on, and son on, we, we, we!

Buffalo Express: The platform closes with a statement of the public record and character of President Roosevelt. It is he, more than any other one man, who has made the record of the Republican party during the last three years. He is the central figure who typifies its best purposes and its aspirations at the present time. He is a platform in himself.

THE DULUTH CONVENTION.

St. Paul Globe: Often we see victory wrested from defeat, but seldom is real harmony born of discord. This is what happened at Duluth. Out of the clash and clamor of opposing wills there was developed a unity of thought and wish of purpose that solidifies the Democratic party of Minnesota today as it has not been for years past. Most of all is this due to the leadership of men like John Lind and C. D. O'Brien, and to the transparent honesty and sincerity behind their appeals that drove their counsels home. The instant and irresistible response to this will make make the late convention memorable and makes every man who saw it glad and proud that he is a Democrat.

Red Wing Republican: The Minnesota Democratic convention indorsed the leadership of Bryan and declined to instruct for Hearst—something of a compromise between the radical and conservative elements of the party, although it is not clearly apparent that the conservatives got much by the compromise.

Goodhue County News: Such a mixupness. But it was Democratic from way back. For fear they might be listed with the reorganizers, the Democratic convention elected Maj. Bowler chairman in the Duluth convention, and then when Bowler had clinched his victory by judicious revision of the roll, the same convention turned round and defeated the delates who were to have been sequel of his choice. Half the members had been calling the best Democrats in the state reorganizers all afternoon, yet the triumphing faction took pleasure in submitting as their own resolution the resolution prepared by the defeated Hearst contingent, an almost literal copy of Bryan's Nebraska platform. If anyone thinks the Democrats of Minnesota care more for success than for principle he must start another reckoning. The convention was almost on the point of voting that any man who showed promise of being elected should be exterminated on the spot. There was not one weak-kneed Democrat in that congregation of one thousand of the unterrified.

Mankato Free Press: The roll call was sounded in the Democratic convention at Duluth. Harmony was there—"nit."

Little Falls Herald: Against great odds, with not a paper in the larger cities in their favor, with every possible thing done against them, the Hearst forces of the state secured 11, and possibly 12, of the 22 delegates to the national convention. That the result was not all that was desired is admitted. Congressman John Lind made a personal appeal to delegates in the hotel lobby, in his room and in the convention. With his eminent services of the past in memory, it was hard for many of the delegates to turn down Mr. Lind, and his success pulled through Mr. Rosing and Mr. OBrien. Congressman Lind's personality saved the day for him, and not his opinions.

Two Harbors News: It might go on record that the anti-Hearst element in the state convention won the pole and the other fellows caught the persimmons.

Pine City Pine Poker: Well, the veil is lifting, the dawn is coming, and the Democrats, paired by some cases, regret fully as others, but surely all, are turning to the light. The light is—political sanity. That is all the so-called anti-Hearst people in the convention advocated, that is all they strove for, that is all that they partially won. The Democratic delegation goes to St. Louis uninstructed, ready to confer with the Democrats of the nation, able to cooperate with the best and soundest for the interests of the party and in the hope of assisting in naming a candidate who may lead the party to victory. The work of the convention was well done, and all honor to those true and tried Democrats. John Lind, T. D. O'Brien, L. A. Rosing and a host of others, who, without bandying epithets or calling names, led the delegates to safe and broad ground.

Little Falls Transcript: If that Duluth convention was a Republican one, it would be claimed that John Lind "bossed" it. He certainly corrected their views as to where they were at.

ROOSEVELT'S BIG STICK.

Mississippi Democratic Platform: The Democracy of Mississippi favors the maintenance of the Monroe doctrine in its full integrity as conceived by Jefferson, announced by Monroe and signally executed by Grant. In this connection we think it our duty to guard from European oppression and colonization and from European super-imposition of monarchial institutions the countries and the Western hemisphere; but we do not think it our duty, nor did Jefferson, Madison, Monroe or Jackson imagine it our duty, under the Monroe doctrine, as the acting president of the United States seems to conceive it to be, to administer the affairs of Central and South America.

We believe that the utterances of the acting president of the United States, in his letter to ex-Secretary Root upon the second anniversary of Cuban independence, in which he intimated that we were, as a government, in some way God's vicegerent to correct and control those who "do not conduct themselves well," and those who "do not know how to act with decency in industrial and political matters," and those who "do not keep order," and those who "do not pay their obligations," would have been reckless and unwise, even if they had emanated from a private American citizen, but coming as one acting as chief magistrate of the American republic they are reprehensible in a yet higher degree. His yet more reckless assertion that we have a "duty" in the Western hemisphere which "we cannot ignore," to intervene governmentally wherever "there is brutal wrong-doing, or impotence which results in a general loosening of the ties of civilized society" meets with our earnest disapprobation. Such a position would be in itself a "general loosening" of those "ties of civilized society" which bind the nations in times of peace, at least, in a common brotherhood. We especially resent the doctrine which was not born of Mr. Monroe, but was born of Mr. Roosevelt, that it is, or can be, the duty of the United States to convert its army and navy into a constabulary for the purpose of collecting debts due by Central and South American nations to European countries, or even to the citizens of the American republic. If imprisonment of individual debtors be wrong and barbarous, then surely the bombardment of cities, inhabited by individuals, for the purpose of collecting government or individual debts, is still more wrong and barbarous. Commercialism, when taking its chance in countries with unstable governments, does so with its eyes open and generally fixes for itself a profit proportionate to the risk, the chief risk being indeed these same unstable political institutions and irresponsible local governments. If it chooses to make for itself that sort of a bed, let it lie in it. When the acting president says concerning our dealings with other nations, "all that we ask is that they govern themselves well and be prosperous and orderly. Where this is the case they will find helpfulness from us," we answer that we are not the guardians of the prosperity and domestic order of other peoples, and that so long as they neither directly nor indirectly injure us, nor by their conduct drag us into international entanglements of their own creating, we have no more to do with the internal administration of their affairs than they have to do with that of ours.

"I never was more imposed on in my life," answered Col. Stillwell, of Kentucky. "They told me Philadelphia was famous for its mint, and all they showed me was a place where they make money."

THE GRADUATE.

Red Oak Express: "Having hitched their wagons to a star, a number of high school graduates will now attempt to secure situations driving grocery wagons," says the Register and Leader. That's just the thing to do, Mr. Graduate, and don't you hesitate one minute because some shallow-minded individual may poke fun at you. Better be a No. 1 man with a No. 6 job than vice versa. If you are too big for the place let your employer be the first to mention it, and rest assured he will, if you give him the chance. A Red Oak business man said only the other day, "I find that the thoroughly reliable boy or young man is one of the scarcest articles on the market today. It is almost impossible to find a young man that you can depend upon at all times and under all circumstances." Business men everywhere realize the truth of the above statement, and the thoroughly reliable boy is spotted just as soon as he earns that reputation. Let the high school graduate begin work, it matters not about the nature of the employment, with a little idea in his head that he is going to do no more than he is paid for, and he will slide down the famous ladder of success faster than he crawls up. The notably successful men are the ones who do more than they are paid for. The successful business men will tell you that the most successful training he received was while at the foot of the ladder, while he was driving the delivery wagon.

What She Would Have Lost.

Detroit Tribune: A class of Normal school girls were asked to pretend for one day that they did not know how to read, in order to bring home to them the importance of reading in education. They were asked to make a list of the things that they would have been prevented from doing, during that day, if they had not the ability to read. The lists were read in class the next afternoon. Some very properly said that they could not have learned their lessons for the next day, could not have read the papers to find out the hour for the musicale the night before, could not have read the catalogue to find out what the pictures were at the art exhibition, etc. But the eternal feminine finally cropped out in one list which concluded with: "I could not have read the sign in M. & G.'s store saying that they were holding a bargain sale in shirt waists and would have missed buying a dandy at a very low price."

IMPORTANT RULING

Ramsey County Attorney Decides Point As To County Roads.

Says Townships, Not Commissioners, Have the Spending of Money.

County Attorney Kane of Ramsey county has made a ruling which will completely alter the system of managing country road improvement in that county and will rob the county commissioners of their former control of contracts and expenditures and place it in the hands of the township organizations in various parts of the county. As the method of handling county road improvement in this county is similar to that in vogue in Ramsey county much interest will be taken in the decision by Duluth people.

The ruling of County Attorney Kane, which was made after a thorough study of the law on the subject, places both road and bridge funds in the hands of the township authorities and removes the county commissioners from any possibility of dickerings with contractors. The only vestige of the former power of the commissioners that will be retained, is the right to divide up the county's road fund among the various townships. The commissioners will have nothing to say about the manner in which the work is done, nor by whom it is done.

Mr. Kane's decision came as an entire surprise to the Ramsey county board, but it is expected that at the meeting which will be held in St. Paul today the members will agree to the new system and it will be put into immediate operation.

Under the new system jobs of less than $500 will be carried on under the direction of the town board and contracts which will exceed that amount must be let to the lowest bidder under the sealed bid system. The town treasurer will in each case have to give a bond for the satisfactory performance of the work. The duties and powers of the commissioners will end when they have handed the township officials a warrant for the amount of the work which will be endorsed by the county auditor and made payable to the town treasury.

Under the former system the county road fund was apportioned among the county commissioners, each receiving the portion required for the work to be done within the boundaries of his district. He then could let the contracts and himself supervise the work. This is the system now used in St. Louis county.

St. Paul people expect that the new system will result in the betterment of the roads throughout the county and at the same time will cause an appreciable diminution in the amount of the appropriations used.

In regard to the results of the sytem which his decision will introduce, Mr. Kane said:

"I believe it will result in better roads and an expenditure of much less money. If the commissioners are not permitted to supervise the work and employ the workmen, they will be more careful in making appropriations, and the town boards, working under a bond and on roads in which they are personally interested, are sure to do better work."

The St. Paul attorney is confident of the legal basis of his reform and if he proves his case when it is put to test his new ruling may have great influence on the county road system of other counties throughout the state.

xPrimaries will be held Monday in these counties.

a Two sets of primaries at Cass and Roseau.

DUNN NOT SURPRISED.

"I am not surprised at the favorable results of the Republican primaries, as shown in the returns,' said Hon. R. C. Dunn last evening. "It is what I confidently expected. I stand by the prediction I made, that I would receive enough votes in the counties outside of Ramsey and Hennepin, to nominate me, I am sure of carrying both those counties, but will have enough delegates with both or either. With one or the other, or both, my nomination on the first ballot will be clinched. I feel absolutely confident and serene as to the result of the convention. My friends will insist upon and secure fair dealing in the convention, and they, as well as I, will abide by the decision.'"

At Dunn headquarters yesterday it was stated that the returns from the caucuses already held, as published in the Pioneer Press, were sustained and confirmed by the reports received up to last night. Substantial gains over the Dunn estimates were shown in several counties, notably in Chisago, Yellow Medicine, Becker, Blue Earth, Cass, Meeker and several other counties. It was conceded that Rice county is still in doubt with the chances in favor of Collins having a majority of the delegates, seventeen in number, and that Wadena has probably gone to Collins with its nine delegates.

Of the counties which will hold their caucuses today, Dunn claims as follows: Big Stone, 9; Clearwater, 6; Dakota, 13; Dodge, 5½; Freeborn, 12; Hennepin, 113; Isanti, 1; Kanabec, 8; Lyon, 12; Murray, 10; Ramsey, 67; St. Louis, 40; Sibley, 12; Washington, 17; total, 335.

In Wantonwan, Lac Qui Parle and Steele counties the Dunn managers claim to have a fighting chance to carry them. They have a total of thirty-six delegates.

The Dunn people concede to Judge Collins: Rock, Pipestone and Nobles, and a part of Stevens and Lac Qui Parle counties.

THE COLLINS CLAIMS.

James A. Martin yesterday gave out the following statement:

Everybody knows that the Pioneer Press' statement of 462 for Dunn is willful misrepresentation and that the following counties included in this statement, are for Judge Collins: Becker, 12; Betrami, 10; Benton, 8; Brown, 6; Chipewa, 11; Cottonwood, 10; Ottertail, 19; Redwood, 14; Renville, 16; Rice, 17; Sherburne, 9; Traverse, 8; Wabasha, 13; Wadena, 9; total, 162.

In addition to the foregoing it is only proper to deduct from that statement the following additional counties which are known to be in doubt: Anoka, 11; Chicago, 9; Hubbard, 9; Red Lake, 8; Wilkin, 8; total 43.

Taking from said statement the counties that are known to be for Judge Collins—162—and add to this one-half of the delegates that are in doubt, as above stated, there should be deducted from Mr. Dunn's statement at least 185 delegates. This would leave Mr. Dunn in the counties so far heard from 277 delegates. Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis have 220 delegates. You might add all of these to what Mr. Dunn now has and he would come into the convention with only 497 delegates, and it is necessary to have 588 to nominate. It will be readily seen that he would still be short 91 delegates. The following counties outside of Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis are to caucus today: Big Stone, 9; Clearwater, 5; Dakota, 13; Dodge, 11; Freeborn, 17; Isanti, 11; Kanabec, 8; Lac qui Parle, 13; Lyon, 12; Murray, 10; Pipestone, 9; Rock, 10; Sibley, 12; Steele, 12; Stevens, 9; Washington, 17; Watonwan, 11; Wright, 14. Total 203.

From this list Mr. Dunn cannot expect, by any manner of means, to carry more than the following counties: Dakota, 13; Isanti, 11; Kanabec, 8; Lyon, 12; Murray, 10; Sibley, 12; Washington, 17. Total 83.

Under the most favorable circumstances he would, therefore, get 83 votes from these counties, and it will be readily understood that he is still short of enough votes to nominate him, even if he should carry Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis, which he must concede as impossible.

Outside of the three large counties of Hennepin, Ramsey and St. Louis, upon returns received from counties which have already held caucuses and from information at hand we make the following claim and the same is in no sense exaggerated:

TAMMANY GOES TO FIGHT

Murphy, Towne and Others Leave New York on Thursday.

New York, June 27.—Charles P. Murphy has given out word that Tammany is going to St. Louis to fight. This is the staff he will take with him to the convention city, leaving here Thursday: Charles A. Towne, Bourke Cockran, Victor J. Dowling, Bird S. Coler, Police Commissioner William McAdoo, Thos. F. Grady, J. Sergeant Cram and John J. Delaney.

The Tammany delegation will make strong efforts to convince the delegates that Judge Parker cannot carry New York, and that his nomination means the splitting of New York Democrats into factions. It was with the understanding that Tammany would follow this line of policy that Senator Gorman returned home. As to whether they can convert anybody, the braves seem to have much doubt. Charles A. Towne said last night:

"There is a disposition on the part of certain Democrats to barter away the dignity and moral position of the Democratic party on vital principles involved in this campaign, and that will not be quietly consented to at St. Louis. If we fail to take a position that meets with the approval of the heart and conscience of the people, we might as well not put out a ticket. We can't throw away our position in order to collect campaign funds."

Elliot Danforth, who has been in consultation with David B. Hill for the past few days, declared last night that Parker would be nominated on the second ballot.

"The trend of recent events in politics is all in Judge Parker's favor," he said. "It means clear sailing for him. Those who are complaining of Judge Parker's silence will have nothing to complain of after he is nominated. Those who know him understand that he is sound on all essentials of Democracy."

It is known that in saying Judge Parker will be nominated on the second ballot Mr. Danforth is reflecting the views of David B. Hill, William F. Sheehan, August Belmont and other well informed leaders interested in Judge Parker's canvass. They feel confident that Judge Parker will have about 620 votes on the second ballot, enough to give him the nomination.

The anti-Parker men freely admitted today that Judge Parker had a majority of the convention. They denied, however, that a majority of the convention would favor a safe, conservative platform.

GORMAN AND TOWNE.

Washington, June 27.—"Gorman and Towne." This was the order quietly passed to the faithful on Mr. Gorman's return from New York, where he was so long in conference with the leaders of the opposition to Judge Parker's nomination, and it is have this ticket named that the anti-Parker coalition is working so tirelessly and persistently.

The Gorman-Guffey-Hearst-Tammany combination was formed primarily to prevent the nomination of Parker, and secondly to unite on a ticket which would be acceptable in every respect to the leaders of the movement. It has been found expedient to modify the original plan in one important particular. As a result of the numerous and protracted conferces between these past masters of political cunning, it was decided to select a ticket on which all opponents to Hill and his nominee could and would agree, and at the proper time swing to Gorman all the votes controlled by the combination.

The strength of the coalition is recognized by the Parker boomers as formidable, aggressive and dangerous.

THE STORY OF PERDICARIS

Tangier, June 27.—Ion Perdicaris, the American who last week was released by the brigand Raisuli, gave an interview to the Associated Press, descriptive of the circumstances of his capture and of his experience while a prisoner in Raisuli's camp.

He says that the night of May 18 he had just entered the drawing room after dinner, and, hearing a noise among the servants, he and Cromwell Varley, the British subject, who also was captured by Raisuli, went out to investigate the cause. They were immediately surrounded by armed Moors, who bound and maltreated them. Varley resisted, and was struck on the head with the butt of a rifle, and a knife was slashed across his hands, making a serious wound.

At first it was thought Varley's skull had been fractured.

Perdicaris and Varley were then carried away on horseback. They were bound with ropes and roundabout roads were taken in order to avoid villages. The bandits stopped at Tsarradent, twenty-four hours from Tangier, and Raisuli allowed Perdicaris to write to his wife next morning, and also to the shereef of Wazan, asking them to intervene for himself and Varley.

At Tazardan the captives lived in a filthy hut. They were not allowed to go 100 yards away from it, and were strongly guarded. When the shereef of Wazan arrived a big tent was placed at the disposal of the prisoners, and in other ways the shereef was the means of alleviating their condition to a considerable extent. The attitude of the Moors changed from insult to fair treatment.

Spies of the pretender, who were in the camp all the time, tried to induce Varley to accept a post under the pretender.

Raisuli daily held long conversations with the prisoners. He said anarchy was reigning in the country. The animosity of the people, he said, was not directed against the sultan, but against his governors.

Raisuli's father, Perdicaris said, left him much property and cattle, which aroused the animosity of the Kaids, who induced the Bashaw by presents to rob Raisuli of his belongings, and finally to imprison him for four years at Mogador. On his release Raisuli interviewed Mohammed El Torres, representative of the sultan at Tangier, concerning the restitution of his property, and this being without avail, Raisuli swore to take the law into his hands, with the result already known. Raisuli said he bore no ill will toward Europeans, but stated that the only way to bring the Moorish government to its senses was by capturing Europeans, until the foreign powers awaken to a realization of the existing conditions.

Mr. Perdicaris said that Raisuli is posing as a patriot, who wants to see the country happy and peaceful, and he is offering to accept the responsibility for maintaining the country from Tangier to Fez, and clear it of robbery and crime, if he is backed by the powers. He found in Raisuli an educated and intellectual man.

The only time the prisoners were anxious was during the last two days when they were at Barabin, the village of Zelal, the governor of the Beni Mh-Sara tribe. When the exchange occurred over three hours was lost in the exchange of compliments, Raisuli refusing to talk business until the last moment, growing very suspicious of an attempt to capture him. When he received the money and the men turned over to him by the ransom party, he hurried away toward his village.

Perdicaris and Varley immediately mounted their horses and proceeded for Tangier, a journey of sixteen hours.

CASS LAKE FIREMEN

Won Hose Wet Test at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Minn., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The races of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association closed with the association hose wet test. This race was won by the Cass Lake department—time, 31 seconds; Nashwauk was second, 31 2-5; Park Rapids third, 34. The hub-and-hub race, run the first event of the forenoon, resulted in Park Rapids securing first place—time 24 2-5 seconds; Nashwauk and Eveleth tied for second, time, 24 3-5—divided second and third money. The firemen's foot race resulted in one of the fastest events of the kind ever run by the association. In spite of a soft track and a large number of entries—twenty-one—O. H. Griggs, running with the Eveleth team, run the 100 yards in 10 and 2-5 seconds; G. D. Haley, of Eveleth, was second, and R. F. Schumaker, of Cass Lake, was third. Griggs was the champion 100-yard runner for the U. of M. during the past year. The flag race resulted in a victory for Nashwauk, Eveleth second. When the races were concluded, a meeting was held in the village hall, where a resolution was introduced by Rutledge, of Cass Lake, on behalf of the visiting firemen, thanking the citizens of Grand Rapids for the very hospitable manner in which the visitors had been treated.

MOTHER KILLS HER CHILDREN

To Avoid Starvation—Ends Her Life With Them.

Chicago, June 27.—Threatened with starvation and with her husband hopelessly insane in the asylum at Kankakee, Mrs. Anna Kelsdzick gave up the struggle for existence, killed her three small children and then ended her own life. Gas was the means of destruction that she adopted and when the bodies were found early yesterday, all four had been dead several hours. The family lived in three small rooms at 965 North Robie street and yesterday a constable was to eject the mother and her babies from the premises for the non-payment of rent. It was after Mrs. Kelsdzick had been served with a summons to appear in court that she decided to end the lives of herself and little ones. The three children, Bruno, Herman and Walter, aged 7, 5 and 2 years, respectively, were found in bed locked in each other's arms. The mother's lifeless body was found lying on the kitchen floor, while gas was escaping from a jet in the room. That the woman made every precaution to do away with herself and children was evident. She first wrote and sealed a letter addressed to a relative in Germany. Then she bathed herself and donned clean linen. Each child had also been given a bath, clean night gowns placed upon them and the little ones sent to the sleep from which they will never awaken.

Several months ago Kelsdzick, who was out of work at the time, became insane from brooding over his troubles and was sent to the asylum. Since that time the mother, who was in poor health, has had a hard struggle for existence. Last week she became so ill that she was unable to work any more and had spent her last dollar for food for herself and the children Saturday afternoon. With the ejectment from her home staring her in the face and with no money in her possession to procure another, Mrs. Kelsdzick took the lives of her babies and her own to end her troubles.

AUTO STRUCK BY CAR; OCCUPANTS KILLED.

Chicago, June 27.—While crossing the tracks of the Aurora, Elgin & Chicago electric railroad in Austin, yesterday in an automobile, George E. Dixon, head of the George E. Dixon company, manufacturers of heating apparatus, and his wife, were killed in a collision with an electric car. Mr. Dixon's death was instantaneous. Mrs. Dixon lived about five minutes after the accident. Her body was partly burned by the gasolene that escaped from the automobile and caught fire.

At the point where the accident occurred there is a sharp bend in the road and the occupants undoubtedly did not notice the approaching electric car until it was too late to avoid the collision.

KILLED BY A STREET CAR.

St. Paul, June 27.—James Neff, an old farmer residing on a small farm just east of St. Paul, was struck by a car at the corner of University and Lynnhurst avenues here yesterday and instantly killed. Mrs. Neff was attempting to cross the street in front of a rapidly moving car. The old gentleman attempted to push her across the track, but before he could do so they were both knocked down. Mrs. Neff sustained serious injuries.

FEDERAL TERM

Court Will Open July 12 and Calendar Closes July 4.

Usual Number of Indian Liquor Cases—Civil Calendar.

The next general term of federal court will open at Duluth Tuesday, July 12, two weeks from tomorrow, and litigants are now entering appearance for trials of their cases at that session. July 4 is the last day on which filings can be made for the July term.

It is expected that the next term will extentd over a period of at least four weeks. In addition to the new cases coming in, there are a great many actions continued over from the last October session. Among the criminal cases to be heard are, as usual, several against persons charged with selling liquor to Indians on Northern Minnesota Indian reservations.

The changing of time for terms of court in this district gives Duluth two sittings of the general term, the same as before, but instead of holding the first general term of the year in May, as formerly, it will hereafter be held in July. Since Judge Page Morris was appointed resident judge, court is practically in session here the year round, except during his absence from the city. Except for these occasional absences, motions and arguments may be heard in chambers at any time.

Probably the case on the July calendar having the largest amount of money directly involved will be that of Alphonzo B. Bowers against the Lake Superior Contracting and Dredging company, in which judgment for $38,500 is sought.

Bowers alleges that he is the owner of letters patent on certain dredging apparatus, and that he holds a contract with the defendant company for its use on the dredges West Superior and Northwestern. According to the terms of the contract, Bowers claims royalties were to be paid for the use of his patented machinery. The original contract was made with Charles S. Barker, and at his death the agreement passed into the hands of the dredging company.

J. H. Miller and H. G. Gearhart are attorneys for the plaintiff, and Davis & Hollister represent the defendant company.

FIVE DROWNED

By Overturning of Yacht In East River.

New York, June 27.—Five persons were drowned in the bay off Forty-seventh street, Brooklyn, by the overturning of the 38-foot sloop yacht Elsie and Katie, in a heavy storm that swept over New York yesterday afternoon. Eight other persons who were on the yacht at the time were rescued by members of the second naval battalion who put out in whaleboats from their armory at the foot of Fifty-second street.

Those drowned were Mrs. Kate Clarke, of Brooklyn, wife of Peter Clarke, the owner of the yacht, her two daughters, Lizzie, aged 10, and Louise, aged four; her two-year-old niece, Mamie Clarke, and Lizzie Lason, sixteen years old. The bodies of Mrs. Clarke and of Mamie Clarke have been rescued.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Yale's commencement week was formally opened Sunday, when President Arthur T. Hadley delivered the baccalaureate address in Woolsey hall. Yale's magnificent new auditorium. There are magnificent new auditorium. There are a large number of commencement guests present from all parts of the country.

The Citizens' National bank of Saratoga, which suffered a heavy run, is declared to be sound and fully prepared to meet all obligations should small depositors continue their demands. Losses by unfortunate investments and alleged irregularities of Cashier John F. De Ridder, who has resigned, are now placed at from $30,000 to $40,000.

Christopher Fees, a former Cleveland councilman, and his wife Louisa, both over 60 years old, were struck by a Lake Shore electric car Sunday afternoon while crossing the tracks on the Clifton boulevard and killed. A peculiar feature about the man's death was that his heart in some strange manner was forced from the body and was found lying at the side of the body.

Five persons lost their lives in a wreck which occurred on the Mexican Central railroad near Tampico. The dead include four trainmen and one unknown man, who was stealing a ride.

One death and eleven cases of prostration have been reported as the result of the excessive heat at New York Sunday. Agnes Emmett, a widow, was taken to the hospital with three self-inflicted bullet wounds in her heads. The woman said she was crazed by the heat. At noon the thermometer registered 90 degrees.

The building at Chicago used as a sausage factory by Adolph Luetgert, who died in Joliet penitentiary while serving a life sentence for the murder of his wife, was destroyed by fire today. The vats in which Luetgert is supposed to have destroyed the body of his wife were burned with the rest of the building in the fire. The loss on the building and contents is $100,000.

INSURGENT VICTORY

In Last Week's Battle at Tuhambo, Argentina.

New York, June 27.—According to the Uruguayan revolutionist Junta, says a Herald dispatch from Buenos Ayres, Argentina, the battle fought near Tuhamnabo last Friday was a great victory for the insurgents. It is asserted that the revolutionists captured the government's artillery, and that Col. Galarza, in command of the government roops, was seriously wounded, while he government's forces lost several hundred men.

The Uruguyan government emphatically denies the report. It declares that Gen. Saravia, the head of the revolutionists, was severely wounded, and that Col. Lamas and other high officials of the insurgents were killed.

BLACK FIEND LYNCHED.

Euporia, Miss., June 27.—Starling Dunham, a negro, wanted on the charge of criminaly assaulting the 14-year-old daughter of John Wilson, a white man, near Bellefontaine, two weeks ago, and attempting to criminally assault another young lady named Dunn, near the city, was hanged in the public square yesterday by an angry mob. The noose was placed about the negro's neck by the little Wilson girl, who positively identified him as her assailant.

FORTY THOUSAND WORKERS ON STRIKE.

New York, June 27.—Leaders in the strike of garment workers declare the tie-up to be complete, and estimate the number of persons out at 35,00 to 40,000. In a day or two 10,000 finishers, mostly Italian women, who take the work home, will be added to the ranks of the idle.

In whatever way the trouble may end, it is the biggest clothing strike that New York has seen for at least six years. Since the last big clothing strike the population and the business have increased enormously, and it is estimated that there are at least 20,000 more clothing workers in the city than there were six years ago. No wage demand has been made, the strike being merely against the open shop.

TRIUMPHS OF MODERN SURGERY.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It so allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by all druggists.

KILLED BY CYCLONE.

New York, June 27—A cyclone struck the village of Haledon, a suburb of Paterson, N. J., yesterday. It swept away the Hopper Ice houses, and at least one man, John Wieding, who was employed by the Rogers Locomotive works, was killed. Three or four houses were wrecked. It is believed that others were killed and workmen were busy clearing the wreckage. The cyclone came tearing down through the mountains and cut a swath half a mile wide, sweeping away trees and destroying gardens and farms.

REVIEW ABANDONED.

Kiel, June 27.—It is announced that the elaborate naval review which it was planned to hold here today and tomorrow, has been abandoned at the request of King Edward.

RESIGNS PASTORATE.

Rev. D. W. Michael to Leave English Lutheran Church.

Rev. D. W. Michael, 312 North Lake avenue, pastor of the First English Lutheran church, at the regular evening services last night announced his resignation from the pastorate, the resignation to take effect next September.

Rev. Michael's announcement came as a decided surprise. He is very popular with the congregation and has built up the church wonderfully since his arrival in Duluth nearly three years ago, so that his departure will naturally be greatly regretted. Ill health was given as the reason for the resignation. It is understood that the minister has not yet definitely decided upon his future plans, but it is thought he will take up his work in a field offering a more agreeable winter climate than does Duluth.

Will Lose an Eye.

The four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Davis, of Chester Terrace, will probably lose the sight of one eye as the result of being struck in the face Saturday by a piece of glass, thrown by one of his playmates. At a consultation of physicians at the hospital last night it was decided there was litle hope of saving the eye.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis are now visiting friends in Canada, and their little son has been living with his uncle, G. W. Davis, during their absence. The boy was struck by a broken bottle thrown by a companion, cutting an ugly gash. The act was entirely unintentional.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentorville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles. Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c, and $1.00.

Duluthians In New York.

John T. Condon, who has returned from New York, says the Duluth colony is prospering, but that they never tire of asking him about Duluth and its growth. Mrs. Hannegan, who is there with her son, Ernest, is very much pleased with the city and it quite contented. Arthur W. Little, who has held a very important position at the Waldorf-Astoria, has been transferred to the hotel at the Thousand Islands, that is under the same management. John L. Eddy, a former Duluth newspaper man, is one of the leading writers on the New York Journal. John H. Langton is making good at the Hotel Spalding, which is crowded most of the time. Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Towne are making their home at the Hotel Victoria.

Consumption Nearly all early cases can be cured. Expert physicians tell us they rely largely on three things—fresh air, good food, and Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Follow your doctor's orders. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

GILFILLAN CHOSEN

By Minneapolis Politicians as a Candidate For Senator.

Judge Gilfillan Will Enter Field Against Senator Clapp.

Minneapolis, June 27.—Hennepin county will go after the seat of Moses E. Clapp in the United States senate, and Judge J. B. Gilfillan has been agreed upon as the best and the most available candidate.

This announcement comes from an authoritative source, and from now on it is expected that a strong fight will be made to land a Minneapolis man in the senate.

The matter has been under consideration for some time by the representative business men of the city, who have held a number of meetings for the purpose of agreeing upon some candidate and to join solidly, in his support. Among the men who have been considered as possible candidates are William Henry Eustis, Thomas Lowry and Judge Gilfillan, and it was almost definitely decided Saturday that the latter would be the man to whom the support of Hennepin county would be thrown in the fight.

Judge Gilfillan has been considering the proposition for some time since it was first broached to him, and he has decided to accept the offer of support and to make a strong effort to unseat Senator Clapp.

William Henry Eustis did not express a willingness, it is said, but it is believed that he would not have been averse to stand as a candidate if a little pressure had been brought to bear to have him accept the honor.

Thomas Lowry was also one of the men interviewel by the business men, but he is said to lack the necessary confidence to go into such a fight but expressed himself heartily in favor of any movement that might be made to gain a seat for Minneapolis in the United States senate. He urged that some good man be agreed upon and that a concerted movement be made to elect him.

The candidacy of Judge Gilfillan will, according to statements of his supporters, have considerable bearing on the gubernatorial situation, and may force Judge Collins to withdraw his support from Moses E. Clapp in order to get the Hennepin county delegation.

Resolutions favoring and pledging support to Judge Gilfillan for the United States senate will be introduced at the Hennepin county convention this week, and as it is expected that resolutions indorsing Senator Clapp will also be introduced, a lively time is looked for.

Through the Skin
TO THE BLOOD.

Some of the most stubborn diseases enter into the system through the pores of the skin. The juices of Poison Oak and Ivy and other noxious wild plants, when taken into the circulation, break out afresh each season, and linger on for years unless antidoted and driven out of the system.

Workers in Lead, Brass, and other metals are often poisoned by the chemicals and acids used in polishing, and the dust and filings settling upon the skin. The diseases that enter the system by absorption or through the pores are as deep-seated and dangerous as any, and cannot be reached by washes, salves, soaps or other external remedies. The blood must be purified before getting permanently rid of the disease. S. S. S. acts upon the blood, ridding it of the original poison and restoring it to a healthy, normal condition.

SSS

S. S. S. is guaranteed entirely vegetable, and an unrivaled blood purifier. With all impurities removed from the blood, the sores and eruptions disappear from the skin. Write us should you desire medical advice or any information about your case; this will cost you nothing.

LOCAL TALENT

At Chisholm Presented "Tompkins' Hired Man."

Chisholm, Minn., June 27.—(Special to The Heraid)—"Tompkins' Hired Man," a play full of wit, humor and pathos, is founded on a story of love-making in a farmer's home, under adverse circumstances. The drama was successfully represented by home talent, unexcelled by the professionals that come to town. Robert Lovelace represented old Farmer Tompkins as if he were a real old hayseed of 60 years old. "Jack" Rice was Tompkins' hired man, working for board and cheap clothes during the cold winter. Jack was the star actor of the evening, and Mrs. Merritt White the leading actress. Fred Hogman posed as John Remington, a fine young man, in love with Louise. Louise liked to be loved and Fred knows how to love a girl to distraction. George Reed was Jerry, a half-grown, awkward, country lad, who did so well that you could fancy you saw the green on him. Miss Edna Reed acted Louise, and when she found a clipping in the attic which revealed her true parentage and adoption into the Tompkins' family, she hated the Tompkins and loved her lover more lovingly. Dixey, Tompkins' hired man, proved to be her dad, a surprise which she did not seem to enjoy. Miss Nan Reed was Julia, the only daughter of the Tompkins, who had been petted until she became a proud, lazy girl, who thought everybody should wait on her. Miss Mabel Crellin acted Ruth, a star boarder at the Tompkins, envied by all for her age, good sense and motherly qualities. Mrs. Merritt White posed as Mrs. Tompkins, the old lady and mother of Julia. She cried and laughed, and made everybody do the same. Her life had been embittered by the secret of adoption of Louise when old Tompkins was away once.

THE TRADE OF JAPAN

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—An interesting picture of conditions in Japan is afforded by a communication from the Japanese manager of the Eikoku Shogyo Zasshi, published at Tokio, recently received by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics. The communication, which appears in the May number of the British Trade Journal, indicates that commercial and financial conditions have not as yet been seriously affected by the Russo-Japanese war, and this statement is veritied, so far as relates to commerce with the United States, by the official figures showing the trade of the United States with Japan during the present year as compared with earlier periods.

Commenting upon trade and financial conditions in the Japanese Empire, the writer above referred to says:

"When the Russo-Japanese negotiations were broken off and the hostilities were opened between these two powers we feared that a great panic would occur in our economic world and our commerce and industry would be upset to a large extent, the whole energy of the people being concentrated on the war. But this turned out to be a false fear. The war does not so much affect our trade as we expected; transactions are done very smoothly; stocks which suffered from a fall for a short time have arisen again to their prices, and factories enjoy their usual profit. Nor does it make our people so greatly excited as you may think, though we Japanese pride ourselves on being the most patriotic nation on earth. At home, our conversations are as merry and innocent as ever, and in the street we see nothing warlike except the noisy newsboys delivering specials of happy tidings in the form of our brilliant victories both on land and sea. Business men and laborers are calmly attending to their own tasks, and there is no excitement among them. In fact, our people seem to rightly understand that it is an important duty on their part, especially at this juncture, to appy themselves to their business with as much assiduity as their soldiers do to battles. Such being the state of things in Japan, however long the war may last her commerce and industry will not be much affected by it; nay, they will continue the progress they have been used to make during these past decades."

The above statement is especially interesting in view of the fact that Japan's commerce with the United States in the present fiscal year shows a marked advance over that of any preceding year, and for the twelve months ending June 30, 1904, will probably exceed $70,000,000. Figures covering eleven months of the present fiscal year have just been issued by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics. They show that our exports to Japan amounted to $22,594,713 during the eleven months of this year, as against $19,854,843 in the corresponding months of the preceding fiscal year; also that our imports from Japan touched their highest point for an eleven months' period, being $44,367,461, as against $41,-833,351 in the eleven months of 1903, the previous high-water mark.

Exports to Japan from the United States reached their highest point in the fiscal year 1900, when the total was $29,087,475, due in a large measure to the extraordinary purchases of cotton by Japan in that year. In the following year, however, there was a drop of fully $10,000,000 in the volume of our exports to Japan, though an upward tendency is again apparent, and for the eleven months ending May 31, 1904, the total is, as already stated, $22,594,713, and for the full year will be about $24,000,000.

Since the year 1900 Japan has greatly reduced her importations of cotton from the United States, owing to the high prices, and has increased her importation of lower-priced cotton from India. In the eleven months ending with May, 1900, Japan imported 161,500,000 pounds of American cotton, valued at $12,-666,000; and in the present fiscal year to date she has taken less than 24,-000,000 pounds of American cotton, valued at less than $3,000,000.

Flour, refined mineral oils, cotton, paper, and its products, paraffin and paraffin wax, electrical machinery, locomotives, sole leather, and unmanufactured tobacco form the major portion of our exports t Japan, and in all f these, except cotton and paper, there is a substantial increase over last year's exports.

Wheat flour	$ 1,709,994	$ 5,037,898

Total foreign exports	107,231	318,702

The growth in our general exports to Japan is indicated by the following figures for eleven months of each fiscal year from 1894 to 1904. It will be seen that the figures for 1904 are the largest on record, save alone those for 1900, when the abnormal purchases of cotton by Japan swelled our total exports to nearly $30,000,000 for the full fiscal year: 1894, $3,060,721; 1895, $4,233,303; 1896, $6,884,033; 1897, $12,466,271; 1898, $19,146,699; 1899, $12,219,815; 1900, $27,362,666; 1901, $17,015,318; 1902, $20,209,846; 1903, $19,854,843; 1904, $22,594,713.

COPPER IN ARIZONA

Paper Issued By the United States Geological Survey.

Washington, June 27.—The geology and ore deposits of the Bisbee quadrangle, Arizona, have been described by Frederick Leslie Ransome in a recent publication of the United States Geological survey, listed as Professional Paper No. 21. This quadrangle lies in Cochise county, Arizona, in the southeastern part of the territory. It covers about 170 square miles and includes the southeastern half of the Mule mountains, one of the smaller of the isolated ranges that characterize the southeastern half of Arizona. The town of Bisbee, which has an estimated population of about 6000, is crowded into a few narrow confluent ravines near the heart of the range, seven and one-half miles north of the Mexican border. The history of the district to the year 1900 is practically that of the Copper Queen mine, which was discovered there in 1877 and first opened in 1880. The importance of the district to the copper industry of the country is indicated by the fact that the total recorded output for the Bisbee quadrangle from 1880 to 1902, inclusive, is 330,113,857 pounds of copper.

Very little work was required to reveal the existence of a large body of rich ore in the Copper Queen mine. This was at first quarried from an open cut, and afterwards worked by an incline that extended down to the 300-fot level. Two 36-inch water-jacket furnaces were erected in 1881, and with food as fuel the operators were able to turn out 500,000 pounds of copper a month from ore averaging 23 per cent. There were no sulphides, and the smelting was direct.

The first wonderful ore body of the Coper Queen suddenly gave out in 1884 when a second large body was fortunately encountered. The average tenor of the ore at this time was about 12 per cent, coppr being then worth about 18 cents a pound.

The original smelting plant became inadequate in 1886 and was replaced by three 36-inch furnaces, to which an 80-inch furnace was soon added. The small furnaces were gradually abandoned during succeeding years and replaced by larger ones. In the early nineties it became evident that the sulphide ores would soon be an important factor in the development of the mine, and as the working of such ores was commonly supposed at that time to be impracticable in Arizona, the situation looked grave. The Bessemer process had, however, already been successfully applied to copper at Butte, Mont., and the matte process for the reduction of mixd sulphide and oxide ores was accordingly tried at Bisbee and has since been user there down to the present day.

Up to about 1900 the Copper Queen which maintained a steadily increasing output, continued to be the only important mine in the Bisbee quadrangle. Within the last four years, however, the Calumet & Arizona company has opened extensive workings in neighboring claims, and has shown that large bodies of high grade copper ore are by no means confined to the ground quietly developed for over twenty years by the Coper Queen company. The opening of a second large mine has increased the activity of an already flourishing district, and hundreds of thousands of dollars are being expended in prospecting and development.

What Mr. Ransome has to say about the value of the ores and the future of the district is especially interesting. As development progresses, it has been found economical to reduce ores of lower grade. The ore first worked in the Copper Queen mine averaged 23 per cent of copper, but the present average is about 7 per cent, the range being from 4 to 20 per cent. Mr. Ransome believes that important ore bodies probably await discovery in the faulted limestone syncline about Sacramento Hill, an extensive area of unknown but promising ground. He points out that Bisbee is less likely to suffer from a lack of ore than from too rapid exhaustion of those high grade oxidiezd ores which are necessary for the economical smelting, by present processes, of low grade sulphides.

In view of the facts that there are very few publications treating of the geology and ore deposits of the Bisbee district and that many people are interested in the mines and prospects of the region, Mr. Ransome's report should find a large number of readers. It fills over 160 pages and contains twenty-nine illustrations, including two geological maps. The report may be obtained on application to the director of the United States Geological survey, Washington.

DOCTORS AND HIS DAUGHTER

Insist "Uncle Joe" Cannon Must Take Voyage to Europe.

Chicago, June 27.—The fever has "Uncle Joe" Cannon. It had him all the time he was in Chicago, attending the Republican convention, but the game old veteran would not give in to it, and stuck to his post until the final adjournment came. Then his daughter and domestic "boss" and housekeeper, Miss Helen Cannon, hustled him off to their home in Danville, Ill., instead of letting him go to St. Louis, whither the politicians that went down to the Louisana Purchase exposition tried to persuade him to accompany them.

The speaker of the lower house of congress is not seriously ill, but he needs rest, and his physician has ordered a sea, voyage for him. Whether he will obey orders or not is another matter, but his daughter has large influence with him, and she is backing the doctor. The real trouble with the speaker is that too much work has been put upon him for one of h's years.

He was hardly away from Washington when he got tied up with the Republican state convention in Springfield, and spent practicaly four weeks of sleepless nights and exciting days. He needed rest then, and said several times that he wished he had gone off on a yachting trip with Secretary of the Navy Moody, instead of agreeing to preside over the convention.

ITALIAN MINER

Killed at the Cyprus Mine Near Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., June 27.—Donald Nicolett, an Italian miner, 28 years of age, was killed in the open pit at the Cyprus mine, three miles west of here. He was walking out of the open pit, when an engine pushing a coal car, came along and he stepped onto the car. Arriving at the entrance of the mine, Nicollet stepped off the car and in doing so stumbled and fell under the wheels. His skull was crushed and he died in a few mometns. He leaves a wife and two children in Italy.

Judge Gilfillan has been considering the proposition for some time since it was first broached to him, and he has decided to accept the offer of support and to make a strong effort to unseat Senator Clapp.

William Henry Eustis did not express a willingness, it is said, but it is believed that he would not have been averse to stand as a candidate if a little pressure had been brought to bear to have him accept the honor.

Thomas Lowry was also one of the men interviewed by the business men, but he is said to lack the necessary confidence to go into such a fight but expressed himself heartily in favor of any movement that might be made to gain a seat for Minneapolis in the United States senate. He urged that some good man be agreed upon and that a concerted movement be made to elect him.

The candidacy of Judge Gilfillan will, according to statements of his supporters, have considerable bearing on the gubernatorial situation, and may force Judge Collins to withdraw his support from Moses E. Clapp in order to get the Hennepin county delegation.

Resolutions favoring and pledging support to Judge Gilfillan for the United States senate will be introduced at the Hennepin county convention this week, and as it is expected that resolutions indorsing Senator Clapp will also be introduced, a lively time is looked for.

LOCAL TALENT

At Chisholm Presented "Tompkins' Hired Man."

Chisholm, Minn., June 27.—(Special to The Herald)—"Tompkins' Hired Man," a play full of wit, humor and pathos, is founded on a story of love-making in a farmer's home, under adverse circumstances. The drama was successfully represented by home talent, unexcelled by the professionals that come to town. Robert Lovelace represented old Farmer Tompkins as if he were a real old hayseed of 60 years old. "Jack" Rice was Tompkins' hired man, working for board and cheap clothes during the cold winter. Jack was the star actor of the evening, and Mrs. Merritt White the leading actress. Fred Hogman posed as John Remington, a fine young man, in love with Louise. Louise liked to be loved and Fred knows how to love a girl to distraction. George Reed was Jerry, a half-grown, awkward, country lad, who did so well that you could fancy you saw the green on him. Miss Edna Reed acted Louise, and when she found a clipping in the attic which revealed her true parentage and adoption into the Tompkins' family, she hated the Tompkins and loved her lover more lovingly. Dixey, Tompkins' hired man, proved to be her dad, a surprise which she did not seem to enjoy. Miss Nan Reed was Julia, the only daughter of the Tompkins, who had been petted until she became a proud, lazy girl, who thought everybody should wait on her. Miss Mabel Crellin acted Ruth, a star boarder at the Tompkins, envied by all for her age, good sense and motherly qualities. Mrs. Merritt White posed as Mrs. Tompkins, the old lady and mother of Julia. She cried and laughed, and made everybody do the same. Her life had been embittered by the secret of adoption of Louise when old Tompkins was away once.

Through the Skin TO THE BLOOD.

Some of the most stubborn diseases enter into the system through the pores of the skin. The juices of Poison Oak and Ivy and other noxious wild plants, when taken into the circulation, break out afresh each season, and linger on for years unless antidoted and driven out of the system.

Workers in Lead, Brass, and other metals are often poisoned by the chemicals and acids used in polishing, and the dust and filings settling upon the skin. The diseases that enter the system by absorption or through the pores are as deep-seated and dangerous as any, and cannot be reached by washes, salves, soaps or other external remedies. The blood must be purified before getting permanently rid of the disease. S. S. S. acts upon the blood, ridding it of the original poison and restoring it to a healthy, normal condition.

SSS

S. S. S. is guaranteed entirely vegetable, and an unrivaled blood purifier. With all impurities removed from the blood, the sores and eruptions disappear from the skin. Write us should you desire medical advice or any information about your case; this will cost you nothing.

THE TRADE OF JAPAN

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—An interesting picture of conditions in Japan is afforded by a communication from the Japanese manager of the Eikoku Shogyo Zasshi, published at Tokio, recently received by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics. The communication, which appears in the May number of the British Trade Journal, indicates that commercial and financial conditions have not as yet been seriously affected by the Russo-Japanese war, and this statement is verified, so far as relates to commerce with the United States, by the official figures showing the trade of the United States with Japan during the present year as compared with earlier periods.

Commenting upon trade and financial conditions in the Japanese Empire, the writer above referred to says:

"When the Russo-Japanese negotiations were broken off and the hostilities were opened between these two powers we feared that a great panic would occur in our economic world and our commerce and industry would be upset to a large extent, the whole energy of the people being concentrated on the war. But this turned out to be a false fear. The war does not so much affect our trade as we expected; transactions are done very smoothly; stocks which suffered from a fall for a short time have arisen again to their prices, and factories enjoy their usual profit. Nor does it make our people so greatly excited as you may think, though we Japanese pride ourselves on being the most patriotic nation on earth. At home our conversations are as merry and innocent as ever, and in the street we see nothing warlike except the noisy newsboys delivering specials of happy tidings in the form of our brilliant victories both on land and sea. Business men and laborers are calmly attending to their own tasks, and there is no excitement among them. In fact, our people seem to rightly understand that it is an important duty on their part, especially at this juncture, to appy themselves to their business with as much assiduity as their soldiers do to battles. Such being the state of things in Japan, however long the war may last her commerce and industry will not be much affected by it; nay, they will continue the progress they have been used to make during these past decades."

The above statement is especially interesting in view of the fact that Japan's commerce with the United States in the present fiscal year shows a marked advance over that of any preceding year, and for the twelve months ending June 30, 1904, will probably exceed $70,000,000. Figures covering eleven months of the present fiscal year have just been issued by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics. They show that our exports to Japan amounted to $22,594,713 during the eleven months of this year, as against $19,854,843 in the corresponding months of the preceding fiscal year; also that our imports from Japan touched their highest point for an eleven months' period, being $44,367,461, as against $41,-833,351 in the eleven months of 1903, the previous high-water mark.

Exports to Japan from the United States reached their highest point in the fiscal year 1900, when the total was $29,087,475, due in a large measure to the extraordinary purchases of cotton by Japan in that year. In the following year, however, there was a drop of fully $10,000,000 in the volume of our exports to Japan, though an upward tendency is again apparent, and for the eleven months ending May 31, 1904, the total is, as already stated, $22,594,713, and for the full year will be about $24,000,000.

Since the year 1900 Japan has greatly reduced her importations of cotton from the United States, owing to the high prices, and has increased her importation of lower-priced cotton from India. In the eleven months ending with May, 1900, Japan imported 161,500,000 pounds of American cotton, valued at $12,-656,000; and in the present fiscal year to date she has taken less than 24,-000,000 pounds of American cotton, valued at less than $3,000,000.

Flour, refined mineral oils, cotton, paper, and its products, paraffin and paraffin wax, electrical machinery, locomotives, sole leather, and unmanufactured tobacco form the major portion of our exports t Japan, and in all f these, except cotton and paper, there is a substantial increase over last year's exports.

Wheat flour	$ 1,709,994	$ 5,027,838

The growth in our general exports to Japan is indicated by the following figures for eleven months of each fiscal year from 1894 to 1904. It will be seen that the figures for 1904 are the largest on record, save alone those for 1899, when the abnormal purchases of cotton by Japan swelled our total exports to nearly $30,000,000 for the full fiscal year: 1894, $3,099,721; 1895, $4,233,895; 1896, $6,894,033; 1897, $12,466,271; 1898, $19,146,899; 1899, $12,219,815; 1900, $27,362,666; 1901, $17,015,318; 1902, $20,209,846; 1903, $19,854,843; 1904, $22,594,713.

COPPER IN ARIZONA

Paper Issued By the United States Geological Survey.

Washington, June 27.—The geology and ore deposits of the Bisbee quadrangle, Arizona, have been described by Frederick Leslie Ransome in a recent publication of the United States Geological survey, listed as Professional Paper No. 21. This quadrangle lies in Cochise county, Arizona, in the southeastern part of the territory. It covers about 170 square miles and includes the southeastern half of the Mule mountains, one of the smaller of the isolated ranges that characterize the southeastern half of Arizona. The town of Bisbee, which has an estimated population of about 6000, is crowded into a few narrow confluent ravines near the heart of the range, seven and one-half miles north of the Mexican border. The history of the district to the year 1900 is practically that of the Copper Queen mine, which was discovered there in 1877 and first opened in 1880. The importance of the district to the copper industry of the country is indicated by the fact that the total recorded output for the Bisbee quadrangle from 1880 to 1902, inclusive, is 350,113,857 pounds of copper.

Very little work was required to reveal the existence of a large body of rich ore in the Copper Queen mine. This was at first quarried from an open cut, and afterwards worked by an incline that extended down to the 300-fot level. Two 36-inch water-jacket furnaces were erected in 1881, and with food as fuel the operators were able to turn out 500,000 pounds of copper a month from ore averaging 23 per cent. There were no sulphides, and the smelting was direct.

The first wonderful ore body of the Coper Queen suddenly gave out in 1884 when a second large body was fortunately encountered. The average tenor of the ore at this time was about 12 per cent, coppr being then worth about 18 cents a pound.

The original smelting plant became inadequate in 1886 and was replaced by three 36-inch furnaces, to which an 80-inch furnace was soon added. The small furnaces were gradually abandoned during succeeding years and replaced by larger ones. In the early nineties it became evident that the sulphide ores would soon be an important factor in the development of the mine, and as the working of such ores was commonly supposed at that time to be impracticable in Arizona, the situation looked grave. The Pessemer process had, however, already been successfully applied to copper at Butte, Mont., and the matte process for the reduction of mixd sulphide and oxide ores was accordingly tried at Bisbee and has since been user there down to the present day.

Up to about 1900 the Copper Queen which maintained a steadily increasing output, continued to be the only important mine in the Bisbee quadrangle. Within the last four years, however, the Calumet & Arizona company has opened extensive workings in neighboring claims, and has shown that large bodies of high grade copper ore are by no means confined to the ground quietly developed for over twenty years by the Coper Queen company. The opening of a second large mine has increased the activity of an already flourishing district, and hundreds of thousands of dollars are being expended in prospecting and development.

What Mr. Ransome has to say about the value of the ores and the future of the district is especially interesting. As development progresses, it has been found economical to reduce ores of lower grade. The ore first worked in the Copper Queen mine averaged 23 per cent of copper, but the present average is about 7 per cent, the range being from 4 to 20 per cent. Mr. Ransome believes that important ore bodies probably await discovery in the faulted limestone syncline about Sacramento Hill, an extensive area of unknown but promising ground. He points out that Bisbee is less likely to suffer from a lack of ore than from too rapid exhaustion of those high grade oxidiezd ores which are necessary for the economical smelting, by present processes, of low grade sulphides.

In view of the facts that there are very few publications treating of the geology and ore deposits of the Bisbee district and that many people are interested in the mines and prospects of the region, Mr. Ransome's report should find a large number of readers. It fills over 100 pages and contains twenty-nine illustrations, including two geological maps. The report may be obtained on application to the director of the United States Geological survey, Washington.

DOCTORS AND HIS DAUGHTER

Chicago, June 27.—The fever has "Uncle Joe" Cannon. It had him all the time he was in Chicago, attending the Republican convention, but the game old veteran would not give in to it, and stuck to his post until the final adjournment came. Then his daughter and domestic "boss" and housekeeper, Miss Helen Cannon, hustled him off to their home in Danville, Ill., instead of letting him go to St. Louis, whither the politicians that went down to the Louisana Purchase exposition tried to persuade him to accompany them.

The speaker of the lower house of congress is not seriously ill, but he needs rest, and his physician has ordered a sea voyage for him. Whether he will obey orders or not is another matter, but his daughter has large influence with him, and she is backing the doctor. The real trouble with the speaker is that too much work has been put upon him for one of h's years.

He was hardly away from Washington when he got tied up with the Republican state convention in Springfield, and spent practicaly four weeks of sleepless nights and exciting days. He needed rest then, and said several times that he wished he had gone off on a yachting trip with Secretary of the Navy Moody, instead of agreeing to preside over the convention.

ITALIAN MINER

Killed at the Cyprus Mine Near Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., June 27.—Donald Nicolett, an Italian miner, 28 years of age, was killed in the open pit at the Cyprus mine, three miles west of here. He was walking out of the open pit, when an engine pushing a coal car, came along and he stepped onto the car. Arriving at the entrance of the mine, Nicollet stepped off the car and in doing so stumbled and fell under the wheels. His skull was crushed and he died in a few mometns. He leaves a wife and two children in Italy.

The Northwestern Markets Very Weak Losing Cent and Half.

Chicago Much Stronger. World's Shipments Are Larger Than Expected.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 27.—Northwestern markets were very weak this morning and Chicago was the strongest. The Minneapolis July price fell ½-⅝c, and the Duluth 1½c, while the September option at both places fell practically 1c. In Chicago, the decline in July was only ¼c and in September, ½c. The opening was weak under the influence of better weather and a poor buying element. It seemed to be the opinion that the last bulge drove all but the strong shorts in pretty well and that outside of them there was no one to buy. The world's shipments, too, were more than 1,250,000 bus larger than predicted and this weakened sentiment, also. There was a fairly large decrease in the visible supply, but not more than had been expected and this did not affect the market. The edge was off the foreign bids for wheat and the East seemed to want none. The Southwest is beginning to receive new wheat and Kansas was predicting 200 cars of new wheat by July 5. The Liverpool market closed ¼d higher, London unchanged to ½d higher, Paris 1½c higher, Berlin ⅝c lower and Buda Festh ¼c higher.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the previous week and the corresponding week in last year, were as follows:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Notwithstanding Conditions Wheat Has Bearish Tone.

Chicago, June 27.—Unresponsive cables and larger world's shipments than expected, caused a bearish sentiment in the wheat pit today notwithstanding the unfavorable weather conditions in the Southwest, where heavy rains had interfered with harvesting operations. The market received fair support from commission houses. September opened unchanged to ¼c down at 81¼c to 81⅝c, sold at 81⅝@⅞, and reacted to 81¼c. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 290 cars, against 361 cars last week and 343 cars a year ago.

An easy tone prevailed throughout the entire day. One of the main weakening influences was selling by Southwestern houses. After selling down to 80¾c, September closed at 80⅝c, a net loss of 1½c.

There was an easier feeling in the corn market, brought out by more liberal receipts and by excellent weather in the West. Small holders sold July, the offerings being taken by commission houses. September opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 58¼c to 48⅜c, and eased off to 48⅛@¼c. Local receipts were 424 cars, with 37 of contract grade.

The weakness of wheat was a check on the corn market. Prices held steady, September unchanged at 48¼@⅜c.

The easier tone in corn caused some profit-taking in oats, but offerings were readily taken by local bulls, prices showing little change. September opened unchanged at 31⅜c and held at 31¾@⅞c. Local receipts were 126 cars.

Provisions were easier on larger receipts of hogs than expected and lower prices at the yards. The selling was largely by commission houses and shorts were the principal purchasers. September pork opened 2½c to 7½c lower at $13.20 to $13.35, and sold off to $13.15@13.17½. September lard was down 2½@5c to 5@7½c at $7.17½ to $7.20. Ribs were off 7½c at $7.70.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Cables were steady. No cash trade here. Buyers and sellers wide apart on the new 2 red in Kansas City. Cash prices in St. Louis have a declining tendency. Premiums are still large, however. The weather in the southwest is an important factor and further rains are predicted. Until it becomes more settled any material decline is not likely.

Corn—Receipts were liberal with a large estimate for tomorrow. The market had a heavy tone early. It was a quiet market however, with small volume of general speculative trade. Weather conditions continue favorable and crop reports on the whole satisfactory.

Corn—It was a very steady and quiet market. There was no change in the previous position, except some slackening in the demand for off-grades. Cash prices are, however, pretty fairly well maintained.

Provisions—Receipts continue a little deficient as compared with last year. Shipments not much different from a year ago. The market is apparently losing some of its recent strength. As far as can be observed some of the buying which caused the recent advance seems willing to take profits on the hard spots. Delivery day is near at hand and with the large local stocks deliveries are likely to be free. We are inclined to think the steam is off and that realizing should be done on the hard spots.

Minneapolis: The following letter comes from H. V. Jones, Wichita, Kan.: "It looks as if splendid business is opening up for the Southwestern railways. The wheat crop is larger than estimate suggested a month ago, the crop having been favored by splendid weather after filling started. The crop in both states will be smaller than last year, but the Santa Fe, Rock Island and Missouri Pacific will have an increased crop haul in Southwest divisions, in my judgment. It rarely happens that oats and wheat are both good in the same district, but in Kansas, so far as I have seen, they are doing well. Corn is slow in Kansas, due to heavy rains, which have brought out weeds; the farmer cannot look after them and cut wheat and cultivate corn at the same time. They, of course, give preference to the crop secured. Wheat will average twenty bushels to the acre in some of the Southern counties of Kansas, as against twelve bushels last year. On the other hand, in the western counties the average will even fall behind last year, the east two-thirds of Kansas is in fine shape."

B. E. Baker's Chicago Grain Market Letter: Wheat—Buying of Saturday was on too heavy a scale for the size of the present market and orders were less numerous today on that side. Also the usual desire among the scalpers to accept profits that came to them through Saturday's purchases. Some of the week's statistical figures were less bullish than expected and that had a tendency to cause come realizing by those who looked for no more than a scalping profit. Local stock of wheat was only reduced 20,000 bus for the week. Very little was done for old July and the bulk of the trade was in new September. Weather was wet over the greater part of the winter wheat country and it does not look as if the millers would be inundated with new wheat just at present. We advise buying the September, December and May on all reactions. New York reports 13 loads of wheat for export.

Corn—The rain which was delaying the wheat harvest was generally thought good for corn, but reports generally were to the effect that the crop was still about two weeks later than usual. Crops here fairly liberal. Estimated tomorrow, which includes the arrivals over Sunday, the estimate is for 609 cars. Reported 590,000 bushels of corn sold here today for shipment. This market closed firm. We advise being long September corn.

Oats—The market was dull, but comparatively steady. September was in good demand at slight improvement on Saturday's closing figures. Receipts were 125 cars and for tomorrow the estimate is 213 cars. Shipments were 54,000 bushels. Reports from the country were generally favorable as to the progress of the growing crop.

Liverpool Corn Trade News of June 18 says it thinks our 1903 crop was overestimated and that 565,000,000 bus is nearer right than 638,000,000 bus, the final estimate. It says the crop movement proves it. It says European consumption is large, being 9,000,000 bus per week.

Broomhall cables: The imperial statistical bureau of Germany gives the condition of the crops of the empire on June 15 as follows: Winter wheat 82, against 84 last month and 74 last year; winter rye 80, against 82 last month and 80 last year; oats 76, against 82 last month and 80 last year.

ESCAPED PICKETS.

Slayer of Sheriff Harris Gets Through Lines.

St. Paul, June 27.—A special to the Dispatch from La Crosse, says: It is reported here that the slayer of Sheriff Harris, of St. Croix county escaped through the picket lines in the darkness and was seen in the fields near Holmen. A detachment of militia is reconnoitering near that place. It is impossible to get confirmation or denial here of the report that he had shot a woman and boy near North Bend. It is stated that near Trempleau he compelled a woman to give him her outer clothing and in this disguise he went through town unharmed. Dr. F. R. Weston's bloodhounds will be sent up this afternoon to join those from Superior, which reached Merrilan this noon.

BERSCH PLEADS GUILTY.

St. Louis, June 27.—Edmund Bersch, former member of the house of delegates, pleaded guilty today before Judge McDonald, in the criminal division of the circuit court, to the charge of bribery in accepting $2500 of the $47,500 boodle fund for his vote on the city lighting bill. Sentence will be pronounced Friday.

TRADING IN STOCKS

Was Light and the Speculative Interest Was Languid.

Active Stocks Varied But Little and Close Was Heavy.

New York, June 27.—The opening stock market today reflected a very languid speculative interest. Changes were narrow and mixed. Detroit Southern sold off ¾ to 1¾.

A few stocks sold slightly above their opening prices, but a reaction forced the market generally to below Saturday's closing. The decline started in Metropolitan Street Railway and soon spread to the other specialties and standard stocks. Metropolitan Street Railway and Brooklyn Transit sold ¾ under last week. Consolidated Gas advanced a point and lost it, and Reading second preferred, Chicago Great Western preferred B and Iowa Central preferred rose 1 to 1½. Detroit Southern fell 1⅝ and preferred 1⅞.

Demand developed for Ontario & Western and Reading, which lifted them ⅝ and ¾ over the preceding close. The market hardened in sympathy, but yielded when Reading reacted. Northwestern fell ⅜ and Baggage preferred 2. Bonds were steady at noon.

Early losses in the specialties were largely made up by 1 o'clock, notably in Metropolitan Street Railway. St. Paul continued heavier, but the Pacifics were improving. Chicago Terminal preferred gained a point.

Business during the greater part of the afternoon was very light, and but few of the active stocks varied even ¼. Manhattan yielded 1, and Westinghouse Electric first preferred 1⅜.

The late stock market was bare of incident and prices showed no perceptible movement. Metropolitan Securities got ¾ over last week and Pullman sold 2½ higher than preceding sale. Realty pfd declined 1. The closing was heavy.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Some of the interests who have recently been working on the bull side of the market are known to have taken their profits; they express the belief that a reaction should be due and prices should be at least two or three points lower when the Democratic convention gets together. The same interests favor purchases on the decline, however, and predict that prices will be higher later in the summer. We are inclined to agree with this view so far as the general New York list is concerned.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 27.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 15 to 22 points on the old and of 7 to 10 points on the new crop months. This was rather better than due on the cables, which were higher than expected, however, and immediately following the call the market showed further firmness under moderately active covering as a result of talk of dry, hot weather in the Eastern belt, although the weather as a whole could hardly be termed unfavorable. There was selling on the advance by leading bears, however, checking the upward tendency, and the market during the first hour showed more or less irregularity, with prices at the end of that time about 8 to 18 points net higher.

Cotton spot closed steady, 20 points up; middling uplands, 11.25½ middling gulf, 11.50; sales, 1220 bales. Cotton futures closed steady; June, 10.67; July, 10.74; August, 10.65; September, 9.93; October, 9.73; November, 9.68; December, 9.70; January, 9.74.

TREASURY BALANCES.

A BRUTAL HUSBAND.

Mrs. James Brett Reports Him as Beating Her.

With both eyes blackened and swollen, Mrs. James Brett, of 23 East Eighth street, appeared at police headquarters and asked for a warrant for the arrest of her husband on the charge of assault and battery.

She claims that her husband attacked her yesterday and beat her cruelly, and states that she is convinced that he intended to kill her. She claims that he has beaten her on several previous occasions, but never so severely as yesterday. The woman's appearance bears out her story. The flesh about both of her eyes is swollen and blackened until she can hardly see out of them.

The city authorities have the matter under consideration and if the woman's story is found to be true, Brett's arrest will follow.

Washington, June 27.—Secretary Cortelyou, chairman, and Elmer C. Dover, secretary of the Republican national committee, who have just returned from Chicago, had a conference today with the president regarding the national convention and politics generally. Mr. Cortelyou said the conference was devoid of significance.

Mr. Cortelyou, as secretary of commerce and labor, will continue in the office until Friday, when he expects to turn over the affairs of the department to Victor H. Metcalf, of California, his successor.

MARINE NEWS

ANOTHER SUNK

Nonpareil, Fanchon's Successor As a Laundry Boat, Also Down.

Struck a Deadhead—Fanchon Almost Ready to Come Out.

The little steamer Nonpareil which has been used for getting laundry from the boats in the harbor while the Fanchon was undergoing repairs, was sunk in the harbor yesterday, near the club house on Park Point. She lies in shallow water and may be easily raised. The boat is said to be so old as to be almost valueless, however, and it may not be raised at all. It is said she ran against a deadhead in the water and knocked a hole in her bottom.

The Fanchon will be in commission by tomorrow. She was sunk in the Duluth harbor a week ago last Wednesday as a result of coming in contact with the wheel of the Sonora. She was raised and turned over to Napoleon Grignon for repairs.

The Herald is in receipt of a copy of Beeson's Marine Directory for 1904. The work is complete in every detail, handsomely gotten up and neatly and conveniently arranged, making a very satisfactory reference work for the purpose intended. If possible it surpasses any previous effort in this line.

The book's contents embrace complete lists of American and Canadian sailing vessels, giving their rig, tonnage, length, beam and depth, as well as year and place where built; name and address of owner, and insurance rating; list of engines and boilers, with dimensions of same, in about 1500 American bottoms; list of lumber carriers, with cargo capacity of each vessel; also of all iron ore carriers, with their greatest cargo record; a general map of the lakes; a table of distances, storm signals and a classified business directory of all trades. REV. SINE TO GO

Pastor of First Christian Church Will Leave Duluth.

Rev. J. K. Shellenberger of Mankato to Be Pastor Here.

Rev. C. R. Sine, who for three years has been pastor of the First Christian church and prominent in Duluth ministerial circles has received a call from the congregation at Charlottesville, Va., and he will leave Duluth for his new home on July 6.

Rev. J. K. Shellenberger, of Mankato, will take charge of the Duluth pastorate.

During the three years which Mr. Sine has passed in Duluth he has been for three terms secretary of the Duluth ministerial association and president of the same organization for two terms. He has reduced the debt of his church more than one-third and for the first time in its history made it self-supporting. During his tenure of the pastorship the membership has also been increased about 25 per cent.

The church which he goes to take charge of is larger than the one in Duluth. It is situated at Charlottesville, the city of the Virginia state university and near to Rev. Mr. Sine's old home.

Rev. Mr. Shellenberger, who will come to the Duluth church, is prominent in the church circles of the state and is well known in Duluth from the fact that he delivered a series of very successful sermons here two or three years ago.

The annual meeting of the First Christian church will be held at the church parlors tomorrow evening. Reports of the church officials for the past year will be heard along with those of the various organizations. After the business meetings a social hour will be enjoyed.

80 PER CENT OF THE ADULT POPULATION SUFFER FROM ONE PAINFUL AILMENT.

Think what this means. Imagine the amount of misery that exists and is endured simply because people do not know there is an absolute cure.

The only way to cure any complaint is to remove the cause. There are very few diseases or ailments that can be cured by external application—and piles is not one of them. Piles can be cured; the treatment must, however, be internal, for the cause of piles is an internal disorder of the liver or the bowels. Even catarrh of the stomach and bowels can be cured by DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, The Internal Remedy. Here is an instance of what this practically infallible remedy will do:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—Dear Sir: I have nearly finished the former bottle of Perrin's Pile Specific and am practically well. My case was one which most physicians would have pronounced incurable, as I was afflicted with a dysentery and compelled to go to the toilet room from three to five times each day and each time would bleed from one-half to one teacupful. I had to resort to bandages and absorbent cotton to check the flow of blood, and now the past ten or twelve days there has been no sign of bleeding and my appetite is good; have gained ten pounds in weight and feel like a new lease of life was given me.

Very truly yours,
T. R. HARRIS,
October 20th, 1902. Yerington, Nev.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold by all reliable druggists at $1.00 the bottle, under an absolute guarantee to refund the money should this great internal remedy fail to cure.

MANY ARE KILLED

As Result of Explosion of Fireworks In Philadelphia.

Six Bodies Recovered; Loss of Life May Reach Twenty.

Philadelphia, June 27.—Fire, the result of an explosion of fireworks in the Diamond Light Supply company's factory today, is thought to have caused the death of many employes and the serious injury of several firemen. It is reported by the police that of the twenty-two girls employed on the third floor of the factory, only two have been accounted for.

At 3:45 p. m. five bodies had been taken out, and the police and firemen say there are more dead under the debris.

The death list may reach twenty or more, as six bodies had been taken out up to 4 p. m., and the firmen say fifteen more are buried under the ruins.

UNIQUE ORGANIZATION

Proposed For The Home By Chicago Minister.

Chicago, June 27.—Rev. David D. De Long, in an address today before the Congregational ministers of Chicago, advocated the founding of a unique organization. He said:

"We have homes for children, orphans' anchorages, old people's homes, humane societies, and in fact organizations for the care of nearly all classes of society, but we have no association whose duty it is to conserve the most sacred of all institutions—the family. I think every church should establish a home mending society, whose duty will be to act as peacemaker in all disputes in families in the vicinity of the church. If the father and mother disagree and are in imminent danger of separating let a member of the home mending society call at the home of the family and arbitrate the dispute so as to save the family and preserve the home.

"If a parent cannot get along with a child and the dispute threatens the security of the home, let the society step in and offer its services in bringing about peace. I am going to try the plan in my church and I think every other congregation in Chicago would do well to follow my example. I believe the plan will result in much good every year by preventing the disruption of hundreds of homes.

IS TO BE LIVELY

Congressman Bede's Idea of Coming Democratic Convention.

Thinks It All Useless—Considering Roosevelt Certain.

"I don't think there is anything to the charge that the last session of congress was extravagant," said Congressman J. Adam Bede this afternoon.

"I know that on our rivers and harbors list we had only $3,000,000 and we ought to have had $50,000,000. Owing to it being a presidential year, both parties were inclined to hold off and do as little as possible in order to stem the great tendency there is to criticize at such a time.

"Everybody seemed to want to get along on as little as they could and by economy free themselves from any suspicion of prodigality with the public funds. If the presidential contest had not been so near I have no doubt that a great many things would have been undertaken which would have meant the expenditure of much more money than was used, but they were put off for the reason that there was no opportunity to get them before the people in the right light."

"Do you think the Democrats will nominate Hearst at the St. Louis convention?"

"Now that's a hard thing to say. You cannot tell what the Democrats are going to do there. I believe, that unless they abrogate the two-thirds rule they are going to have a very lively time, in fact I should not wonder if they would have a very pretty fight on their hands. There are a great many people who will be in that convention who feel bound to Bryan and he is a man who is against Parker and will probably fight him to the last. I would not be a bit surprised to see a very strong sentiment there for Mr. Cleveland, and believe if there were a possibility of their getting him to run that he would be nominated in remarkably short order.

"But so far as that is concerned Mr. Bryan and his followers would fight against Cleveland harder, maybe, than they would against any other one man that could be picked at the St. Louis convention. But it seems to me that the best thing that the Democrats can do this year would be to nominate some one in short order, for they might as well realize that they have very little chance of electing anybody—their case is practically hopeless this campaign."

"Don't you believe that the accusations that Roosevelt is arbitrary and egotistical will hurt him?"

"Not to any extent. There may be a senator here and there or a member of the house who feels slighted if the president goes ahead and does a thing without consulting him, but the mass of people care nothing about that. The voters are not worrying about any such trait as that in the president. You take the average voter and he wants to have a man in office that does things and the man that does them is the man that he is for, and I believe the president stands exceedingly well with the voters on that account."

Mr. Bede asked about the governorship campaign here and seemed to be much interested.

"But St. Louis county is not usually to be taken as an index of the rest of the state," said he. "In political campaigns she often shows a peculiar independence."

Mr. Bede came in yesterday and left this afternoon on the Lake Superior limited for his home in Pine City. He will go shortly to Iowa to keep some lecture dates and expects to be back in Duluth probably in about ten days. In regard to J. B. Cotton's speech at Chicago, Mr. Bede said he was much pleased.

"They could hear him all over the place and that's what pleased the people," said he. "You know the great trouble is so often that on occasions of that kind a speaker cannot be heard, and no matter what he may be in a general way, no matter how good a logician, or fine thinker, he does not take when he cannot be heard."

Mr. Bede seemed to be in very good spirits and it is to be assumed that he found most of his political fences in the best of repair, although he said he was so busy that he would not have as much time to see his own people as he would like, owing to his engagements in various places. He was tackled going away on the train by a man who wanted to talk postoffice to him.

BARRIER IS PASSED

By Oku's Army and Russian Position Rendered Untenable.

Loss of Transports Causes Cessation of Japanese Advance.

Chicago, June 27.—A special to the Daily News from Tokio says: It is stated by the war office that Gen. Oku's army has passed the mountain barrier, protecting the right flank and rear of Kuropatkin's forces, in the passes between Kai Chou and Motien pass. The Russian position has thus been rendered strategically untenable, and it is expected it will be made actually untenable in the course of the operations of the coming week, unless the Russians resist the advance of the Japanese more successfully than hitherto. In that event Gen. Kuroki will be relieved ot the necessity of attacking frontally the main stronghold of the Muscovites between Feng Huan Chen and the railway.

LOSS OF TRANSPORTS.

Liao Yang, June 27.—The apparent cessation of the Japanese advance in the northern part of Liao Tung peninsula is attributed here to the loss of two or three transports carrying ammunition. It is also reported that the naval battle off Port Arthur caused an alteration in the Japanese plans.

CONFISCATE SHIP.

Belfast, Ireland, June 27.—The owners of the British steamer Allanton, captured by the Russian Vladivostok fleet during its recent raid in the Straits of Korea, received a cable message from Vladivostok today saying the prize court there had decided to confiscate the ship and her cargo. The owners sent a dispatch to Vladivostok instructing the captain of the Allanton to appeal. In the meanwhile the British government has asked Russia to furnish full details of the seizure of the steamer.

CHINESE MUST LEAVE.

Che Foo, June 27.—Chinese arriving in junks from the vicinity of Port Arthur report that the Russians have ordered all Chinese to leave the place. A number of shells fell in the town of Port Arthur during the bombardment by the Japanese on June 23, but no damage was done, many of the shells failing to explode.

A Japanese officer who went on board the Pei Yang and the Mio Tiao islands, 75 miles south of Port Arthur, told the Chinese that one Japanese torpedo boat was damaged during the engagement off Port Arthur on June 23 and sank in the gulf of Chi Li. The officer stated that two other Japanese torpedo boats were badly damaged.

STYLES IN EARS.

It has been said that slant-eyed folk are geniuses—not the slant, however, of the Chinese or Japanese eye, but the opposite, says Victor Smith in the New York Press. What of the lobules of the ear? One of the prettiest women in New York has cried her eyes out, figuratively speaking, many a time because her ears are lobeless. What should be the lobule grows fast to the side of her neck. She often wears her hair a la Merode to hide this defect. But a great many people are built that way. They have no soft, depending, fleshy part of the ear, so highly characteristic of the human race. Some anthropometrists contend that lobules indicate a higher order of development; yet the chimpanzee's ear is more perfect in this respect than that of multitudes of the human race.

The ear in its physical aspect is wonderfully interesting and as an adjunct may indicate character. I know a man who can flap his ears. He is as common as pig tracks, but is neither ass nor donkey. Pierpont Morgan has a medium-sized ear with heavy, thick lobules. They lie comparatively close to his head. J. A. Stewart's ears resemble a Lynnhaven bay oyster. Arthur Housman's ears are of good size and lobuless. Cornelius Cuyler's ears grow into his neck where there should be lobules. Samuel Spencer has no lobules and his ears are enormous. George Gould has no lobules. Calvin S. Brice had the largest ears in Wall street. It is generally believed that large ears indicate honesty.

Archbishop Corrigan's loubles grew fast to his neck; Archbishop Farley has well-defined lobules. The ears of Father Mooney and Father O'Farrell are lobuless, also those of Father McMillan. Both Tucker's lobules have a death grip on his neck. Among the able lobuless lawyers are Henry Lynde Sprague, Randolph Gugenhelmer, Bourke Cockran, John M. Bowers, George L. Rives, George G. De Witt, John T. Lockman, E. W. Sheldon, C. G. Kidder, W. C. Gulliver, W. M. Barnum, William Palmer Dixon. Robert Weeks De Forest, Asa Aling, Frederick W. Stevens and John Whalen. John F. Carroll's lobules belong to his neck. The great banker, James Stillman, is lobeless. The Astors—John, Jacob and William Waldorf—are lobeless. So is I. Townsend Burden. To ear or not to ear—that is the question

FOR THE SAKE OF THE FLAG

By Mary C. Hermon.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The smattering of fire crackers, the boom of small cannon, and the shouts of the boys awoke the young teacher from her early morning slumber.

It was still dark, and the moon, near its setting, cast a wan spectral-like light through the open west window of the room. Its white rays fell on the folds of a beautiful silk flag which hung across the back of an invalid's chair revealing in the uncertain flickering light that fell through the leaves of the clustering ivy, a dark field set with stars, and billowy folds of stripes—crimson and white—the work of the patriotic teacher's nimble fingers.

She sat up in her white cot and smiled, as the recollection of the past day's arduous toil, and the joyful realization of its completion dawned upon her consciousness.

"Arnold will carry it at the head of the procession tomorrow. Dear flag," she murmured as she stretched out her arms toward the beautiful ensign, "your colors symbolize the characteristics of our young love. True as the azure of the sky overhead, steadfast as a star, and warm as the crimson tide which feeds the patriot's heart. Today, dear flag, he whom I cherish with an undying affection, will bear thee aloft, because in all the village there is none as worthy as he."

She lay there thinking, thinking—weaving a beautiful fabric of dreams such as love and youth alone can dream, while the late moon dropped down behind the rim of the western horizon, and the darkness which precides the dawn, filled the room.

Day, rosy and bright, marched triumphantly through the gates of the east. The noises in the street grew more tumultuous. The bonfires died out on the surrounding hill tops, and from the upper windows of stores and factories, long streamers of gay bunting fluttered in the morning breeze.

In a large, white cottage whose spacious veranda was covered with ivy, and over whose front door hung a torn and soiled flag, that had passed through the battle storms of the rebellion, sat two contented people chatting over the coming attractions of the day.

"And they've chosen you for the standard bearer, Arnold," the stately, sweet-faced matron was saying as her eyes rested on the eager face of the young man who sat at the opposite end of the table. "This, I understand, is to be no military parade. Everybody is to march, or didn't you say so, Arnold?"

"Yes, mather. That is—" He hesitated and a look of sadness dimmed the glad light in his handsome eyes. Then he added, slowly: "Everybody who can march, of course. Poor Nell! She'll find this day rather lonely and dull, I'm afraid."

"Dinah has fixed up a couch for her on the front porch of their house where she can see the procession. Their house is just opposite the park. She can hear the music, and almost every word from the speaker's stand."

The conversation was interrupted by a rap at the door, and a little girl, dressed in a fresh pink dress, handed Mrs. West a large parcel. "The flag, mother!" exclaimed Arnold, enthusiastically, as his mother removed the wrapping paper. "What a beauty! It's a present to our company, you know, only today it was to have been presented and float from the head of the procession and float from the top of the flag pole over the speaker's stand in the park. Just see how beautifully it is made! Poor little Nell, she must have grown weary over the task!"

"It is a work of love," said Mrs. West, gently. "Love never wearies of its tasks."

"If that scoundrel of a brother of her's hadn't been, Nell would have been as strong and healthy as any girl in town. She frightened her horse, you know, over at Dexter, where she was teaching three years ago. She was just getting up in her carriage, when the animal took fright, and her dress caught some way in the wheel. Oh, I can't bear to think of the rest! Will never cared, though."

"And it is true that he has joined the army?"

"That's what people say. He never writes home. Come to think of it, the story finally leaked out that he stole several hundred dollars of Nell's hard-earned money, when he skipped. She had saved it for the purpose of paying off the mortgage on the home. I think that almost broke her heart. She never said a word to me about it, though."

"And the mortgage?"

"Was paid."

"Yes, I did it."

"And Nell never knew?"

"I never told her."

"They say that old Dinah will soon be too old to care for the home any longer. When she goes is who will care for Nell?"

"I will, mother."

"As your wife, Arnold? That can scarcely be. She will be a helpless cripple for life."

"The more will she need the support of my strong arms. Yes, mother, as my wife."

"And you are to resign your position in the army?"

The young man was silent. A brilliant future seemed to open before him. Love and duty had struggled long and hard with ambition, but love won. He was now ready to tear off his military trappings, and cast them without a murmur at the feet of the woman he loved.

"He is not a hero who falters when duty demands a costly sacrifice," he murmured.

"Nell is my affianced wife. She was so before that dreadful accident. The promise I then gave her can never be broken. My country does not need my service now. Nell does." He touched the shining folds of the beautiful flag reverently.

"God, duty, love and humanity—these are my watchwords. When my country needs me I am ready!"

The early spring blossoms were just opening their pale blue eyes to the light, and the newly-arrived robins and larks were carolling gaily, when the news of our declaration of war with Spain, spread like wild-fire over the country. The fierce hatred of oppression, that is always lurking in the heart of every true American, suddenly burst forth into the stirring cry "Cuba Libre!" And in threatening undertone followed the memorable words "Remember the Maine!"

On the hillside near the village, where many a gleaming shaft of marble told of those sleeping underneath, was a newly made grave. Heaped on the brown clods, not yet touched by the spring verdure, was a profusion of hot-house flowers. The frolicsome April winds scattered their petals as they swept by, and the glad sunshine and smiling sky all seemed to belong to a world where tombs mark not the end of human endeavor, and where the noisy clang of war's summons never disturb the placid air.

In the village below everybody was astir. Farewells were said that wrung tears from gentle eyes and brought indescribable anguish to loving hearts. Only young Capt. Arnold West seemed unmoved by the grief which parting brings. Death had robbed him of his heart's best treasure, and the far off battlefield welcomed him with bloody, outstretched arms. He responded gladly to humanity's call and the dear flag went with him.

In the steaming trenches before Santiago, a young private lay dying. His side had been torn open by a shell, and from the ghastly wound his life oozed away. He seemed oblivious to his surroundings, and his glassy eyes and livid pain-drawn features told unmistakably of the near approach of death.

Around him were the dead and the dying. Groans and curses and prayers mingled with the roar of the battle, and his feeble cries for water were drowned in the fearful din. The noontide sun beat down unmercifully on his bare head. "Oh, for some kind shelter, and for one drop of water!" He dipped a finger in the pool of blood at his side and pressed it to his lips. "Heaven for just one drop of water!" he groaned.

Suddenly some one raised his head and pressed a canteen to his parched lips. The mist of death that was gathering in his eyes, for a moment cleared away. He looked up in the face of this good Samaritan and smiled. Then a look of recognition flashed into his eyes. "Arnold," he whispered. "I—I've failed to do my duty as a citizen, but not as a soldier. For the sake of the flag under which we are both fighting, will you—can you forgive."

His passed as strength failed him. The beseeching gaze he rivited on Capt. West's face melted the heart of the bereaved lover, and swept away the bitterness of years. He grasped the hand of the dying soldier and bending down over him with all the tenderness of a woman, he said in a broken voice:

"Yes, Will, I forgive—for Nell's sweet sake, and for the sake of the flag!"

WHEN IS A WOMAN OLD?

That a woman may not continue to be a member of a young people's church society after she is 30 years of age—according to the action of the United Presbyterians of Greenville, Pa.—is a rule that may well be seriously opposed. And to say that a woman of 30 is too old to belong to a young people's Bible class is quite preposterous says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

It is, of course, as absurd to say that a woman of 30 is old as it is to say that a woman of 40 or 50 is old. In fact, it is quite possible to agree with Aunt Louisa Eldridge when she says on this subject:

"Years have less than anything else in the world to do with the aging of a woman. There are some women who never grow old, and some who have never been young. Age is a matter of temperament. A woman in her 20th year has just awakened to the possibilities of life."

Save in the woman's suffrage states, where the age of a woman is made of record in the registration lists, there is, morover, no way of determining when a woman is 21 or more. It is therefore difficult to see how the Greenville system can be made practical. No young woman of 30 in a Bible class is going to admit that fact, and a woman of 20 who looks to be 21, or even 18, as so many do, is a foolish creature when she declares that she is no longer eligible for the young people's society. And if she is too foolish, where is she to go? To the middle aged study class, where her bubbling youth would be entirely out of place, or to the old folks' Bible society, where she would appear a mere infant? Rather she would sever her connection with a church that made so hard a rule, and—assuming her example were generally followed—young women who are over 30 would thus cut themselves adrift from things spiritual.

No wonder at 30 is "too old" to belong to any Bible class. Nor at 40, nor at 50. As Aunt Louisa says, age is merely a matter of temperament. Dewey, who is 70 years young, has as much right to a place in a young people's Bible class as has a miss of 15.

No age limit can properly apply to Bible classes in these days of eternal youth.

ON THE DOCKS IN MANILA.

A cockpit and a church are the especial attractions offered to the laborers on the big government breakwater contract at Manila, says the New York Herald.

A million "long tons" of rock were to be moved from a quarry thirty miles away and dumped in the harbor, where a safer harbor is being developed.

In the early stages of this work the contractors used American white labor, but this gave place to the negro (American), Chinese and Japanese, until finally native labor was drilled, and it has proved satisfactory.

At its quarry at Sisiman the contracting company has erected a village of nipa houses, in which over a thousand natives live. They do all the work of drilling and handling rock, except that of derrick engineers, blacksmiths, etc. The natives are well housed and fed, they have their church and schoolhouse a native doctor to look after their physical wants, and a native padre to minister the offices of their church.

They have a band, made up among themselves, and a cockpit and dancing for recreation and amusement. To handle the native laborer successfully high-grade white foreman are essential. The average native is mentally a child and must be taught how to work.

NOT A BABY, BUT A HAND ORGAN.

She was wheeling a baby carriage down Fifth avenue, says the New York Sun. In it stood a little old hand organ, which she stopped every now and then to play.

The picture she made was an oddly conspicuous one, even for New York, and people glanced at her with interest. One passerby stopped to ask her about herself.

The first question the woman did not understand. She looked anxious, and explained in broken English that she had "la permission" to play.

"You are French?"

She nodded.

In French the paserby asked her if she had been playing the hand organ long.

"No, but now it is necessaire," was the reply.

"Have you children?"

"Yes."

"Your husband?"

"Je suis veuve—I am a widow."

"Have you been here long?"

"Five years."

As she talked she kept turning the handle of the organ, which emitted a faint, wheezy sound that in nowise prevented the questioner from hearing her softly-uttered words. Her voice and manner were pretty.

She did not seem at all impressed with the fact that she was doing a conspicuous thing. She wheeled the baby carriage along with the same domestic gait she would unconsciously have assumed had she been trundling one of her children through the street.

Probably when the wolf had poked open her door too wide that morning she had simply said to her children: "C'est necessaire" and taken the hand organ out for a walk, instead of the youngest child.

Julius Caesar Is Conquered.

"A certain friend of mine," remarked Irving Bachelor, the novelist, the other day, "was entertaining some bachelor friends at his home one evening. The host's wife did not appear at the party, which was entirely a stag affair. After the highballs had held sway for an hour or so the topic of matrimony fell under discussion. Many views were expressed. The host, when his turn came, pounded his fist on the table and said:

"'Boys, when you get married, follow my example and be a Julius Caesar in your own home.'

"Just then there came a voice from upstairs:

"'Julius Caesar, come to bed—immediately!'

"And he went."

GEN. KUROPATKIN DECIDES TO WITHDRAW HIS ARMY NORTHWARD WITHOUT GIVING BATTLE TO THE JAPANESE

Hot Battle Occurs Near Fen Shui Ling, In Which Russians Are Defeated and Japs Occupy the City.

A Dispatch From Tokio Says Another Russian Battleship Has Been Discovered on the Rocks.

H. J. Middleton, a Valued Correspondent of the Associated Press In Manchuria, Dies at the Front.

St. Petersburg, June 28, 7:10 p. m.—The Associated Press is informed on good authority that Gen. Kuropatkin has decided to withdraw northward.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—The emperor has received the following dispatch from Gen. Kuropatkin dated Liao Yang, June 27:

"The Japanese attacked our forces occupying Mo Tien Fen Shui and Ta passes, June 26. Our infantry and cavalry retreated, persuaded that the advancing divisions of the Japanese army which were operating against each of the three passes were stronger than our detachments. In the attack on Ta pass the Japanese guards, besides other regiments, participated. The Japanese made a frontal and flank attack in considerable force on both sides of this position. The Japanese troops occupied Fen Shui and Mo Tien passes during the morning of June 27.

Tokio, June 28.—After a hot fight which lasted for six hours yesterday morning, June 27, the Takushan division of the Japanese army completely defeated five battalions of Russian infantry, which, supported by two regiments of cavalry and sixteen guns, occupied Fen Shui Ling, twenty miles northwest of Siu Yen. The Russians finaly fell back in the direction of Shi Mu Cheng. The Japanese casualities aggregated about 100 killed and wounded. Maj. Oba was killed during the battle.

London, June 28.—A dispatch to the Central News from Tokio says it is reported that another Russian battleship has been discovered stranded off Tiger Rock. It is presumed she was wrecked while returning to Port Arthur after the recent naval engagement.

NEWS FROM PORT ARTHUR.

Conditions That Are Prevailing In Besieged City.

Che Foo, June 28.—Letters received here today from Port Arthur, dated June 23, give no news, but convey an idea of the conditions prevailing in the besieged city. One writer says the civilians, though knowing something of what is occurring, are ignorant of the progress of the war. Little information leaks out. Most of the non-combatants have caves in the hills or underground cells, where they spend the nights in safety. Bands play occasionally in the parks, and the prices of food are slightly higher. The Chinese are suffering severely in many ways as a result of the fighting.

The food on the junks is provided by the government to enable the Chinees to leave Port Arthur. The Red Cross nurses, in the absence of regular work, have established eating houses for the needy.

CORRESPONDENT DIES.

Valued Member of Associated Press Staff Succumbs.

Newchwang, June 28.—H. J. Middleton, the Associated Press correspondent with the Russian headquarters near Liao Yang, in Manchuria, died Sunday from enteric dysentery.

Henry John Middleton, the first American war correspondent to lose his life at the front in the present conflict, was representing the Associated Press at Gen. Kuropatkin's headquarters, near Liao Yang. He became sick with enteric dysentery less than a week ago and only on Sunday was a dispatch received from him, in which he requested that a substitute be sent to relieve him. He was abou 33 years old, unmarried, and was born in London.

Mr. Middleton was a vivid descriptive writer, a linguist, a student and one of the best posted of men on international affairs. He became connected with the London bureau of the Asociated Press in 1892 and filled almost every position, except superintendent in that office. From the first he developed a remarkable aptitude and earnestness in his profession, his constant endeavor being thoroughly to familiarize himself with whatever subject he undertook. He served as London correspondent of the New York Evening Post for more than year, earning high apreciation from that journal. He also reported for the Associated Press at the Vigilant-Britannica races in the waters about Scotland, Ireland and England, securing many advantages over experienced yachting correspondents who followed those raceas.

While his career contained many remarkable journalistic feats which brought him praise, perhaps his most brilliant work was in reporting for the Asociated Press the Dreyfus trial at Rennes, where he made a name for himself in Competition with such well-known men as Julian Ralph and Harry D. Stevens, whose admiration and respect he obtained at that time. Though unassisted, he often forwarded four and five columns a day of the interesting pictures and dramatic incidents of that great case.

Mr. Middleton also gave exclusively to the American papers the account of the final raid and capture of Fort Chabral, the name given the house in Paris where, during the Dreyfus excitement, Guerin fortified himself and defied the French authorities.

When the Associated Press opened an independent bureau in Paris in the fall of 1899 for the concentration there of all Southern European news, Mr. Middleton was sent there as assistant to the manager, and when the latter was recalled became Paris correspondent of the Associated Press, which positon he filled until the winter of 1902. Then he was brought to New York, where he acted as night cable editor. Upon the opening of the Pacific cable at San Francisco Mr. Middleton was sent to inaugurate the cable department of the Associated Press in that city.

With the imminence of the Russo-Japanese war he was among those drafted for that service by the Associated Press. He sailed from San Francisco Jan. 15 for Yokohama, thence to Shanghai. With the progress of events he went to Seoul, but on account of his knowledge of languages was finaally ordered to join the Russian headquarters in Manchuria, and to do so went to Che Foo, from Che Foo to Pekin, thence to Tien Tsin and from the latter point to Newchwang, where he entered the Russian lines and proceeded to Mukden, joining Viceroy Alexieff's headquarters. Later he proceeded to Liao Yang and there recently reported several engagements.

Mr. Midlton had an attractive personal character, which won him devoted friends wherever he went because his nature was a loyal and generous one. Modest and retiring, he was a man of indefatigable energy in his work and tireless in his conscientious devotion to duty, making of himself one of the most respected and trusted correspondents the Associated Press ever had in its service.

Mrs. Hannah Middlton, his mother, resides in London.

RUSSIANS INDIGNANT

Over the Alleged Brutality of Japanese Soldiers.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—The Novoe Vremya today, calling attention to the statement that Don Jamie De Bourbon was an eye witness to the killing of Russian wounded at Vafangow, declares that something must be done quickly to prevent the war degenerating into the senseless brutality which the Japanese practices indicate. The paper urges the Russian newspaper correspondents in the field to show up the authors of this brutality and secure the evidence of eye witnesses and photographs in order that The Hague convention may be invoked.

The sudden cessation of newspaper dispatches from theater of war tends to confirm the belief that the armies are about to engage. Most of the military critics take the view that a big battle is imminent, although the Novoe Vremya's expert thinks that a pitched battle now is more attractive to the Japanese generals than to Gen. Kuropatkin, saying that the latter does not need precipitancy as Russian reinforcements continue to arrive, but if the Japanese want a battle they must hasten as only a fortnight remains before the rains set in.

The army organ, whose comment was written before the arrival of Lieut. Gen. Sakharoff's dispatch last night, points out the difficult, mountainous country through which Gen. Kuroki's columns are moving and finds in Gen. Oku's withdrawal southward, either that the Japanese are trying to draw off part of Kuropatkin's army, or their decision, in view of the near approach of the rainy season, to arrest their further advance. In the latter case, the enemy would be able to hold the greater part of the Liao Tung peninsula until the resumption of active operations in August.

Al the papers consider almost inexplicable the failure to receive further reports from Tokio of the sea fight off Port Arthur and are reproducing with great prominence dispatches from German papers to the effect that Admiral Togo, in his official reports, did not claim positively to have sunk a Russian battleship or to have crippled two other vessels.

FEAR THE BRIGANDS

Are Again Active In Vicinity of Newchwang.

Newchwang, June 28.—Brigands are again active in this vicinity. They attacked a village, two miles south of here, last night, and the natives and foreign residents fear that on account of the Russian reverses, if the Japanese troops do not arrive within a few days, the brigands will become bolder and enter this city. This they could do easily, as it lies practically unprotected. The Russians have less than seventy-five men in the city proper, with a few Chinese police, who, it is believed, are in league with the outlaws. All the foreign residents, the British especially, are unable to understand the reason which prompted the British consul to report to the London government that there is nothing to fear from these brigands.

Twenty military representatives, who were permitted to come here from Ta Tche Kiao for supplies, were obliged to promise not to talk of the Russian movements.

A native reports that one division of Gen. Kuroki's army was fifteen miles south of Ta Tche Kiao at 5 o'clock yesterday is not confirmed. If true, it indicates that the Japanese plans for a fight there yesterday must have been upset by the heavy rains. Two regiments marched through here from Kai Chou toward Ta Tche Kiao yesterday.

THREE BADLY DAMAGED.

Che Foo, June 28.—Chinese who left Port Arthur on June 24 say that only four battleships, five cruisers and the torpedo boats left the harbor on June 23. Of these three returned badly damaged, but none sank. The several large ships previously damaged carried no guns.

On June 24, the Japanese main army was within fourteen miles of Port Arthur. Their scouts were nearer. Natives of Manchuria have not been ordered out of Port Arthur, but only the natives of other provinces, and 1000 of these have left.

The hospital at Liao Yang is overcrowded.

Letters from Feng Wang Cheng say the Japanese transport service is demoralized owing to the wretched condition of the roads.

CORRESPONDENT DEAD.

Tien Tsin, June 28.—It is reported that Edward F. Knight, the correspondent of the London Morning Post, with the Japanese army, was killed at Wafang-Tien.

Several engagements between the Russian and Japanese forces have been reported as having occurred at or near Wafang-Tien, that town being occupied by the Japanese June 19, and it is possible that if the report of Mr. Knight's death be true, he was killed in one of these battles. Spectators at one of the engagements state that they saw three horsemen appear on a hill, one of whom resembled either an American or British attache. This man fell from his horse when the Russians fired and was evidently killed.

VLADIVOSTOK FLEET OUT.

Tokio, June 28.—An unconfirmed report has been received from island of Hokkaido that ships resembling the Russian Vladivostok fleet had appeared off there on June 27. Similar reports have ben received from other places along the northern coast of Japan. The navy office does not give any credence to these reports.

DASTARDLY OUTRAGE TO DUMONT'S AIRSHIP

Miscreant at World's Fair Grounds Cut Gasbag In Twenty Places.

SANTOS-DUMONT.

St. Louis, June 28.—Some time during the night the gas bag of Santos-Dumont's airship was cut and slashed in such a manner as to preclude all possibility of its being repaired in time to allow an ascension on July 4. The work was apparently done with a jack knife. There are at least twenty long rips in the bag, and Professor Carl Meyers, who has charge of the aeronautic contests, declares to day that it will take at least two weeks to repair the damage.

Mr. Dumont made an examination of the damaged bag and said:

"It is just as I told the fair people. This place is not secure enough."

"What will you do?" asked a representative of the Associated Press.

"I don't know," was the reply.

"I must first see just how much damage has been done. It will be impossible to get a new bag, and if an ascension is made, this one must be repaired. I can think of no reason why anyone should want to destroy my airship."

Prof. Meyer made a careful examination of the cuts and said:

"I can repair the damage, but it will probably take two weeks and possibly longer. I cannot tell definitely until the bag is taken from the crate and spread out. I have some material which is very nearly like that used in the construction of the damaged bag. To me the cutting seems to have been done with a dull jacknife. In some places it has gone through all the folds on the slat and in others only through one or two. This indicates that the knife was dull and handled in a hurry. I can conceive of no reason why anyone should want to destroy the bag and I believe the work was pure vandalism with no other object in view but the malicious destruction of property."

Secretary Walter B. Stevens of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition company did not know what action would be taken by the exposition company, but said that proper measures would be taken to apprehend the vandal and for the future protection of the airship.

When the damage was done, the shed that sheltered the gac bag was patrolled by a Jefferson guard and a special watchman who was one of Mr. Dumont's employes. Neither saw the vandal and the damage was not discovered until the workmen were about to take the bag from the box.

WISCONSIN GAINS STRENGTH IN POUGHKEEPSIE REGATTA

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 28.—Overcast skies and other indications of unpropitious weather characterized the early hours of regatta day, and what little boating enthusiasm was in evidence during the morning was seriously dampened thereby. But as the hours passed, the northwesterly wind, which has prevailed for forty-eight hours, cleared the sky somewhat and a fine afternoon was prophesied, especially at the turn of the tide. The lateness of the hour at which the races are held pospones till noon of race day, the appearance of any enthusiasm, as the people nearly come to Poughkeepsie late and leave immediately upon the conclusion of the last race.

Cornell is still a long favorite in betting and prophecy, though the almost unprecedented fact that two of her men, the Foote cousins, are to row in both the four-oared and 'varsity races, introduces an element of uncertainty, and leads many to believe that she may have to sacrifice the four-oared race for the sake of the 'varsity. Wisconsin constantly gained strength today and there were many people representing all shades of sympathy who shook their heads over Columbia as a mysterious factor, for little is known in detail of Columbia's work, which has been done far up the river, where her crews could be free from observation. The general impression is that Columbia has been gaining materially in the matter of endurance, which was her weak spot last year.

ROBBED OF $12,000 WHILE ON CAR

Philadelphia, June 28.—Walter Scott, who says his home is in New York, reported to the police today that he had been robbed of $12,000 in gold while on a Pullman car, between Pittsburg and Harrisburg. Scott said he had been in Dawson City, Alaska, for several years, and acquired his fortune there by mining. He thinks the money was stolen while he was asleep and thrown from the window, and that the robberes then left the train at Harrisburg and returned to the point where the money was thrown off. Harrisburg and Pittsburg police officials are working on the case.

Convention at St. Paul Broke Up In a Row.

Dunn Delegates Held Separate Convention.

Two Conventions Also Held In Cass County.

St. Paul, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The hottest pre-convention gubernatorial fight in the history of the Republican party in Minnesota had its culmination today in the holding of county conventions in each county for the selection of delegates to the state convention on Thursday. The preliminary caucuses have been going on since last Friday, and each of the leading candidates is claiming a majority of the delegates to be chosen today. The candidates for the nomination are Robert C. Dunn, former state auditor; Judge Loren W. Collins, who resigned a seat on the supreme court to enter the race, and Former Congressman Eddy.

The principal fight has been between Dunn and Collins, and their partisans have been extremely bitter. The most conservative estimates give Dunn a slight lead in the districts outside of the large cities, and it is probable that the delegates from Ramsey county (St. Paul), Hennepin county (Minneapolis), and St. Louis county (Duluth), will hold the balance of power. There is, however, a likelihood of a large number of contesting delegations, as there have been bolting conventions in several of the counties. Two delegations will apply for recognition from Ramsey county, there having been a split in the county convention held this morning.

The regular Ramsey county Republican convention broke up in a row this morning while the vote for temporary chairman was in progress. There will be two conventions. The Dunn adherents, under the leadership of Eli Warner, bolted and went to Raudenbusch hall to hold a separate convention. The Collins supporters remained at Federation hall and went ahead with what they termed the regular convention. The break came when the Dunn adherents realized, so they said, that they could not get fair play in the regular convention.

The Collins and Dunn factions in Ramsey county after the bolt of this morning, held their separate conventions and each instructed for the candidate which its delegates favored. They will now go before the state convention each claiming to be the convention of the majority of the delegates elected by the Republican voters of the county and therefore the regular convention. Each will claim the right to recognition as such.

The bolt this morning was startling because of its suddenness. It came while the election of a temporary chairman was in progress. The contesting delegations were, of course, refused the right to vote, and the trouble occurred over this.

HENNEPIN FOR COLLINS

And Another Bolt Is Not Improbable.

Minneapolis, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Republican county convention of Hennepin county met this afternoon at 1 o'clock. Previous to the convening of the delegates the excitement was of the keenest kind. It was apparent that the struggle would be a close one and every delegate was pursued for a vote with a vigor that was of the most energetic kind. The managers on both sides were lining up their men throughout the morning and endeavoring to decipher the tactics of the opposition. When, during the morning, the news came that the Dunn men had bolted in Ramsey county, it was like a thunderbolt, and the air thereafter was filled with rumors of a possible bolt in Hennepin if things did not suit.

The struggle over the temporary organization was a very close one. The Collins men made good their claims that they had carried the county, but it was by so narrow a margin as to be uncomfortable. They lined up 292 votes for their man, while the Dunn men could muster but 279.

There were contests in five percincts, and, of course, these were barred out in the voting on the temporary chairmanship.

The committee on credentials was still out at 3:30 o'clock, and the threat was heard on all sides among the Dunn men that if their men were not seated in the contests the example of Ramsey county would be followed and there would be a bolt.

RETURNS BY COUNTIES.

St. Paul, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Returns which have been received from eighty-three counties

Returns from eighty-three counties give R. C. Dunn, of Princeton, 536 delegates in the state convention, conceding Hennepin county to Collins. Collins gets 415 delegates counting Hennepin, Eddy gets 44 and 175 delegates, including those from Ramsey county, are classed as doubtful.

These figures are based on the best information obtainable in the Twin Cities and allowances are made for the claims of the two candidates. James Martin, manager of Judge Collins' campaign, claims a working majority of 100 delegates in the state convention, and Joel P. Heatwole claims 609 delegates for Dunn, without counting Ramsey's 67. Mr. Heatwole concedes 176 to Collins, without Hennepin, 33 to Eddy and classes 178 as doubtful.

A SPLIT IN CASS COUNTY

Two Conventions Held and Two Sets of Delegates Chosen.

Walker, Minn., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two conventions were held here today. One elected a solid Dunn delegation and the other a solid Collins delegation. The feeling is intense, but no serious trouble is feared.

IN WOMAN'S SPHERE

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

Brooklyn Eagle: "You don't seem one bit elated over your success; anybody'd think it was an every day affair in your life to graduate with high honors." The college girl looked at her friend reflectively before she replied, then she said slowly:

"No, I can't say I'm not proud and happy over it and I feel that I'm mighty lucky to have secured a position to teach next year, but that's not everything. I've just been thinking of all I've missed.

"You must have had to take a mental microscope to find it."

"Not a bit of it and I'll put up the chocolates that you'll agree with me in the end. Now, look here," and the college girl straightened herself up and waved her hand judicially, "the case stands this way—I've spent four years in a college for women. I am about to begin my career as a teacher in a girls' boarding school. Very good, you say, but just listen to this." She picked up a paper from the table and read:

"'At Wisconsin university every girl has a choice of six beaus. This disparity is here moralized upon by those who claim that the girls are spoiled by an excess of attention and many of the most attractive girls suffer physicad breakdown attempting to go to several parties a week, receive a caller or so every day and keep up their work.' Another paper speaking of one of the coeducational colleges in the West declares that fully one-third of the girls leave college, engaged. A chum of mine at high school, who afterward specialized at a school of technology told me she had the time of her life there. She was one of the three girls in a class of sixty odd men and there were numerous unmarried professors, besides. Of course, I'm not saying that we girls at college didn't have a jolly time together, but there isn't one of us who wouldn't have given all her old shoes any day for even the sight of a good-looking young man. We'd have torn our hair gladly for the sake of being spoiled by excess of attention and we'd have welcomed a physical breakdown from a redundancy of parties and callers, with all the rapture of the early Christian martyr. When I look back upon all those wasted years and then consider the years to come at that girls' boarding school where I won't be able to get within halling distance of a man, why I am tempted to hire out as clerk in a department store and fal down in worship before the floor walker.'

The college girl tapped her foot impatiently on the floor and surveyed her friend in gloomy silence.

"But you are young and there is plenty of time," suggested the other consolingly.

"Young! hump! I'll never be any younger nor any better looking; that's sure and by the time all the bloom of youth is rubbed off and I'm 50 or so no man will want to look at me and I shan't care if he don't. No, my dear," concluded the college graduate, "if I had it to do over again, I'd try my luck with the co-eds." And the sympathetic friend nodded an emphatic assent.

The Way to a Man's Heart.

She didn't ride,
She didn't drive,
She didn't swim,
She didn't strive,
To be an athlete.
Nor was she
In society.
She didn't dance.
She didn't flirt,
She didn't try
To be an expert
In art and books;
She didn't train
A bulldog
On a silver chain.
She didn't golf,
She didnt' row,
She didn't take in Every show;
She didn't give
Her nurse distress
By straining it
On too much dress.
She didn't play,
She didn't sing,
She wasn't up
On everything.
But, men and women,
Understand,
That she could cook
To beat the band.

WILL SEIZE GOODS

Sheriff Butchart to Force Collection of Delinquent Taxes.

Personal Property of Those In Arrears Will Be Grabbed.

A sheriff's officer in a big red van will spread terror among tax delinquents next week if Sheriff Butchart carries out his threat made this morning, to seize and offer at auction the personal property of St. Louis county tax payers who have not yet paid up their taxes for 1903.

Furniture, rags, bric a brac, silverware, everything that can conveniently be packed in a wagon and carried away will be taken to settle the demands of the county aganist the owners of property who have not yet settled the tax bills which fell due on Jan. 1.

County Treasurer Whipple turned over tax bills to the amount of about $2000 to the sheriff's office on April 25 and since then several of the deputies have been busy looking them up and making collections. A large share of that sum has already been paid in. But now that six months have passed since the bills were due severe measures must be taken to realize the county's claim on those still outstanding.

The first of next week is the date set for the seizures.

Most of the bills turned over to the sheriff for collection are for small amounts and a great many of the people reported as delinquent on the ranges. The dullness which has effected the mining business in the county during the past few months has caused several hundred of the range miners to move away and as a result it has been impossible for the sheriff to locate many of the reported delinquents. Some of the bills will perhaps never be paid.

It is probable that the greater number of those who have been slow to pay their tax bills will settle when they see their carpets torn up and their house furnishings carried away. As has been the case in former years Sheriff Butchart expects that only a comparatively small number of people will permit their house to be denuded of equipment by the deputies.

Forman—Cogswell is to have a second banking institution, which will be called the Sargent County State bank. The principal stockholders will be O. C. Ecker, James N. Corothers and H. H. Taylor. The last named will be cashier. This will be Sargent county's eighth bank and it will be in operation by Aug. 1.

State's Attorney J. E. Bishop and wife have left upon a three months' trip, which will include a visit to the St. Louis exposition. S. A. Sweetman is acting state's attorney.

Van Dorn, the Agricultural College catcher, who has played with the Forman nine several weeks, had his leg broken in the Forman-Lidgerwood game on the last day of the hand tournament here. A benefit game for him will be played soon.

Linton—Paul Seer, a prisoner in the Emmons county jail, has made his escape. He was charged with grand larceny. He weighs about 180 pounds, is above the medium height, has a sandy mustache, partly bald, is about 35, and speaks with a strong French accent. The sheriff of the county has offered a reward for his recovery.

Lisbon—The townsite of Elliott, west of here, has been purchased by an Indiana corporation, which will endeavor to boom the place and have the Milwaukee railroad run through it.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Calumet—Capt. Joseph Picard, widely known in lake marine circles, is dead at his home in Lake Linden. He was born at L'Anse and was the son of Peter Picard, a famous man in his day, renowned throughout the northwest for his gigantic size and great endurance on the trail.

The elder Picard was a trader in the service of the Hudson Bay company for many years, and traveled a regular route between Georgian bay and James bay, in northern Canada. He could carry a 200-pound pack over this route and arrive at his destination three days sooner than any other man who ever attempted the journey with a similar load. "Captain Joe," as the younger Picard was known, was one of the oldest navigators on Lake Superior.

Bessemer—Smallpox is raging at the new town of Berglund at the foot of Lake Gogebic. Two physicians and the nurses sent to the place were attacked by the disease and more had to be sent on from here. The town has some 300 inhabitants, most of whom have left, the remainder being in bed.

Manistique—In attempting to jump from one car to another, C. Bissel, station agent for the Manistique, Marquette & Northern, at Manistique, fell in such a maner as to seriously fracture his leg just above the knee. He will be laid up a few weeks. Mr. Bissel was to leave in a few days to accept a position as chief clerk in the freight claim department of the G. R. & I., at Grand Rapids.

Iron Mountain—Ader & Gray, who recently engaged in the cordwood business at Iron Mountain, have closed a deal with the Wells Lumber company for fifteen forties of hardwood timber lands in the vicinity of Granite Bluff, north of the city. The firm has also bought the holdings of the Hardwood Timber company near Sawyer lake. Thirty men are chopping wood for the firm in the vicinity of Waucedah and fifteen at Sawyer Lake.

Menominee—The visions of wealth which have lurked in the minds of the Pfankuch family at Menominee, were bedimmed last week when a letter was received by Judge of Probate Grignon from Assistant United States Consul Taylor, of Saxeburg, stating that no such person as John Pfankuch lived in that part of Germany, and that neither had he or any of the German officials received any information concerning an estate left by Gustav Kempf of New York, amounting to $5,000,000 and of its being given to one John Pfankuch. The Pfankuchs of Menominee had relatives in Saxeburg and one of them was John Pfankuch.

Escanaba—Dr. M. F. McRae, representing, it is said, the claims of five different Escanaba creditors of the Hadden-Rodee company, has filed suit in the Delta county circuit court to recover $2000 out of which he claims he and his co-plaintiffs have been defrauded. No declaration is filed, the papers being in the form of a summons to the officials of the Hadden-Rodee company to make an appearance in court, when the necessary steps will be taken for continuing the suit and the declaration and bill of particulars will be filed later. The Escanaba office of the Hadden-Rodee company was closed by Deputy Sheriff Perrow, who took possession of the office furniture and equipment on an attachment secured by a number of local speculators. It is alleged by the Escanaba Journal that one patron who had paid $700 on stock purchased (or supposed to have been) for him by the firm, aggregating about $1000, received notice that he had been sold out, after he had hired stating that he was prepared to pay the balance at once and asking that the certificate for his stock be forwarded to him.

BACKACHE AND DIZZINESS

Most of the Ailments Peculiar To the Female Sex Are Due To Catarrh of the Pelvic Organs.

WOMEN WHO SUFFER

Listen to What Dr. Hartman Proposes To Do For You Without Charge.

Doubtless hundreds of thousands of women all over the United States have seen Dr. Hartman's offer in the papers—how he has undertaken to treat every woman suffering with any form of female disease who will write to him, free of charge.

To those who have not heard of this it may be said that Dr. Hartman is a physician and surgeon of great renown in medical circles, especially in the treatment of those diseases which women alone have to fear.

He has arranged to answer all letters that are sent to him from women troubled with any form of female weakness, free of charge, giving the benefit of knowledge which has cost him forty years to accumulate.

The medicines he prescribes are within the reach of any woman, and she can get them at any drug store.

All she is required to do is to send her name and address, together with her symptoms, duration of sickness and age.

Address Dr. S. B. Hartman, president of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. P. Schug, corner Lake and Orange streets, Appleton, Wis., writes:

"Before my daughter was born I suffered with intense backaches and a very tired wornout feeling, and felt that I must take something to sustain my strength. So many of my friends had used Peruna and praised it so highly that I decided to try a bottle or two. I found to my great relief that it reduced my backache and really strengthened me in a wonderful manner under the circumstances."—Mrs. P. Schug.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the ones given here. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving every month. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic and grateful letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

MRS. M. BRICKNER.
Mrs. Brickner's Remarkable Recovery Due to Peruna.

99 Eleventh Street,
Milwaukee, Wis.

"A short time ago I found my condition very serious, I had headaches, pains in the back, and frequent dizzy spells which grew worse every month. I tried two remedies before Peruna, and was discouraged when I took the first dose, but my courage soon returned. In less than two months my health was restored."—Mrs. M. Brickner.

The reason of so many failures to cure cases similar to the above is the fact that diseases peculiar to the female sex are not commonly recognized as being caused by catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

FEMALE TROUBLE NOT RECOGNIZED AS CATARRH.

THEY WANT ROOSEVELT

To Declare He Will Not Be Candidate In 1908.

That President Rossevelt should declare soon that he will not be a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1908 is the desire of certain aspirants for that honor. Senator Fairbanks practically is an avowed candidate for the head of the ticket four years hence, and Secretary Taft are said to be in line.

It is realized that if the Republicans are successful next November it will be Mr. Roosevelt's first election to the presidency. Evidently it is feared by those who want to lead in 1908 that he might seek the nomination again on the ground that inasmuch as he was forced to take the vice presidential nomination in 1900 and became president by accident, the traditional third term prohibition is not brought into question.

President Roosevelt is taking every precaution in his campaign to spike doubtful states and to prevent weakening of those already Republican. It is deemed likely that some of the party leaders will urge that it is a political necessity for him to assure the country that he has no idea of seeking the nomination again if he is elected this year. With such a declaration from him the aspirants for the Republican nomination could begin strengthening their fences.

Senator Fairbanks declined to be the vice presidential candidate at Philadelphia in 1900. Immediately afterwards he began his campaign and already had talked frankly on the subject to big party men, when President McKinley's assassination made Mr. Roosevelt president and the logical candidate for this year. Mr. Fairbanks' attitude for months past has demonstrated clearly that he was guarding carefully against anything that would impair his candidacy in 1908. Secretary Shaw has dodged the vice presidential lightning persistently, and his ambition to be president is the only logical explanation. He would be well beyond 60 years old if he waited until 1912 to become a candidate.

Senator Foraker long has held presidential aspirations, and he likewise is one who would be considered too old to seek to lead his party in 1912. Governor Odell will be a statesman out of a job after his preseent term expires, and after his prominence and aggressiveness at Chicago few public men in Washington would be surprised to see him become an active candidate. More than one former colleague of Elihn Root in the cabinte thinks that if he should be elected Governor of New York, either this year or two years hence, he would come very near being the logical nominee in 1908.

PRESIDENT PLAYS TENNIS

But Commissioner Garfield Plays a Better Game.

Washington, June 28.—For a week President Roosevelt has played tennis every day in lieu of a horseback ride. The court just outside the windows of the executive offices has been rolled and lined. James R. Garfield, commissioner of the bureau of corporations, department of commerce and labor, is the president's most frequent opponent and the laurels generally rest with Mr. Garfield. He is faster on his feet than the president and apparently has a better eye.

ATTACKED A WOMAN.

Three Masked Men Pursued By a Posse.

La Crosse, Wis., June 28.—Three masked men held up a saloon about two miles north of here, on a lonely country road, Sunday night. The place was conducted by Mark Wulf, whose wife was assaulted and lies in a dangerous condition, with severe bruises about the head.

The men entered the saloon about 9 o'clock, one from the rear and two at the front door. They were armed and demanded that Mrs. Wulf give up what money she had, which amounted to several hundred dollars. She picked up a beer bottle to defend herself, whereupon one man took it away from her and struck her on the head, cutting a deep gash over her eye. She was found unconscious on the floor shortly afterwards by a farmer who passed by.

The robbers were then frightened away, and only liquors and cigars were taken. The sheriff was notified and a posse started out, but all trace of the men was lost.

WHITE AND BLACK WED.

First Case of the Kind at Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., June 28.—At the Bon Ton restaurant Saturday afternoon took place the wedding of a white man and a colored woman. This is the first case of the kind in the city, and it attracted much attention. The bride, Mrs. Virginia Riley, is a pure African, and owns the hotel. Thomas Delaney, the bridegroom, has been a resident of the city for years, and is well known.

Former Judge Ole O. Hagen has written a book, entitled "Tillelds." It is a romance, the scene of which is laid in the mountains of Norway.

While rowing on the river, near Sampson's addition, an accident occurred which nearly caused the death of two. Mrs. Ernest Hanson and daughter were on the water, and seeing some wild flowers, rowed to the shore for them. The little girl stepped out and picked the flowers, but in endeavoring to get back into the boat, stepped on the edge and both were thrown into the river. The woman held to the boat and kept the child's head above water, but was almost exhausted when help arrived.

IS ANXIOUS FOR PAY.

Nelson Carter Demands Recompense For Labor.

Nelson Carter, the last of the prophets, faith healer, and promulgator of a new and as yet unnamed religion, was released from the county jail this forenoon and he now threatens to sue the city for pay for work which he did on Duluth streets while a member of the "chain gang."

When told by the officers of the county jail that he was free he demanded reimbursement for his labor on the streets from Sheriff Butchart. He declared that he never worked for nothing and threatened dire consequences if his bill was not attended to at once.

He was referred to Capt. Resche, of the police department, and told that that officer might attend to his claim. He was rather coy of making his appearance before the police official, however, as the captain had been prominent in the proceedings three weeks ago when he was arrested and sent to the county jail for twenty days on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

After thinking the matter over for a while he went into the kitchen of the jail and spent the morning trying to convert the young women employed there to the new sect of which he is the prophet and leader, although he has not as yet secured any converts.

When he has regained his courage he says he will appear at police headquarters and demand both his pay for working on the streets and the revolver which at first got him into trouble with the police officials here. He says he has not as yet any plans for the future.

ELIXIR OF LIFE.

Beecham's Pills cure Bilious and Nervous Disorders, Stomach Troubles, Female Ailments and hundreds of minor complaints. They have the largest sale of any patent medicine in the world.

Beecham's Pills are a true tonic, a harmless stimulant from which there is no reaction, a painless, effectual laxative, and a specific for the cure of fifty per cent of all diseases. They probably come as near being an elixir of long life as anything created by human hands.

The virtue of Beecham's Pills does not result from any lucky combination of standard remedies, but rather from some beneficient, occult power; inherent in itself.

THE EVENING STORY.

THE BARRIER

By Nellie Cravey Gillmore.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Millicent Drexel never could have told how long she had sat staring dumbly at one of the four walls of her room, had not a servant entered with tea and wafers and announced that dinner would be served in half an hour.

She rose stiffly and, leaving the refreshment untouched, crossed with listless feet to one of the deep, curtained windows that stood open to entice every chance breath of wind from the river below.

Her face, smooth, transparent, clear as a cameo, looked almost ghastly in the waning afternoon light. Into its expression of hitherto unruffled sweetness and calm had crept a despairingness whose climax seemed to stand invulnerable against all further mortal suffering.

Pale shafts of dying sunlight slipped insiduously into the darkened room, lighting it with a sort of golden dimness.

Minutes passed, and presently a cuckoo clock struck a still warning of the passage of time. Mrs. Drexel caught her breath and turned mechanically toward her dressing table. She made her toilet absently, but with the same strict regard for personal adornment that was part of herself.

Fifteen minutes later, when she went downstairs to dinner, Allison had already arrived. "I received your note," he said, going forward to meet her with outstretched hands, "and as you see, I tried to be punctual."

She smiled in a wan little fashion, struggling as she had never struggled before to hide all the bitterness and misery and despair that surged over her afresh at sight of him. She sank gratefully into the chair he had drawn up, inexpressibly glad of the semidark that masked her face from his unsuspecting eyes.

At dinner she brightened visibly, succeeding far beyond her own expectations in blinding her lover to every suspicion of the tragic barrier that had so suddenly sprung up between them.

When the last course was finished, she led the way with her old graciousness to a cool, shadowed spot on the veranda, and motioned him to a chair opposite her. Allison took the proffered seat with a smile that portrayed only joy in the consciousness of her nearness.

And Millicent? She felt, somehow, that she was going to be a coward, and realizing that the inevitable disclosure required all her courage and tact, set about fairly and squarely to muster what stamina she could.

After a momentary pause Allison was the first to speak. "When your note came this morning," he began, "I had just gotten back to my office from what was, to me, the most painful hour of my life. I don't really know, though, why I am telling you this—" He broke off, looking at her with a certain gravity and indecision in his glance.

Mrs. Drexel was silent a bit, waiting for him to go on. "Tell me, by all means," she insisted, as he did not speak; "you know that I care about all that—you do." She picked nervously at the laces of her dress, unable longer to restrain all physical expression of the torturing thoughts that possessed her.

"It was a fellow I had known at college a good many years ago," Allison resumed presently. "Somehow, he learned of my whereabouts, though I had not even thought of, much less seen, him during all that time. He was fatally injured in a trolley accident a day or so ago, and expressed a desire to talk to some one—some one he knew—before the end. I was sent for. For some unexplained reason he spoke of me continually during his illness."

Mrs. Drexel was sitting still and white in the moonlight, her breath coming and going in a little jerky way.

"Drexel, poor devil—by the way, he has the same name as yourself—couldn't be any connection, could he? Well, from everything he told me, I conclude that he must have had a pretty bad time of it in this world. Married young—too young, I reckon, as lots of us do—and his pretty young wife (that's what he called her) led him a regular dog's life, as the saying goes."

Mrs. Drexel bent forward suddenly, her interest appearing to expand with an almost absurd abruptness. "Well?" she said, "well?"

"Well, when he was dying, he got to thinking that perhaps, after all, she had not been entirely to blame; tried to extenuate certain—er—reprehensible actions of hers and all that, but—"

The woman was so close now that the warm breath coming quickly through her parted lips fanned his cheek. Her eyes sparkled strangely from their pallid background. "But what?" she demanded sharply.

"I'm inclined to think, from what went before—and after—that she really couldn't have been much."

"She may have acted unwisely—even foolishly," Mrs. Drexel suggested, with a sudden revelation of feelings "and repented. She may not have been altogether hopeless."

Allison shook his head. "Women of her stripe don't change," he observed, with conviction.

Mrs. Drexel stared at him mutely for the half of a minute. "You believe that?" she asked, slowly, the light dying her eyes curiously. "It is really refreshing," she went on, in a little burst of bitterness, "to hear men's opinions on the sex, sometimes."

"I happen, I think, to know women pretty well," returned Allison, with a slight uplifting of his brows, "and I know that kind better than any."

"So you don't concede that women are capable of reforming—even when there is no actual harm to be undone—"

"Outwardly, most anyone can reform. People may even go so far as to deceive themselves in regard to their own feelings and actions, but you are familiar enough with the saying about leopards—"

Mrs. Drexel interrupted him with a swift gesture of dissent. "For Heaven's sake, let's not fall into platitudes! back up our arguments," she cut in, shortly. After a second she laughed in a half-mocking little fashion that struck oddly on Allison's ears. Now, for the first time, he noticed her emotion, and an unnamable pang shot through him. He bent toward her impulsively, in the old familiar way, and tried to draw her hands into his. But she shrank away from him quickly and, rising, walked to the opposite end of the veranda without a word.

Allison watched her with bewildered eyes, and after a little, got up and followed her. "Dear," he said, gently, "what is it? Tell me—surely you can tell me. Is there anything wrong—any trouble that you are hiding from me? Are you ill?" He reached forth again, and tried to take her hand, but she flung off his touch sharply and buried her face in her hands.

After a little she looked up, white and moveless as a statue, but with all further traces of emotion vanished from her face. "Is he dead—now?" she asked, coldly.

Allison stared at her in sudden alarm. "I'm sorry I ever told you of that affair," he broke out, in self-vexation. "Had I dreamed that you would take it so to heart—"

"Is he dead?" she reiterated, calmly.

"He died while I was with him."

Mrs. Drexel drew in her breath with a long, quivering sigh. After a second's silence, she drew the ring from her finger and held it out to him. "I was his wife," she said, dully.

"Millicent!"

"Yes, it is quite too terribly true. I learned only yesterday that he was still alive. Several years ago I had—or thought I had—reliable information of his death. I sent for you this morning that I might be the first to break it to you—to—"

Allison stood as though frozen, his eyes fixed in a sort of dazed fascination on the glittering bauble she had thrust into his fingers.

"But, sweetheart," he said, his voice a little hoarse and trembling, "I—you don't understand. The man is dead."

The woman looked at him with dull eyes. "I know," she said.

"This thing has unnerved, unsettled you. After awhile you will be better. Try to remember, dear, that I saw him dead with my own eyes. Every barrier to our happiness is removed now. There is no barrier, Millicent."

Mrs. Drexel stood motionless for an instant; the next, she shook from head to foot, half staggering as she put out one hand to the banister rail to steady herself.

"No barrier!" she cried. "Dick! Oh, my God, you yourself have erected a barrier between us that is more insurmountable than a hundred living husbands!"

THE SWEDISH SINGERS.

The Swedish singers from the University of Lund who will sing at the Lyceum Sunday afternoon and evening, sang last Friday evening in St. Louis and the Globe-Democrat said:

"A large audience greeted the talented body of gentlemen, and a new record for enthusiasm was established. It is a pleasure to record the fact that the tempestuous applause was wholly justified—partly by reason of the unusual excellence of the work done, and partly because there was an element of novelty that was calculated to create a furore among music lovers. The numbers were chiefly by Swedish composers, who are a comparatively unknown quantity to American choruses and audiences, and it was in these that the most decided impressions were made.

"The effects which may be regarded as novelties were, first, the singing of a particularly robust barytone, with a chorus of more than fifty singing by way of accompaniment. Nothing quite like it has been heard here, and the effect was decidedly pleasing. Herr Forsell, the soloist, is a young man with an extraordinary big voice, and if it must be said that vigor is its chief characteristic, it is a sort of vigor that possesses much music of a sort. Another innovation was the rolling of the letter "r" through sustaining notes, the musical quality of the tone being perfectly retained.

"The appearance of the chorus marks an event of a very pleasing kind. Lacking the finish of the usual Southern aggregation of singers, they possess a quality of irrepressible enthusiasm which never failed to move the audience. In point of power they were a revelation, and when an occasional voice did not assert itself too decidedly, the ensemble effect was good."

DIVORCED A MONTH

And Now They Will Be Remarried.

Webster City, Iowa, June 28.—A license to marry was issued yesterday to R. W. Parker and Mrs. Clara Parker, both of Stanhope. Back of this bit of information lies the fact that just one month ago they were divorced in this city by Judge Richard. On the decree, which was given to Mrs. Parker, appeared the following injunction to both, "Provided, however, that if either party to this action shall remarry within a year, this decree of divorce shall be null and void." In this particular case this injunction is of no value as the setting aside of the divorce decree cannot make bigamy of the second marriage of the pair. The injunction placed upon the decree by Judge Richard simply makes them doubly married at present.

Parker is a blacksmith. The decree of divorce was granted without the presence of either party to the action in the court room. All the evidence was presented by deposition. In her petition, upon which the divorce was granted, Mrs. Parker alleged cruel and inhuman treatment.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Anti-Saloon League Supported In Important Decision.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—A telegram says that Judge Whiting, of DeSmet, has decided the Hetland license case in favor of the Anti-saloon league. Hetland, Kingsbury county, voted in favor of license in 1903, but no vote was taken last spring. The league asked for a writ of prohibition against the issue of license on the ground that the vote must be taken each year. Judge Whiting sustained the contention of the league and ordered a peremptory writ of prohibition. Under this decision towns where no vote was had last spring cannot issue license, the list including many cities and towns, Sioux Falls, Deadwood, Yankton, Watertown, Mitchell, Pierre and Chamberlain being among them. Aberdeen voted for license last spring. Taubman and Williamson, of this city, attorneys for the brewing company fighting the writ, say the case will go to the supreme court as soon as possible. The construction of the law heretofore has been that the result of an eelction held good until reversed by a vote, no matter how many years elapsed.

Lead—Several companies and individuals are here for the purpose of making experiments on the slimes of quicksands found in the Homestake ore, for the purpose of trying to find a method that will save the gold and silver values. For a good many years the Homestake company has been trying to get more of the values out of the ore.

C. H. Merrill, a cyanide expert of national repute, succeeded some time ago in finding a method, a modification of the cyanide process, that would take out most of the values left in the sands or tailings. But the slimes problem is still unsolved. Mr. Merrill is said to be receiving a royalty of 15 per cent on every ton of tailings treated, and as something like 80 to 90 cents are saved on every ton, and about 2000 tons of tailings are treated daily, his income is considered one of the largest in the Black Hills.

Both of the Homestake cyanide plants are being doubled in capacity. The large plant in this city will have a capacity of about 2500 tons daily, and it will then be the largest in the world. Metallurgists are working hard on the Homestake slime problem for the reason that the person discovering a method of getting out the 90 cents a ton will probably receive as good a royalty as that of Mr. Merrill.

Aberdeen—Preliminary steps have been taken by the various fraternal orders of Aberdeen for the erection of a fraternal building to cost from $25,000 to $30,000. The orders interested are the Workmen, Woodmen, Knights of Pythias, Maccabees and the United Commercial Travelers.

The plan is to form a building association in which each shall take stock according to membership, and each order will pay rent to the association, according to the number of meetings held each year, the association to pay fixed charges for maintenance and return to the orders the dividend created by the surplus over expenses.

Huron—Kirke W. Wheeler, one of the pioneer members of the South Dakota bar, died here, aged 67.

Huron—Judge A. W. Burtt and wife have gone to Kalispell, Mont., where they will spend the summer with their daughter, Mrs. George Fessenden, with the hope that a change of climate and surroundings will benefit Mrs. Burtt's failing health.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—On Wednesday the Red River valley old settlers of the northern part of the state will congregate at Walhalla. The northern counties of the valley have an auxiliary association of their own, and they have invited those from Grand Forks and vicinity to join them in a celebration at Walhalla on that date. A special train will leave Grand Forks early in the morning and will return late at night, giving excursionists an opportunity to spend a full day at one of the most beautiful places in the state.

A similar reunion was held last year at the same place and on that occasion the graves of the martyr missionaries who were killed by Indians in the early fifties were dedicated. Walhalla is one of the oldest towns in the Northwest, and a charming place to visit. The local lodge of Foresters will aid in taking care of the crowds.

VIGILANT WATCH.

Why Boards of Health Are Necessary For the Public Health.

A member of the board of health recently said: "You would be surprised to know the negligence and indifference that exists in regard to the first principles of sanitary laws and the public health. Some of the well-to-do are often offenders in this respect.

"Consequently, a vigilant watch is necessary to stamp out germ-breeding spots, with their menace to the health of the community."

People show the same kind of neglect and indifference in regard to the care of their bodies but they have no board of health to warn them, ever on the alert to drive out the impurities. They must be their own board of health for the care of their individual bodies.

With scrofula, the body is a favorable condition for the growth of disease germs and microbes, the impurities in the blood, the cause of scrofula, affording the same opportunity for the development of other diseases as to the unhealthy spots for the suppression of which boards of health are organized.

Father John's Medicine cures scrofula and all skin diseases by driving out the impurities, toning up the stomach and nervous system. It is free of alcohol or injurious drugs or narcotics. An eminent specialist prescribed this medicine for the late Rev. Fr. John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., fifty years ago, by whom it was recommended, and from whom it derived its name.

It is a food medicine for the blood and nerves, and enables the organs of the body to properly perform their work. Taken after any exposure, it prevents colds, cures all throat and lung troubles. Father John's Medicine is for sale by all druggists, the L. W. Leithhead Drug Co., Wholesale Distributors.

PROSPECTS OF SOUTH

In Industrial Lines Subject of Unusually Interesting Discussion.

The Negro Question and the Future of the South.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU

Washington, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—A few days ago an unusually interesting discussion of the prospects of the new industrial South took place on the broad veranda of the hotel at Warm Springs, Ga., that venerable and historic Southern watering place. In the group were manufacturers, lawyers, merchants, politicians, business men, railroad officials and newspaper writers, respresenting in about equal numbers the various professions and the North and the South. Some of those present were Northern men by birth and Southerners by preference; others had been reared in the South and had chosen to live in the North while the remainder were still residents of their respective native states, North or South. They hailed from Massachusetts, Indiana, Connecticut, North Carolina, Albama and Georgia. Among them were F. B. Gordon, of Columbus, who had left his native Massachusetts twenty years ago to become one of the leading manufacturers and citizens of Georgia; Fuller E. Calloway, of LaGrange, Ga., secretary of the Unity Mills, and noted as one of the wittiest men of his native sstate; C. G. Bancroft, of Boston, the Massachsetts legislative agent of the famous Arkwright club, whose membership comprises nearly all the leading cotton mill owners of New England; H. P. Meikleham, a young Massachsetts man who had gone South to take charge of the great "Massachusetts mills in Georgia," with their 2500 hands and a city of their own; Jack J. Spalding, a very prominent Atlanta lawyer and politician, widely known through the South for his progressive views, and in the North as a most interesting speaker on his favorite subject, "The New South;" S. C. Dunlop, a wealthy mill owner, of Gainetsville; I. C. Wade, of Cornelia, Ga., an expert in immigration, long engaged in procuring immigrants for Canada and the Northwestern states; and Daniel Davenport, of Bridgeport, Conn., a well-known authority on labor legislation and executive agent of the American Anti-Boycott association. There were also present a publisher of a Southern newspaper, who hap spent a number of years in New York, a Washington correspondent, the publisher of a leading Southern commercial magazine and others. With such a company, representing so many professions and drawn from so many different sections of the country, it is not surprising that the viewpoints were widely diverging and that under the benign influence of the seductive mint-julep, the genial Southern sky and the aroma of the cigars, the deultory conversation should assume the appearance of an informal debate on questions of mutual interest and on broad lines.

As is usual whenever Northern and Southern men meet, the discussion gradually drifted toward the negro question and the future of the South, and, as Messrs. Davenport and Bancroft were the guests of the Southerners, the latter undertook to elucidate the question to some extent for their benefit.

"My inquiries among Southern manufacturers," remarked Mr. Davenport, casually, "leads me to believe that the greatest problem confronting you gentlemen today is that of obtaining an adequate supply of labor for your mills. I understand that few of the New England operatives care to come South. Why is that? The climate is better, the expense of living is less, and I believe your operatives are better housed. Why, therefore, can you not draw labor from the Northern mills?"

"It is because of the fear that such labor will come in competition with negro labor; the apprehension of the New Englander that he will be placed alongside the negro in the mills," observed one of the party, provoking a storm of protest. "I don't think so." "That idea has been thoroughly discredited." "The negro question has little to do with it," quickly spoke up various Southerners. "Even if it has," said Mr. Gordon, warmly, "such fears are groundless. The negro is not and never will be employed in Southern mills, at least, for years to come. No question of race prejudice is involved. The negro is naturally lazy; he is not to be depended upon for steady work. In the open field and under the unrelaxed vigilance of an overseer he will work hard. But place him in a mill and the constant monotonous hum of the machinery exercises an overpowering soporonic influence and nothing can prevent his falling asleep."

'It may interest you, Mr. Davenport, and you other gentlemen from the North," courteously suggested Mr. Spalding, "to know how we solved the negro problem in Georgia politics. The population of the state is about equally divided between the two races, the balance resting with the whites, there being fifty-five per cent whites and forty-five per cent negroes. Therefore, instead of adopting "grandfather clauses" and other makeshifts to eliminate the negro vote, we formed the whitemen's party and all the whites vote together. In lieu of the struggle at the polls we have substituted the contest at the primaries. All our campaigns are fought out and settled at the primaries, and after that it is all over except the legal ratification at the polls of the action of the primaries. No attempt whatever is made to intimidate the negro. Any one who wishes to vote is permitted to do so. But what is the use? He knows that if he votes against the white man he is outnumbered and in consequence a very small percentage of the negroes ever seek to vote. Oh, No! we have no negro problem in Georgia. All we want is for the well-meaning but badly-informed philanthropists in the North to let us work out our own salvation, which will be on the lines of educating the negro to work. What he needs is industrial not literary education."

"I have been for ten years on the school board of Columbus," added Mr. Gordon, "where we have 2500 pupils of which half are colored. I quickly saw the futility of attempting to educate the negro children along literary lines. We have adopted industrial training as it is employed at Tuscogee by Booker Washington. We are teaching the girls sewing and cooking, and the boys the use of their hands, and are trying in a general way to instill into the minds of the colored children the dignity of labor. While Columbus was the first city in the South to introduce that training it is spreading all over the South and public school education is being developed along that line."

"There is absolutely no prejudice in the South against the negro who works," supplemented Mr. Calloway, warmly. "A negro barber shaves me, a negro coachman drives for me, a negro cook prepares my meals, and a negress nurses my child. I wouldn't have a white servant under any circumstances."

"It seems to me," put in Mr. Davenport, "the New England mill hands would be attracted by the climate and the outdoor life, and also by the greater comforts of living here."

"We take the greatest care of our operatives," promptly responded Mr. Dunlop. "The houses are well constructed and each has a garden patch. The mills are of the latest and best pattern, and are light and well ventilated. While the wages are not so high, the expense of living is much less, and the hands are much more comfortable."

"The rigor of the climate and the poverty of the soil has drained the New England farm and field, the New England mill. The reverse of these conditions in the South makes mill recruiting slow," interrupted Mr. Calloway. "Our natural advantages may be quickly stated—a climate permitting work the year round, cheaper living, and, to an appreciable degree only, the proximity of the mill to the raw material. Our disadvantages are—lack of money, high-priced money, unskilled and unsufficient labor, and an unnatural but unavoidable barrier to immigration."

"The Massachusetts mill-hand lives in large communities," interjected Mr. Bancroft, "where he enjoys city life." He does not care to live in a small town, especially where educational facilities for his children are meager or entirely lacking."

"In our town of La Grange we believe we have a model," continued Mr. Calloway, reflectively. "We own 100 acres in a square; we own the school, the church, and everything else. Our superintendent is the minister of the church, and he preaches the sermons and officiates at the funerals; he baptizes, marries and buries them. We have the school going nine months in the year, and the children are compelled to attend half that time. Some operatives send their children the full nine months, but all are compelled to attend four months and a half. We pay cash, and we do not have checks, or company stores, or drawbacks of any kind. We rent a three-room cottage, with 100 feet front, a front yard, back yard, shade trees and sidewalks, and a well in the back porch for $3 a month, with $1 added for each additional room."

"However, the South has one great source of labor supply which has been tapped, but scarcely touched," said Mr. Spalding. "I refer to the mountain districts of Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina. The development of cotton manufacturing in the South will prove the salvation of thes people. Living back in the mountains, on sterile farms, rearing their children in idleness and ignorance, the mill offers a path toward civilization and education which they are eager to tread. There are 1,250,000 of them to be brought into our mills."

"Are they willing to leave the free air of the mountains for the confinement of mill life?" inquired Mr. Davenport. "Do they make good operatives?" asked Mr. Bancroft.

"They are fit for any kind of an active life," responded Mr. Spalding, erchustically, "except trying to wrest a living from their small and unproductive mountain farms. Blood will tell, and the purest Anglo-Saxon blood on the continent runs through their veins. They are ambitious for themselves and especially for their children; they want social and educational advantages they do not now possess. Working in the fields does not appeal to them. It is badly paid and affords no opportunity for advancement. But the starting up of the mills came as a God-send opening, and they are eagerly seizing it. The whole family can work in the mills, father, mother and children. It is not laborious like work in a cotton field, they are securing an industrial education and their children are given an opportunity to attend school."

"Yes," affirmed Mr. Gordon; "the talk of child labor in the South is all nonsense. Here are a lot of children who, if they were not working in the mills, would be in the backwoods, growing up in idleness and with no schooling whatever. Seventy-five per cent of the Georgia mills maintain schools and compel their operatives to send their children to school a part of the year. Thus the child receives an industrial and school education which otherwise would be beyond his reach. Personally, I believe in compulsory education, but I think a vagrancy law which would force the parents to work would help solve the child-labor problem."

"Another cause which has operated to bring about a shortage in the labor supply is the rise in the price of cotton," observed Mr. Dunlop. "Men who left the farm for the mill when cotton was bringing only 6 and 7 cents are anxious to return when cotton sells at 12 and 15 cents."

"Yet there is also a shortage in farm labor," concluded Mr. Wade. "What we need in the South is farm labor of a more educated kind than we have. We want more intensive cultivation and the production of small fruits, berries and vegetables; also more diversified farming. We are short on oats, corn and wheat. To this end we should offer inducements to Swiss, Germans, French and Italians. Immigration has always been along lines of latitude, and Southern France and Italy is our natural fields for securing immigrants. We ought to get some from the North also. With the proceeds of the sale of his farm a New England farmer can buy five times as much fertile land in the South where the climate is mild. The tide of immigration flows west from New York. We must turn it South. The railroads of the Northwest have for years maintained immigration bureaus and flooded Europe with attractive literature. The Western real estate agents have also been active in that direction."

TEXANS MUST PAY

Or World's Fair Exhibit Will Be Withdrawn.

Dallas, Texas, June 28.—The managers of the Texas exhibit at the St. Louis fair are threatening to withdraw the exhibit unless the public at once raise $30,000 to pay expenses. An official ultimatum has been issued.

"There is no secret, nothing mysterious," said General Manager Wortham. "It is either raise more money or abandon the exhibit. A meeting of the managers was held, and it was decided to send a committee to St. Louis to see and report on what Texas has done and is doing. After the report has been made the matter will be put squarely up to the people of the state."

The Texas building and exhibits were provided for by a fund of $100,000 raised by popular subscription, the legislature having failed to make an appropriation for the purpose.

WEST DULUTH

Yesterday saw the re-establishment of the regular summer service on the spur line of the Northern Pacific road to Fond du Lac. It is expected that the new trains will enjoy a good patronage through the summer months. Yesterday, being the first day of the summer service, the travel over the line was not very extensive.

The extra service is a great convenience to the residents of Fond du Lac, as well as to Duluth people who have summer homes in that vicinity, and to others who desire a quicker means of reaching the town than by boat.

In the winter time only one train, a mixed passenger and freight, is run a day each way. It leaves Duluth in the morning, returning in the afternoon. Under the present schedule trains leave Duluth at 6:50 a. m. and 5:30 p. m. for Fond du Lac, arriving there forty minutes later, while the trains from Fond du Lac to Duluth will leave at 8:20 a. m. and 7:10 p. m.

The re-establishment of this service is said to be due to the efforts of the West Duluth Commercial club.

STRUCK A COW.

Accident to Missabe Train at West Duluth.

Last evening, at 7:30, the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road's hill engine, 303, with fifty-five wooden cars of ore, struck a cow at the crusher plant, West Duluth, and badly derailed the tank and drivers of the engine. The engine was backing up at the time, and the cow jumped on the track in front of it very suddenly, and, instead of being knocked off of the track, she in some manner rolled under the tank and caused the derailment. The accident blocked both of the tracks on the hill, and the ore movement was more or less interrupted during the night. The wreck was cleared at 3 a. m.. The damage will not exceed $200. No one was injured.

This is the accident reported in the News Tribune this morning as a head-end collision, and wherein it was said that two engines were badly demolished.

STURGEON SHOT.

One Reported to Be Killed Near Fond du Lac.

There is a report current in West Duluth to the effect that a large sturgeon was shot at the rapids, above Fond du Lac, yesterday by a member of a camping party.

If the report is a true one the fish in the case will be the first of its kind to be taken from the St. Louis river in a number of years. It is said that at one time a number of sturgeon ran up the river during the spawning season, but that was many years ago. Three or four years ago one of the fish was speared in the St. Louis river, but this is the last instance known of one of the finny monsters being seen in the river, until yesterday's instance.

Sturgeon are seen but rarely in Minnesota waters, except in the Big and Little Fork rivers and tributary streams, which empty into the Rainy river. Sturgeon run up these rivers evehy spring, and many of them are captured by the settlers.

REA BROS.' CASCARIN,

The Mild Liquid Laxative for Both Adults and Children.

All mothers know the difficulty in trying to make children take medicine. It is a black day for the little ones when their stomach is out of order and they have to take those nasty remedies which stick in the throat and leave a bad taste in the mouth all day long, for when these medicines are taken into the little one's stomach they gripe terribly and cause much annoyance. A friend told me what Cascarin had done for her children, and I have tried it to my satisfaction. I can honestly say that Cascarin has no equal. It is a pleasure in taking and after taking. My advice to mothers is to keep Cascarin, as I do, always on hand. It solves the problem of treating children's ailments and will save you a great deal of anxiety as well as worry many a time."

No need of your going to a doctor and paying big doctor bills when you can be cured by the best prescription that the world has ever known. There is only one genuine Cascarin. It is a liquid laxative and pleasant to the taste and does not interfere with the most delicate stomach. At all leading druggists, one size, 50 cents.

GAMES TODAY.
Duluth at Grand Forks.
Fargo at Crookston.
Superior at Winnipeg.

Grand Forks, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The White Sox were defeated here yesterday by a score of 3 to 2. The visitors lost the game by stacking up too many errors. The hits were about evenly divided. The visitors got one the best of the Tigers taking the grand total of three off Morton. Zink got two of the three hits and they were clean ones. The two hits secured by the locals were taken by Morton and Sharnweber.

Duluth made a score in the first inning. Ball, the first man up, drew a pass. Corrigan was hit by a pitched ball, and Randall sacrificed. Ball scored on Quillan's out. Hughes struck out. The next and last score made by the visitors was in the fourth inning. Randall was issued a pass. Ullan sacrificed, and Hughes was thrown out on first. Then "little Willie" Zink came up and reached for a clean hit, which scored Randall. Sheppard struck out.

The fire works on the Tigers score board did not commence until the sixth inning. Morton wa sthe first man up. He was hit by Koukalik. Then an error by Zink saved Nagel's life, and an error by Sheppard gave a base to Hitchison. Dunn went on a fielders' choice and "Hutch" was thrown out on second, and Morton scored. Cole sent a high foul fly to Quilan and was caught out. Martin sent a long drive to Randall and he, too, suffered the same fate. In the seventh inning Sharnweber led off with a hit. Hanrahan went safe on an error by Ball. Hess struck out, and Morton got a life on an error by Quillan. Then Nagel sent a rather easy one to Quillan, who picked it up and drove it down to second to try to catch the man there but failed on a poor throw. "Hutch" went on fielder's choice and Dunn was thrown out on first. The scores were both made on errors. The Tigers got one earned run while the White Sox got two.

Ball did not add to his popularity by running up to the umpire and asking him if he was going to umpire the game or the crowd.

DOLL IS INVINCIBLE.

Wins Victory For Superior at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Doll had the Maroons at his mercy during critical moments in yesterday's game, and the longshoremen had no difficulty in winning out by the score of 6 to 2. The visitors played a strong aggressive game, taking long chances in the field.

They drew first blood in the second inning, when Cameron was issued transportation to first, went to third on Leach's single and came home on an error. Leach followed him across the plate.

Doll let up for a moment in the fourth and again in the ninth inning, and Winnipeg put a man across the plate in each.

The high wind which was blowing accounts for the large number of errors. Both teams played a fast game with plenty of ginger. Two games will be played today, one in the afternoon and one in the evening.

AN EASY THING.

Crookston Plays With Perry Werden's Terrors.

Crookston, Minn., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Crookston team put up the kind of ball that wins pennants here yesterday afternoon, giving Martin perfect support and enabling him to shut out Perry Werden's bunch. In the meanwhile they rolled up seven runs by hard and opportune hitting and romped away with the easiest kind of a victory. Patterson made a home run in the first inning with two men on bases.

Hard luck "Coke." You deserve to win.

* * *

The Crookston team is playing championship ball. It has struck its gait at last.

Morton had all of the Duluth sluggers guessing yesterday, with the exception of Zink.

* * *

If the Tigers win again today, matters will begin to look interesting for the White Stockings.

* * *

Yesterday's victory made four out of eight for the Tigers. "Rusty" will pitch today, and the White Sox need the odd one.

Sheppard made his first error yesterday, but he was for from being alone in the error column.

Yesterday's defeat leaves the White Stockings with two victories and two defeats on the present trip.

EVENING GAME

F. A. Patrick and First National Bank Teams Try It.

Finish Nine Innings Easily —The Bankers Are Losers.

In the first evening game played in Duluth, the F. A. Patrick team defeated the First National bank team in one of the regular Commercial league games last evening on the league grounds. The final score was 12 to 4 in favor of the dry goods men.

The victory waslargely due to the pitching of Menelce, who struck out fifteen men and allowed but four hits. McLane, the pitcher for the bankers, was given ragged support.

The Patrick team will meet the Kelley-How-Thomson team tomorrow evening at 6:30 o'clock. Last nights' game demonstrates that evening games can be pulled off in Duluth, as the full nine innings were played without difficulty.

The line-up and score by innings were as follows:

SEARCH FOR MOTHER

Whom He Has Not Seen Since Civil War.

New Ulm, Minn., June 28.—Allen Richal of Chetek, Wis., has been here during the past week trying to secure some evidence as to the fate of his mother, or locate her if living. When a young man he ran away from home to enlist in the Union army, much against his mother's wishes, and while serving his country his mother, who had married a man by the name of Simmons, moved to Minnesota, leaving no address. When he returned from the South he could get no trace of the family beyond a rumor that his mother had fallen a victim to the Indian tomahawk during the massacre. This he accepted as true, but later he felt that there might be some doubt as to the truth of the rumor, and he has now set about to learn the truth.

His mission here was fruitless, as no record of such a name can be found. The possibility of the name being incorrect makes it probable that persons bearing a similar name may be relatives but he has no evidence. While in the service Richal was severely wounded and word was sent to his mother that he was dead, so that neither of them, believing the other dead, has made any effort to effect a meeting.

It is possible that in some other part of the state his mother met the fate reported, and he is anxiously searching for some record.

The display and sale will be under the personal direction of Mr. Taminosian, who will be in Duluth a few days only.

A life time experience in handling Oriental Rugs and Carpets gives him a prestige as an importer without comparison.

His judgment in the selection of antique pieces is unrivalled—and when one realizes that the present comprehensive and varied collection was personally selected by him, and as Mr. Taminosian puts it—"at the most unusual of low prices"—it behooves each and every lover of the Oriental art, homefitter or collecter of fine rugs to attend this exhibit and sale, and share in the timely opportunity of securing the very cream of the Orient in rug weaving at remarkably low prices.

He desires to dispose of this collection in as short a time as possible, and will for that reason make large price inducements to intending purchasers.

In fact many pieces could not be secured again at double the present prices. It's for a limited time only—so come early.

DUNN MEN WON

They Carried Duluth Caucuses By a Sweeping Majority.

The Rest of the County Practically Solid For Dunn.

The result of the primaries in St. Louis county last evening was an overwhelming victory for Robert C. Dunn. He carried the city 2 to 1 and the outside county at an even greater ratio than that on the face of the reports received up to this morning.

The Collins men had banked heavily on the city of Duluth. They expected to carry it strongly as the Dunn men did, but political expectations are the most uncertain of things.

The First ward, where so many attorneys live, was expected by the Collins men to go for their man strongly. They evidently forgot, however, that a great many of the lumbermen live there and that they are practically all Dunn men. But two Collins' delegates pulled through in that ward, W. A. Hicken in the Second precinct, and Simon Clark, in the Glen Avon precinct. The latter was marked for slaughter by the Dunn men, but won about 2 to 1.

The Second and Third wards were carried solidly for Dunn. In the second precinct of the Third ward a desperate fight was made on H. B. Knudsen and W. A. Eden, the Collins delegates for they were regarded as particularly strong. They were beaten by about 10 votes.

In the Fourth ward the Collins men won out in every precinct but one. The Dunn men say they did not make much of a fight there, but that should undoubtedly be taken with considerable allowance, for they were fighting for everything and letting nothing escape.

In the Fifth ward the two sides split even, Collins getting two precincts with five delegates and Dunn three with the same number.

The Sixth ward gave Collins two delegates, in the fifth and sixth precincts.

In the Seventh Dunn was the winner, though the Collins men won the first precinct. In the fifth L. A. Barnes was chosen and he was on the Collins ticket.

E. L. Millar, one of the managers for Collins, late last night conceded that Dunn had won 49 and Collins 24, and while that may not be exactly correct it is close enough for all practical purposes.

Returns from the ranges and outside towns are not at all complete, but enough have been received to show that Mr. Dunn carried the outside county as strong or stronger than he did the city of Duluth.

Most of the leaders of the Collins fight in the primaries, Thomas S. Wood, who has been a very active Collins man, was beaten in his precinct. Simon Clark and Dr. Eklund were among the very few who pulled through. H. B. Knudson lost in the Third ward, H. A. Wing, E. L. Millar and Victor Johnson in the Fifth, and Dr. Braden in the Seventh. Otto Gafvert was one of those who pulled through in the Eighth.

Senator E. B. Hawkins was the backbone of the fight for Dunn. He took personal charge of it some days ago and brought the organization to a point where it was effective and complete.

The personal work of County Auditor Odin Haldin probably counted more in the result than that of any other one man. He was able to bring to the Dunn campaign the right support in just the places where it was needed, and saved for the Princeton man precincts where his managers greatly feared defeat.

It is understood that at the convention this afternoon Duluth will be given twenty delegates to the state convention, and the city outside of Duluth the same number, the county being entitled to a total of forty.

It is also understod that instructions will be given to vote for Judge Charles L. Lewis for he nomination for the supreme bench, but that outside of that case there will be no instructions.

* * *

"How do we explain it? It's just as we told you it would be all along, and there's hardly anything to explain," said William Getty, acting chairman of the Dunn St. Louis county campaign committee this morning.

"We were convinced from the start that we had the fight our own way, and we were right. Everywhere we went we found the sentiment was largely in favor of Dunn. About the only place where we found sentiment for Collins to aparently amount top anything was right here along Superior street, where the Collins workers appear to have worked very industriously, but from the outcome I think it must have been a false sentiment.

"We have heard nothing from Ramsey and Hennepin this morning, save what we have seen in the morning paper. I do not believe that anyone can tell the result in either of those counties, however, until they hold their conventions. It might be that when Hennepin gets into the convention she will appear as very much split up, but I have my doubts. As for Ramsey, it is logically a Dunn county, and if Collins has carried it I miss my guess. I don't see how on earth they have Ramsey county for Collins, if they claim they have.

"There was a lot of hard work about the campaign and we had the kind of an organization to do it with. We were assured from the beginning that our precinct organization was solid and well put together and the results speak for themselves."

"Some of the Collins people say that you bought the victory."

"Nothing in that. We did spend a little money, but nothing unusual and nothing that was not right and legitimate."

* * *

Lavish use of money is the way A. P. Cook of the Collins' forces, accounts for the victory of the Dunn side.

"Yes, sir, the lavish use of money by the Dunn people is the cause of the result and we have the necessary evidence to prove it," said Mr. Cook this morning.

"I would not care to specify but we know what we are about."

"Are you going to prosecute somebody?"

"You bet your life we are. We have heard from Ramsey and Hennepin this morning, where Chairman Martin says the Collins side is victorious, and we will carry the state convention for Collins on the first ballot. While we are beaten in St. Louis county we are by no means beaten in the state and we propose to go ahead in the county convention just the same and fight for chairman and everything that we can get. We are not out of the fight yet by any means. You can say that we do not concede the Sixth ward to Collins. You wait until the convention is held and you will see about that."

TWO SUSPECTS ARE CAPTURED

Alleged Robbers of the Virginia Postoffice Are Arrested.

Virginia, Minn., June 28.—After a search extending through the greater portion of a month, the local officials succeeded yesterday afternoon in capturing the two men suspected of having dynamited and robbed the safe in the postoffice of $300 in stamps and cash on May 31. The men arrested are Charles Kroken, alias "Black," and Charles Meffentre, alias "Sepp." They were captured after an exciting race by Deputies William McLean and John Fuzzy.

A report reached Mayor Fay yesterday morning that two men answering the description of the suspects that had been sent out had been seen along the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake railway, and he immediately set to work to have a special train sent in pursuit of them. The train and the deputies started shortly before noon and about 4:30 Black was caught near Camp 14. He made a desperate effort to escape, but the officers proved their superiority in running. A short time later "Sepp" was arrested near Camp 35. The men were both taken back to Virginia and lodged in jail to await their preliminary hearing in the municipal court.

Black is about 35 years old, is short and was easily recognized by his long flowing black hair. Sepp is about 50, tall and gray-haired. It is believed by the local officials that both men are professional burglars, and it is possible that they may be implicated in several robberies that have taken place here and in other range towns within the last few months. An attempt will be made to ascertain something relative to their past records here and in other parts of the state.

The blowing of the safe in the postoffice took place during a heavy thunderstorm about 2 o'clock in the morning of May 31. The fact that the charge of dynamite used was stronger than sufficient for the purpose gave rise to the belief that the crime was perpetrated by amateurs. Persistent effort of the police failed to reveal the least clue to the whereabouts of the guilty persons, until it was reported that suspicious looking creatures had been seen along the railway tracks.

SOO PLANTS ARE TO START

The New Company Preparing to Reopen the Works.

Toronto, June 28.—N. W. Bowell, K. C. the Ontario government's representative on the board of directors of the Lake Superior corporation, has returned from a visit to New York in connection with the new company, and he says the only cause of delay in resuming operations is the adjustment of the manifold details that arise in the reorganization of such a large concern. The mills, not now in operation, will probably be started very shortly.

The executive committee will pay a visit to the Soo next week, when the general manager will be appointed. It is understood that Cornelius Shields will accept the position. He has been in the city and stated that some of the works now closed down will be reopened very shortly.

F. H. Clergue is at the Soo in connection with the erection of a great coke plant in the Michigan Soo, at a cost of $750,000.

Mr. Clergue says that it is the intention of his company to supply the surrounding country with coal for commercial purposes and the railways centering there will, he says, receive their supplies from the Soo, as will also the industries on both sides of the river. They will handle from 350,000 to 400,000 tons of coal annually. It will take 250,000 tons alone to supply the Algoma Steel plant.

In New York it is believed that the principal effort of the Lake Superior corporation will be to equip and operate a rail plant at the Soo able to turn out rails to specifications for the Grand Trunk Pacific railway. The building of this line will call for about 700,000 tons of rails, worth about $17,000,000 in gross earnings to the company that can turn out the rails and net profits of about $7,000,000 if the rails are sold at the Pittsburg prices.

LA FOLLETTE

To Throw Bomb Into Ranks of Stalwarts.

Madison, Wis., June 28.—Governor La Follette has dropped a bomb in the ranks of the factionists who defeated his delegates at the Republican national convention. In his fight for control of the state the governor is declared to have prepared a list showing that more than one hundred men in the opposing faction, manufacturers and prominent shippers, have grossly violated the interestate commerce laws and have accepted rebates to the amount of $1,200,000 from the railroads of Wisconsin.

The expose, it is promised, will be complete, as it is the result of an investigation of the railroad companies' books made by the railroad commissioner of the state. The commissioner's latest report is declared to show that more than $5,000,000 has been withheld from the official returns of gross earnings made by the railroads. This information the governor promises to disclose to the voters of the state in his campaign for re-election.

VISITING RANGE

Vice President Gayley of Steel Corporation Here.

Leave For Iron Range to Inspect Corporation Properties.

James Gayley, first vice president of the United States Steel corporation, and David Garrick Kerr, ore agent from New York, and D. M. Clemsen, of Pittsburg, one of the high officers, arrived this morning and started up the ranges on a trip of inspection of the corporation's holdings.

They were under the escort of President Thomas F. Cole of the Oliver Iron Mining company and President F. E. House of the Duluth & Iron Range road.

The party left on a special train at 10 o'clock this morning over the Iron Range road, traveling in the private cars Frontenac and Minnesota, and are expected to make their inspection in time to return tonight. They will probably come down from the range over the Duluth, Missabe & Northern.

The trip is a sort of annual inspection on the part of Mr. Gayley, who comes from time to time to survey the conditions and changes of the mines. Mr. Kerr's presence with the party is by some taken to mean that in his capacity as ore agent he may confer with the others about the tonnage to be handled for the season.

Mr. Clemsen was formerly president of the Pittsburg Steamship company, and is said to be thoroughly informed on all the corporation's ore affairs.

New Masonic Periodical.

Copies of a new Masonic periodical, "The New Age," have been received in Duluth. It is published by the supreme council of the 33rd degree members of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Masons of the United States. As it is an official publication it starts off with a large subscription list, and is quite widely favored in the neighborhood of Duluth, owing to the large number of high degree Masons who live here. The initial issue is dated June and is a compact, well printed and well edited magazine with many subjects of interest not only to Masons but to the general public.

Lighting of Piers.

There has been some delay about lighting the canal piers owing to the failure to get the electric wiring done, but it was said this morning that enough work could be completed by this evening to permit of the lights on the north side being turned on. The others may be done in time for tomorrow. It is coincidental with the completion of a part of the lights that they will probably be in time to guide the North West on her first trip into Duluth for the season tonight.

ROYAL ARCANUM.

Banquet In Honor of the Order's Day.

Tonight the Royal Arcanum will hold its annual banquet at the Commercial club and expects to have over 100 present. The banquet is meant to observe Royal Arcanum day, but is a week behind that day this year. It had been intended to observe the day last week but, owing to the Democrats taking the attention of everybody and the inability to secure the Commercial club for the desired date, the event had to be postponed.

Some were in favor of endeavoring to hold the festival in picnic form this year, but the weather, it was feared, would not be mild enough to permit it. It is the custom in many parts of the United States to have the event in the open air and spread the good things to eat on the grass.

Naval Reserve Dance.

A social event of considerable importance this week will be the midsummer hop of the Naval Reserves at Oatka beach pavilion on the evening of Thursday, June 30. The arrangements for the affair are in the hands of a competent committee and there is every reason to believe that the hop will be fully as enjoyable and successful as in the case of past social attempts by the reserves, which is saying a good deal, for the boys have established a lasting reputation as good entertainers.

Guests will not have to worry for fear they will miss the last car home, for arrangements have been made to run late cars, and the Superior ferry will work overtime.

WILL GO TO RANGE.

Junior Y. M. C. A. Member to Make Trip Saturday.

Seventy-five junior members of the Y. M. C. A. will leave Duluth in a special car Saturday morning for Tower, to spend the day there visiting points of interest, and return to Duluth in the evening, completing the first of the several observation tours which Secretary McLeod has planned for the boys during the summer months.

The trip was to have taken place last Saturday, but as the weather was inclement it was postponed. The train to which the special car will be attached will leave Duluth Union depot at 7:30 Saturday morning and will arrive at Tower late in the afternoon.

While in the range city the young men will visit the Indian school there. Other points of interest will be the McKinley monument in the Vermilion range town which was the first city in the United States to so honor the late president. The highest point of land in Minnesota is also near the town and the party will visit that.

Some attention will also be paid the mines and mining interests in the city. The boys will be in charge of Secretary McLeod. All junior members of the association who wish to go on the trip must have their names in by Friday.

This is only one of a series of similar expeditions which the boys' secretary has planned. Next week a visit will be made to Zenith park in the St. Louis river, and a week later the young men will go out in the woods somewhere to spend the night about campfires and in tents.

ARE TRACKING A MURDERER

Head of Lakes Bloodhounds After Fall Creek Fugitive.

A message received at local police headquarters this morning from Merrillin, Wis., states that the murderer of Sheriff Harris of Fall Creek, Wis., has been surrounded in a swamp and that his capture is probably a question of hours only.

"Kate" the bloodhound from the local department, and one of the Superior hounds are assisting in the search for the murderer. The scent was given the dogs by a pair of overalls which the fugitive had thrown away in his flight. The hunt has now been in progress about a week. Captain Resche of the local department left Duluth Sunday night with two hounds to aid the officials of Eau Claire county in the search.

From descriptions furnished the local police department, the country near Fall Creek is some of the roughest in the Northwest, interspersed with swamps, marshes, tracts of rock and sand.

The murderer for whom the militia and the officials of Eau Claire county are searching, is supposed to be James Smith, of Oregon. Sheriff Harris was about to arrest the man on a warrant charging him with murder in Oregon. The man is claimed to have drawn a revolver and fired three shots into the sheriff's body, killing him. The man then took to the woods and has not been seen since.

All of the country about Fall Creek is being scoured by posses of citizens, details of militia and police officers.

The latest information from the scene of the hunt states that the murderer is believed to have turned south after an attempt to cross the Mississippi at Winona, and is now hiding in a swamp at Merrillin, Wis.

The local police have received no word as yet whether or not the bloodhounds are proving to be of any material assistance in the chase, beyond the message that they were being used by the officers, and that they had been given the scent from the overalls discarded by the fugitive.

Both the Superior and Duluth departments are anxiously awaiting some news which will demonstrate the efficiency of the hounds in police work. They have been given several minor trials in chasing down petty thieves at the head of the lakes, but this is their first work in the open, and the police hope it will prove successful.

HIS COMING A SURPRISE

Chicago, June 28.—When Mrs. Mary Biszak heard a knock on the door of her cottage, 2469 Thirty-seventh place, Sunday morning, she hesitated. She feared it might be the police come to again take her into custody and question her in regard to the disappearance and supposed murder of her husband, Stephen Biszak, a tailor. She opened the door and peered out through the crack.

"Hullo, ma. Don't you know me?" said the man on the doorstep, smiling joyfully.

Then Mrs. Biszak screamed. The caller was her husband, whom she had believed dead.

After the woman had convinced herself that her husband, who disappeared in April, had returned, she demanded to know the cause of his absence. She told him of the finding of the weighted body of a man in the canal at Thirty-seventh street on May 13, of her identification of it as that of Biszak, and of her experience in a cell, questioned and cross-questioned in an effort to connect her with the murder of her husband.

Finally Mrs. Biszak related how she had asked to again view the body, and how she had denied her former story and said: "No, he did not wear blue underwear, and that is not my husband."

These events preceded her release from custody after three weeks in a cell.

Mrs. Bizak then again demanded of her husband why he had not returned when he knew she was suspected of murdering him.

The man's reply probably never will be made known. Apparently it satisfied Mrs. Biszak, because soon after her husband was seated in the front room of the cottage receiving the congratulations of the neighbors.

Even the fact of the return might not have been made public had not a policeman heard merriment in the Biszak cottage and investigated. He was told to go away.

"I just been up in St. Paul," said Biszak.

Mrs. Biszak refused to permit any further explanation. "Talk to my man in Bohemia, so I can understand," she ordered. "You can't talk Bohemian? Well get out." The policeman went.

STATE GOLF TOURNAMENT

Will Be Held July 18 at Winona—Many to Attend.

Notice has been received locally of the intention to commence the state golf tournament July 18, at Winona. The plays this year will be under the auspices of the Meadow Brook Golf club, of Winona, and are expected to attract a large number of good players from the state in general. A few will probably go from Duluth, but as all the members have not consulted over the date it has not been determined who may go to represent the North Land club.

The links of the Meadow Brook club have been flooded recently by the overflowing of the creek, which runs through the grounds. Ordinarily the creek carries off all the water that comes to it, but the high water in Lake Winona this season has been too much for it. The golfers are hoping that the elements will be merciful in the neighborhood of the tournament dates, as wet weather would seriously handicap their pleasure.

There are thirteen prizes offered to winners, including two silver loving cups, one large and one small. The first is for the champion and the other for the runner up in the championship contest.

HE FEARS FOR WISCONSIN

Roosevelt Wants Special Attention Paid to That State.

Washington, June 28.—President Roosevelt does not disguise the fact to his political advisers that he is greatly perturbed over the Republican split in Wisconsin and the reported prospect of Democratic success there next fall. During the last 36 hours he has been conferring with party leaders who have come from the Chicago convention, and to them he unhesitatingly expressed his apprehension over the situation.

The president is of the opinion that a mistake was made when Governor LaFollette and his delegates were turned out of the national convention last week. If his wishes had been observed both factions would have been recognized and half of the Spooner and half of the LaFollette men been seated. But, strong as was his control of the convention, his desire in this respect was disregarded.

The president was very much displeased over the outcome of the contest, and accepted at par the reports that it would result in the probable loss to him of Wisconsin's electoral vote. Yesterday an effort was made to reassure him on that score, it being argued that while the factions would knife each other, they would support the presidential ticket, since there will be but one set of electors on the ballot. But while Mr. Roosevelt derived a little comfort from this explanation, he still believes the situation in the Badger State is full of danger, and Chairman Cortelyou will be expected to pay particular attention to it during the campaign.

TEST CASE DISMISSED

Government Has Right to Sell Pine From Indian Lands.

Washington, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The suit of Joseph Naganab against the secretary of the interior to test the constitutionality of the Morris act and to restrain the secretary of the interior from selling pine on the ceded Chippewa reservation in Minnesota, was today dismissed by Justice Anderson of the supreme court of the District of Columbia. The decision quotes the Lone Wolf opinion of the supreme court of the United States, in which it was declared that congress had power to dispose of Indian lands without first securing the consent of the Indians.

Are Still Kicking.

The board of equallaztion is in session again today to consider the protests against the returns of the twelve deputy assessors who have been at work during the past six weeks, assessing the real and personal property of the city.

The number of kicks has fallen off somewhat since yesterday, but a number of them have come in during the morning, and the board will not likely complete its work before tomorrow night.

Woman Charges Assault.

A neighborhood quarrel over some calves is said to have been the cause of the arrest of Harry Nully, who was arraigned in the municipal court before Judge Windom this morning, on the charge of assault.

Nully was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Delphine Forest, who claims that he did "wilfully, maliciously and wrongfully beat, bruise and maltreat her."

Nully pleaded not guilty to the charge and the hearing was set for tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

"Who Can Cure Weak Men?"
It is the simplest thing in the world to be cured of nervous debility and lack of vital power, if only you have the good sense to place your case in the right hands. It is really a marvelous cure for weak men at all ages, and if you would like to have this prescription you have simply to write the discoverer, Dr. H. C. Raynor, 279 Luck building, Detroit, Mich., and he will send it to you free of charge in a perfectly plain sealed envelope. Taxes Reduced.

Judge Cant has filed a finding in the district court abating the personal property tax of J. L. Washburn, reducing his personal property tax from $201.43 to $44.43.

Among the taxable items which the assessor had charged up to Attorney Washburn was a bank account of $5000, and the tax on this item was to be $157. Mr. Washburn remonstrated against the charge and convinced Judge Cant that he didn't have $5000 in the bank, so the court ordered a reduction in his taxes.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

Omaha World-Herald: The platform boasts that the Sherman anti-trust law has been "fearlessly enforced by a Republican president." Fearlessly enforced, indeed! While the people have felt the oppression of the trusts on every hand, the chief feature of the Sherman anti-trust law, the criminal clause, has been ignored by the Republican administration. It is true, civil proceedings were commenced against the beef trust, but it is a matter of record that since the injunction in those proceedings was issued the impositions on the part of the trusts have increased.

Brooklyn Eagle: The stuff on which fools are fed.

Detroit News: The trust plank can excite neither alarm nor hope. The government of the Republican party is not going "to run amuck." It will do well if it plays the part of the tardy policeman. Judicious care was taken not to get the arbitration and Panama planks too close together.

Boston Herald: The tariff planks of the platform adopted by the Republican convention yesterday represent an intolerance and bigotry more intense than was ever before exhibited in the fifty years in which the party has been in existence.

Baltimore News: The most substantial and definite thing determined by the Republican platform is the complete and uncompromising rejection of all demands for tariff revision.

Boston Transcript: One plank of the Republican platform reaffirms a principle that the political stand-patters would like to have ignored. That is the plank which would have come from the Chicago convention, and to them he unhesitatingly expressed his apprehension over the situation. The plank which would take away from the congressional representation be proportionately reduced, if it is determined that the disfranchisement is unconstitutional.

Butte Miner: Not satisfied with the tremendous expenditures now represented by the annual appropriations of congress, the platform commends the infamous ship subsidy scheme, under the disguise of assisting our merchant marine—one of the most colossal robberies ever planned by public conspirators against the treasury of the United States.

Springfield Republican: The Republicans certainly have much to be proud of in their record during the half century of their organized existence, and even their Democratic opponents can pardon the satisfaction and complacency of spirit which pervades the opening paragraphs. In reviewing the party record since 1897, however, there are some serious lapses from historical truth and at least one very grave violation of the standard set up in the platform of 1900. We must remember, of course, that this is a party pronunciamento, and that half truths, rather than whole ones, are the staple of consumption in party contests. Still, is it not trifling with history to deny to the Almighty some share of credit for the revival of business following 1897? Providence rather than the Republican party caused the great crop failure in Europe, the famine in India, our own enormous harvests, the discovery of gold in the Klondike, which combined to create conditions singularly favorable to the revival of prosperity in the years following McKinley's first election. But this platform ignores Providence entirely.

Indianapolis News: The panic of 1893 and the business depression thereafter were such as may come upon any country at any time—in the near future here under Republican control—and we shall be well off if no "panic" is worse than the "bankers' panic." In this connection it is well to note that there has been no change in financial conditions that will surely preserve us from a similar occurrence, in spite of the Republican claim that it has "established the gold standard." It were needless perhaps to notice the almost fulsome adulation of the president or the claims for services rendered. They are just claims. Our affairs have been administered with wisdom abroad and adroitness at home in taking care of the protected interests. Altogether, there is here a statement that the Democratic party will find hard to nullify in an appeal to the people as judges. The total effect seems to be prophetic of the admonition, "to him that hath shall be given."

Toledo Blade: No Republican need fear the outcome of a battle upon contesting principles, with the platform which the Chicago convention has adopted. It pledges the party to the same policy as in the past, upon lines of progress and national growth.

Kansas City Star: The Chicago convention has opened the way for the discussion of the tariff within the Republican lines. The only way to prevent some sort of revision of the Dingley law in the next presidential term, if Mr. Roosevelt is elected, will be to make the subject a live issue in the congressional canvass. This resort in itself would bring about a wholesome and fruitful discussion of the great economic problem within the party, where hitherto it has been out of order except when it was proposed to raise the tariff after it had been lowered by the Democrats.

Detroit Tribune: It is evident from the very nature of the document, its politic and inclusive phraseology, and the conditions of its birth and baptism, that the confidence of the Republican masses is asked less for the verbiage of the platform than for the capacity of the president and his allies in congress to wisely interpret each plank in the light of future conditions.

STOLEN MONEY FOUND.

Had Been Safely Invested By Embezzler.

City of Mexico, June 28.—Jesus De Les Cobos has confessed that he got "most, if not all," of the money stolen from the Banco Central. He says he invested the money safely and has not squandered any part of it. Police raided the house of commission merchants through which the money was invested. Four members of the firm were arrested, together with Blanche Rios, an actress. Three members of the firm were held, and the others released. They declare they were ignorant of the fact that the money was stolen. The amount was $407,000 in round numbers. The greater part and perhaps all will be recovered. Cobos was assistant cashier.

IS CHRISTIANITY DOOMED.

An Argument That This Religion Is Passing Away.

Why do not men go to church? asks a correspondent of the New York Sun. The answer seems to me to be a simple one. For a hundred and fifty years the Christian religion has been slowly expiring, and this fact is now clear to every type of enlightened mind except the theological, which is either unable to perceive it, owing to some peculiarity of its formation, or is not honest enough to admit it. The world owes Christianity to the natural law that the social oganism has the power of creating and absorbing institutions as the necessity for them arises, and, similarly, it is losing Christianity because when the necessity for an institution as a sustaining function ceases to exist, the organism possesses the equal power of throwing it off.

With the decline of the Graeco-Roman civilization Western society became disintegrated, the decentralized feudal system was developed and the slow process of welding society into a more composite state had to be begun anew. One of the most vital conditions of such a process is the existence of some form of moral order; and to maintain this the germ of Christianity was developed into a religion of great vitality.

This germ was not by any means a new acquisition by society. In almost every pre-Christian century some man or group of men had arisen and put forth ideas which were prevented from taking root and developing dogmas similar to those of Christianity only by the fact that the world did not then need them. At the time of Jesus, Judes was full of Messiahs—since prodigal nature produces many flowers where one comes to fruition. St. Paul provided the fertilizing principle to the teaching of Jesus, and lo! the Western world has what it sought, what was necessary if it was not to succumb entirely to the centrifugal forces of a dying social system.

Grandly indeed did the church perform its mission. Popes and cardinals may have been censurable on the score of morals, but these are matters of relatively no importance, and it can never be charged against the papal hierarchy that it lost sight of its great work of the preservation of the moral order in a decentralized, disorganized society. Slowly, but surely, it helped Western civilization over one of the hard places of its development.

A hundred instances such as the great moral victory at Canossa, or the quarrel of Boniface and Philip the Fair might be offered in support of this statement, were there any necessity to prove it. The church did suppress knowledge and hinder intellectual development; but the discoveries of Galileo and Copernicus never made the world any better, and it may not be going to far to hazard the statement that, when the action of the component forces to our civilization is better understood, it will become clear that we are better off today because of this interference—since while the moral cement was still wet and unhardened the spread of scientific knowledge and the development of hersy would have tended to overthrow the theological conceptions that were holding the fragments of a broken society together, and again would have shattered it.

By the middle of the sixteenth century the work of Christianity as a social factor was practicaly over; indeed, for two hundred years it has been turning its attention more and more to the moral guidance of the individual and was letting the larger game alone. The Western world may now be said to have come into possession of its moral consciousness; and this is what the church has accomplished. Of course, this consciousness was not, any more than it is today, acting perfectly, but it had been so developed that it no longer needed the guiding hand of its tutor. Society may now be said to have been safe from any such attempts upon its integrity as characterized the Middle Ages. England for seventy-five years had been enjoying a government in which the people have an adequate share of the responsibility. In Prussia the last of the "great" Kings, Frederick II., was using his will and power solely for the development of his country. In France the last Bourbons were industriously digging the graves into which they were soon to be not gently assisted.

It was from this last country that the idea was to spread that dealt the death blow to Christianity, and this was the very simple discovery that man is not an innately depraved being that he had never "fallen," but, on the contrary, has been always rising and if he was bad, this was not due to any innate quality to be corrected by theological remedies (baptism, etc.) but because he had been badly educated and badly governed.

Without going into the genesis of this discovery, for which Jean Jacques Rousseau, Diderot and the encyclopaedists were almost wholly responsible, it may be noted that its germ had been present in every century of the Middle Ages. But, like that of Christianity, it had not developed, and a new conception of the world and of the destinies of man was needed for the further progress of the Western races.

The coming of the idea of the fall of man naturally carried with it the rest of the Pauline theology (incarnation, atonement), since upon it the wonderful structure was based. Henceforth all real moral and spiritual progress was to be made without the influence of these ideas. The "saving of souls" now became a political and educational function, not religious, and the gradual perception of this fact is one of the main reasons for the emptying of the churches.

It may be objected that this decay is not yet evident as we ought to be but if we study the rise of Christianity in the first century and a half of its existence, we discover that the rate of progress was not greater than that of the decay for a corresponding length of time. Within the past forty years our knowledge of the origin, destinies and duties of man has become completely revolutionized by the discoveries of natural and economic science. The Protestant sects have practically abandoned any such interpretation of Christian dogma as made religion the force and power it was. If you discuss this matter with any seminary student, you find this out. The Roman Catholic alone of the churches still holds largely to the old ideas, but its claim that it is strong as ever, if not stronger, is believed only by its most devout adherents. Look at the power of the ecclesiastical authorities in France at the end of the eighteenth century (for instance in the Calais and La Barre cases, made famous by the splendid interference of Voltaire), and ask yourself how far from possible the exercise of any such power would be today.

From the Western mind the idea of God as a being to be worshipped with song or vicarious sacrifice adopted from Graeco-Roman ritual is slowly fading—abandoned as an absurdity inherited from the groping ignorance of the infancy of the human soul. Men do not pray, for they recognize in prayer a continued plea to a deity to make exception in their favor of the unalterable law of cause and effect; and as "church" still means the performance of these things, they simply stay away.

How can men be made to go to church? Surely not by instituting girl ushers, blackboard sermons, roof garden services, or by permitting women to come bareheaded (shades of St. Paul!) or men in negligee shirts. The cause of their absence lies far beyond the efficacy of any such remedies.

FITZSIMMONS GOT EVEN.

Fails to Make Bill Slavin Quit and Plans a Hold-Up

Bob Fitzsimmons is known among his professional brethren as a humorist, says the New York Sun. There is nothing Fitz likes better than to play a joke on some one. He never stops to think of the consequences, and should his victim give him a dose of his own medicine Fitz will have a hearty laugh in the bargain.

About fifteen years ago the Cornishman met Bill Slavin, a brother of Paddy Slavin, the well known Australian heavyweight, in a twenty round bout at Larry Foley's place in Sydney. Slavin held his own for five rounds. In the sixth round, though, Fitz began to reach Slavin's stomach with the left and the blows took all the steam out of his opponent. At the end of the eleventh round Slavin was in a bad way. Bob, who was a good friend of Bill's did not care to hurt him further, so he appealed to Slavin to quit, and the latter promised to do so in the next round, the twelfth. Near the end of the round Fitz once more asked Slavin to quit.

"I will," shouted Slavin, "and I'll do it now."

Just then the gong sounded and Slavin retired to his corner, while Bob went to his and commenced to remove his gloves, thinking that he had won and that the scrap was over. Slavin, observing what Fitz was doing, yelled at the top of his voice:

"The fight isn't over yet, Bob. I've changed my mind. I'm not goin' to quit."

The ex-champion was angry, but readjusted his gloves and the fight proceeded. At the end of the contest Fitz was very tired and puffing. Slavin, although much battered, was as fresh as a daisy. Of course, as Fitz had done all the work, he got the verdict.

The next night Slavin and Fitz appeared to be as chummy as ever. The former was unsuspecting and when Fitz invited Slavin to dine with him at a cafe in the suburbs Slavin readily accepted the invitation. When they were about fifty yards from the cafe two masked men pounced upon them in the gloom and leveled their guns at the heads of the two fighters. Slavin was very much frightened, while Bob seemed to enjoy the whole proceedings. The two supposed highwaymen marched the pair to the rear of the cafe, where there was a deserted dancing pavilion. When they got there the pseudo robbers asked which of the two was Slavin. Bill, still much frightened, yelled: "I am the one you are after, gentlemen. What's the row? I haven't done anything wrong to be held up in this manner."

Bob promptly revealed himself and then one of the highwaymen pursued:

"You two chaps fought last night at Larry Foley's, didn't you? And Fitzsimmons, won, didn't he? During that fight Slavin said that he would or had quit and changed his mind. We were present at that 'go' and we were much struck by Slavin's pluck. But we have doubts whether he hasn't a yellow streak. And we have taken occasion tonight to find out if that yellow streak exists. We are not going to harm you, but one of you two must convince us that you are no quitter."

Saying this the robber bade Slavin to start a reel and jig. Slavin demurred at first, but as he gazed on the cold barrel of a revolver which confronted his very nose he started to dance. He kept it up for about twenty minutes and then fell to the floor exhausted.

"Oh, oh!" shouted the robbers. "So you have quit. I guess it's you who is the quitter after all, and that your stand last night was a blarney." Then the robbers gave Slavin a scare by declaring that unless he continued to dance for two hours at a stretch they would fill him with holes. Slavin began again, but at the end of twenty-five minutes he fell to the floor, completely worn out.

Just then Fitz burst into a hearty laugh. The robbers removed their masks and standing before him Bill recognized two of his best friends. Fitz was convulsed with laughter, and while Slavin was trying to recover from his astonishment the Cornishman said:

"You're no quitter, eh? Oh, no! no, no! But we made you quit tonight, didn't we? Now I am even for last night."

Then after Fitz had informed the frightened fighter of how he had planned the holdup and how he had schemed to square matters, all hands returned to town, where they cemented old ties over several foaming glasses of ale.

SAW A LIVE OKAPI.

Major James Harrison, traveller and sportsman, has just returned to England after an adventurous period of big game huntjng in the great forest of Central Africa, says the London Mail.

Yesterday he related the story of his experiences: "I started a few days after Christmas, and made my way down to the Stanley Forest, where the pigmies are. I saw many of the pigmies. They used to keep away from us on our approach, but afterward hung on our rear. They are keen little people and good hunters; none was over 3 feet 10 inches in height.

"Failing to find the okapi I worked up to Jabir, and thence into the great forest of De Melley. The trees of the forest were so interwoven with tangled creepers and underwood that one had often to crawl to make one's way through it. On the sixth day in the forest we came on the spoor of okapi. We had been following it for hours when, on suddenly turning round a bush, I saw an okapi not more than fifteen feet in front of me.

"It was an animal something like a giraffe, some ten or eleven feet high, of a tawny gray in color, with stripes over the loins. It was gone like a flash into the thicket long before I could get my rifle from the native who was carrying it. I never saw the okapi again."

THE PROHIBITION NATIONAL CHAIRMAN IS AGAINST MILES

Indianapolis, June 28.—One thousand delegates and visitors to the National Prohibition convention have arrived, but as they have distributed themselves among the smaller hotels and in boarding houses, where no bars are maintained, their presence in the city is scarcely noticeable. The arrivals represent many states and territories. The Illinois special train is expected tonight. Leaders estimate that 3000 delegates, alternates and visitors will have arrived tomorrow when the first business session of the convention opens. This will not include the Indiana visitors. They are expected to swell the attendance to 6000. National Chairman Stewart, of Chicago, began today taking a lead in the opposition to the nomination of Gen. Miles. State Chairman Jones, of Pennsylvania, is at the head of the Miles forces. The fight against Miles is declared to be contingent upon his continuing the silence he has so far maintained as to his position. They demand that he declare himself for the prohibition movement and announce his willingness to be the party candidate. The postponed caucus of those holding this position was held at Claypool today.

THREE HUNDRED MILITIAMEN FORM NET ABOUT MURDERER

Chicago, June 28.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Winona, Minn., says: John Smith, supposed to be guilty of four murders, the latest of which was the shooting of Sheriff Harris, of Eau Claire, Wis., a few days ago, on an Omaha passenger train near that city, while the sheriff was attempting to arrest him on the charge of robbing a store at Rosmond, Wis., has been located in the bottoms across the river from this city. Three hundred Wisconsin militiamen form a net, through which the desperado can hardly escape alive.

At Galesville he entered a farm house and demanded something to eat. When the food was placed on the table he placed his revolvers in front of him and allowed no one to leave the room.

In addition to the murder of Sheriff Harris, Smith is wanted for the killing of the chief of police of Havre, Mont. After the killing of the Montana officer he grew fearful that his wife or child might give up the crime, so, it is alleged, he shot them both and fled to Wisconsin. He is 24 years old.

Dandruff What is it? The beginning of gray hair, falling hair, baldness. Extremely untidy, and annoying, too. The remedy? Ayer's Hair Vigor. It keeps the scalp healthy, stops falling of the hair.

PROGRESS TO REPORT.

Wall street is still in the dumps. The business man who draws his inspiration from that source is liable to wear a long face. A plentitude of idle money and the almost entire absence of demand for stocks and securities has had a depressing effect upon the men who usually gain an easy competence through the speculative follies and gambling propentities of mankind. The newspapers which draw their inspiration from that source also bewail the departure of our one-time merry prosperity.

But Wall street contains only a small portion of the population of the United States. The millions of people engaged in productive enterprises throughout the country are not thinking hard times, are not talking hard times, are not experiencing hard times.

The short period of stagnation caused by an overproduction of iron and steel products, which in turn was caused by the unnatural stimulation of excessive tariffs has practically run its course. The demand is rapidly decreasing the over-supply. Idle furnaces are preparing to go into blast, mills are resuming and railroad traffic will soon reach its wonted voltime.

The revival is already being felt at the head of Lake Superior. Steady resumption of mining activity on all the iron ranges of this region is the order of the day. Hardly a day passes without an account of some mine resuming business on the Minnesota ranges. The demand for foodstuffs and all farm products continues unabated at remunerative prices. Were it not that the food trusts and combines are permitted to take an unjust share of the fruits of production, the farmers of the country would be particularly prosperous at this time, while the consumers would be enabled to live much cheaper. That is the explanation of whatever hardship is being experienced by the producing classes.

Every crop report that comes from Minnesota and the Northwest bears tidings of good cheer. The farming districts are consuming just as many goods as ever and are paying for them. Whatever feeling of depression there may be in speculative circles the remainder of the country refuses to share in it. Business is still being done, and it is business of the solid, legitimate character that makes for general prosperity.

A recent report confirms many others that Canada is experiencing an era of prosperity, and particularly the great Canadian Northwest. Duluth will not fail to benefit as a result. There is every reason for the business interests of Duluth to look forward with renewed hope and confidence.

A GOOD MOVE.

The resolution of Alderman Barnes regarding a garbage crematory plant is a timely one. It is not good policy to dispose of garbage as it is done at present. It should be either burned or worked up into fertilizing material so that the city might obtain some revenue therefrom. It is a pity to waste so much good material and it is a danger to the public health to dispose of it as is done at present.

It would also be advisable for the council committee which has been appointed to investigate this matter to look up the matter of a crematory for human bodies. Perhaps it would be practical to provide such a crematory in connection with the proposed garbage plant without a great deal of additional cost. There are hundreds of people in Duluth who would cremate the bodies of dead relatives if there was opportunity of doing so without going to great expense. There are many more who would become converts to the idea once a crematory in operation made them acquainted with the wholesomeness and benefits. It is a sensible and practical plan of disposing of the dead, and the bodies of all county paupers should be thus reduced to ashes. Such a plant could be made to yield a self-sustaining revenue, as well as a garbage crematory.

The instruction to the city attorney to draw an ordinance making conviction of an employment agent sufficient ground for revocation of license was also a wise and proper move. If employment agents know that the council means business and that once they are convicted of crooked dealing they are to be denied the privilege of doing business in the city, the chances are that they will be a little more careful about taking money to which they are not justly entitled.

ONE WAY TO PREVENT.

The vestry of St. John's Episcopal church, of Brooklyn, on the recommendation of the rector, Dr. Page, has passed a resolution declaring that it will refuse to sanction any more Sunday school excursions by water until transportation can be secured on "an iron or steel steamboat, with fireproof decks, protected boiler and galley rooms, a minimum of woodwork, a properly drilled crew and a full supply of life-saving devices." The officials of the Sunday School union and of other churches are invited to take like action.

Every church in Duluth and throughout the country should take similar action. The lives of thousands of little children are often entrusted to Sunday school superintendents and teachers because the parents are too busy to go on excursions with them. If officials are negligent of their duty in inspecting, church officials should not neglect theirs. The way to compel vessel-owners to provide safe excursion boats is not to patronize the unsafe ones and if there are any fire traps doing excursion business at the head of the lakes they ought not to be patronized.

It has been suggested that in all Sunday school excursions the excursionists ride on a scow to be towed by tug or steamboat. But if a steamboat is properly built it would be no more liable to danger from fire than a scow.

The officers of the Brooklyn church who took this stand are to be commended. They have paved the way to a solution of the whole question as far as Sunday school excursions are concerned.

WHAT TURNED THE SCALE.

How the preacher may benefit his country by taking a part in political affairs is shown in a story told by the Boston Transcript regarding The Hague tribunal. The truth of this recital is vouched for by Drs. Edward Everett Hale and George E. Horr, formerly editor of the Watchman, who got it from the late Hon. Frederick Holls. Mr. Holls was a delegate of the United States to The Hague conference, and a very influential member of it, his representative character as a German-American, and his attainments as an international lawyer, giving him influence with the Teutonic nation's representatives such as no other member of the American delegation had. After some rather discouraging sessions of the conference, when events were not being recorded as he wished them to be, Mr. Hollis met the ambassador of one of the great continental powers, who said to him: "Mr. Holls, one of the great difficulties connected with this matter is that my government is not convinced that the public opinion of the United States behind this movement is sufficient in breadth and volume to guarantee the continuity of policy of a great democracy like yours."

This was an interesting admission by the ambassador that our nation is one where public opinion is a force to be reckoned with by Europe, making for or against such compacts as were proposed at The Hague. But Mr. Holls did not stop to comment on the admission's significance; he set about furnishing the evidence the ambassador asked for. "Your excellency," he said, "see these telegrams I have received from the United States this morning. Read this," whereupon Mr. Holls handed a message from thirty-one Baptist clergymen in the state of Washington urging the American delegates to do their utmost to induce the conference to form a permanent tribunal. "Those Baptist ministers away up in Washington," said Mr. Holls, 'paid a dollar apiece to get that telegram into my hands this morning. They believe in arbitration." "Will you let me have a copy of that," said the ambassador, "I want to lay it before my government." "Take the original," said Mr. Holls. The ambassador put the message in the hands of his government and a few hours later the empire he represented gave its adhesion to the instrument that established The Hague tribunal, and its example was decisive.

Dr. Hale and Dr. Horr claim that the straw that turned the scale that made The Hague arbitration tribunal a great fact, was the telegram from the Baptist ministers of Washington, five of whom were graduates of Newton Theological seminary, the leader of the movement and the man most responsible for the telegram being Rev. A. B. Banks, of Newton.

The Hague tribunal is not yet perfect as an international court, because no nation is compelled to resort to it for the settlement of disputes, but its establishment was a long and decisive step in the right direction and one that gives hope and encouragement to the lovers of peace throughout the world.

If these Washington ministers had refrained from meddling in politics, and if one particularly had not possessed the courage to take the initiative, The Hague conference might have resulted in failure. This shows the power that one good man may be able to exert on the world's affairs.

The Minnesota Socialist party will hereafter be known as the "Public Ownership" party. It is safe to say that if there is any merit in the name the latter will attract more votes than the former. In his country the word "socialism" has been too closely associated with some things that are not social nor right.

Perhaps the most elaborate special edition ever issued by a Northwestern newspaper was one published on June 26 by the Grand Forks Herald, in commemoration of its silver anniversary. The edition is in book form and consists of 120 large pages. It is an artistic and typographical success, the matter being devoted to a review of the growth of North Dakota. During the twenty-five years of the Herald's career George B. Winship has always been its directing mind, and that he has builded well and strongly is a generally acknowledged fact. Considering the size of the city, the Grand Forks Herald is a splendid modern newspaper in all that the name implies.

TALKS WITH THE STATE PRESS.

"You never know a person until you have had business relations with him," says the Austin Register. "We meet persons socially and lose our hearts. We see them models in the family and devoted in church work, but wait until you meet them in business and see how close they shave, how grasping they become, how they stick to their pound of flesh, how every other quality seems swallowed up in selfishness and you wish you had escaped your business experience with them. Then again to keep the scales of human nature balanced you meet, often in the more humble walks of life, people whose best qualities never come out until you have business relations with them. Socially they make no showing, religiously they make no pretentions, yet they go through life guided by a more shining mark than a silver dollar. They want only what they pay for, and they pay a debt not only willingly, but gladly, and greet you pleasantly after it is paid. Such people are the salt of the earth, and to associate with them keeps the lamp of faith in human nature burning."

That some of our engineers have gone concrete-mad. They are using armored concrete in floor construction, in spans that challenge collapse. They are now even attempting to build railway bridge trusses of steel concrete. It is a material eminently fitted for use when substituted for stone or other construction where great masses may be used, in foundations, in piers, walls, abutments, etc., but it is worse than criminal to attempt to make it serve the purpose of steel or other essentially tensile resistants, and one reason is enough to justify that statement. The Railway Age, one of the most liberal of engineering journals, states it thus: "That the quality of any given mass of concrete is and must always remain somewhat a matter of faith, since a little dirt, an undetected spoiled barrel of cement may upset every expectation of strength," and it certainly is criminally foolish to assume a strength which is indeterminate, and on that assumption, trust the safety of human lives. There is absolutely no substitute for steel, and where the latter is exposed to fire and consequent damage, the only thing to do is to protect that steel with hollow fireproof tile.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Need any bell boys?"

The question was asked of the hotel man by the small boy who had come in and was peering over the counter.

"'Fraid not."

"Dont' need any boys for any other kind of work 'round here, do you?"

"No. We don't need any boys at all now. Sorry."

"Same old story, eh?" suggested the little fellow.

"Yes, I guess it is."

The boy started out, not with a discouraged air, however, but seemingly full of confidence at finding something to do elsewhere.

"This is the time of the year when the kids are out for summer jobs," commented the Boniface. "All the schools are about out, and the lads are often from families of moderate circumstances where a few dollars earned by the young chaps during the summer months are very welcome to the homes.

"Bell boys change very often, though, as a rule. The great trouble is that a bell boy who can do his work right and who is a desirable quantity is a great deal rarer than the rarest day of this month, and days of this month are mighty rare now, for there are only a few of 'em left. Bell boys are very independent, because the work is light and the pay is not burdensome. A bell boy is independent for the reason that he always thinks he can get a job somewhere else if he does not hold it here—a job as bell boy, I mean.

"Then he knows also that he can get a job doing something else if he is willing to work a little harder than the bell boy has to, and can probably make a little more money. But after they get past a certain age they lose their ambition and don't care to be much else but bell boys.

"One trouble about the bell boys quitting so often is the fault of the irritable clerks. Some clerks think they are the whole thing and that the bell boys are so much useless material, and they try to treat them accordingly. The result is very often the sudden leaving of our service of some good bell boy who will not stand being treated harshly, and we are up against it to get another."

A traveler who was in Chicago during the convention reports a new prank as being played in the Windy City during the convention time. It is a pretty good one, too.

"I was standing in the hotel one morning," said he, "when a couple of friends who were attending the convention came up to me and began talking. We had conversed for a little, when one of the fellows asked what time it was. He said he had left his watch in his room and would not otherwise have troubled anybody about it.

"The two of us reached for our watches, and the man next me, who was trying to get his out, either seemed to be unsteady about it or I was unsteady. At any rate we collided and the watch fell out of his hand to the floor. He looked down in a scared way, and I was scared too. The watch did not seem to be making any noise, at least I could not hear it tick.

"The owner seemed too much saddened to reach to pick up the watch and of course I was anxious to see how much damage I had possibly been responsible for. I grabbed it. It was a good deal heavier than most watches and not quite as large. It was silent, too, for it was a dummy watch.

"I believe it must have been filled with lead for it weighed fully a pound, even for its small size."

"Thought you'd broken my watch didn't you?" he asked with a laugh.

"I was afraid something of the kind had occurred and I admitted it to him. The joke was on me and I had to set 'em up. The dummy jewelry was gilded all over and looked like a sure enough watch when it laid on the floor. On the face side the name of the firm it was the advertisement for was printed in raised letters. One of the features of the trick which failed when it was tried on me was to drop it on my feet. To have that heavy thing drop on a fellow's toes and make him think he's responsible for breaking it in the bargain is calculated to give a man sensations that are like a ligning change act, and the single idea strikes me as a pretty good one."

Wouldn't Stand For That.

Louisville Herald: "Don't you dare call me a 'good fellow,'" said Phil Brather, of Detroit, to one of his friends as he leaned against the office counter at the Galt house the other night.

"I'll stand for anything but being called a 'good fellow.' None of that for me. I got in a whole peck of trouble about that title only a few weeks ago.

"Friends of mine had repeatedly told my wife that I was a 'good fellow.' She wondered over it and couldn't comprehend what they meant by the sobriquet. So one day when a friend of hers chanced to say that another man was a 'good fellow,' she asked the meaning of the term.

"'Why, that means,' said the friend, 'a man who is always good-natured, can tell a good story, spends his money freely and shamefully neglects his family.'

"Now, you can imagine that after this description I got mine. Oh, yes! I got mine. Call me a bad fellow if you will—anything but a 'good fellow.'"

Thoughts For Russian Sympathizers

New York Sun: There never was a people that has had more provocation to revolution than have the Finlanders today. Lovers of liberty the world over will have reason to bless the war in the far East, if one outcome of Russia's discomfiture and humiliation is the restoration of Finland's ancient and well deserved autonomy.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN DULUTH

An effort was made to learn the name of the murderer of Mrs. Roumark, of Hermantown, by holding a spiritualistic seance in Duluth. The spiritualists claim that the insane man did not commit the deed, and that they know the name of the man who did.

At a meeting of the school board, held this week, it was decided to engage W. H. Stultz, of Chillicothe, Mo., for superintendent of schools, at a salary of $1500 per year. Mr. Stultz is a married man, highly educated and reputed to be an excellent teacher.

Charles W. Sleeper returned from the West this morning.

Judge C. Bradley, of Northern Pacific Junction, was in the city yesterday.

Carl Schelling has evidently become disgusted with the idea of organizing a good band in Duluth, and has resigned his position as leader. He will go to Ashland.

The school year ended yesterday. At the beginning of the next year there will be six extra teachers, making a total of twenty-four, as follows: Louise Hollister, Lizzie Park, Agnes Campbell, Minnie Fleming, Ella Madden, Ella Hopper, Harriet Gray, Sarah Feetham, Mary Murdock, Katie Rudolph, Edith Bostwick, Mary McDonald, Minnie Taylor, Wilma Nichols, Carrie Noyes, Sara Dudley, Jennie Staples, Sarah Starkey, Ida Hubbard, Belle Calverley, Fannie Calverley, Anna Spain. Professor Stultz, superintendent.

Gordon E. Cole, of Minneapolis, has been invited to deliver the Fourth of July oration in Duluth.

The street railway company will extend its track from Third avenue east to Eighth avenue east at once.

FOR YOUR DAILY SMILE.

Judge: Mrs. Cobwigger—So your husband thinks his position in society is now secure?

Mrs. Newrich—Yes. He is so sure about it that he has stopped hiring a dress suit and is having one made to order.

Chicago Daily News: "I would like a nice ring that would be a suitable gift for a young lady," said the youth with the noisy tie.

"Fiancee or sister?" asked the jeweler.

Chicago Record-Herald: "I'd hate to feel," she said, "that I was the wife of a man who had bought me simply for my beauty."

"Yes," her friend replied. "I don't blame you. Being married to a blind man would be awfully disagreeable, I should think."

Cincinnati Enquirer: Miss Stringem—Yes, Mr. Muggsby, I think you would make a lovely comedian.

Muggsby—You flatter me. But do you really think I have talent?

Miss Stringem—Oh, not necessarily, but you have such a funny face.

Chicago Daily News: "What is your age, madam?" asked the judge of a witness.

"Thirty," she replied.

"Thirty what?" asked his honor.

"Thirty years, of course," snapped the fair witness.

"Beg pardon," said the judge. "I thought perhaps it was thirty months."

Chicago Post: "She is going to organize a new society of international scope that she says will be the largest in existence."

"What is she going to call it?"

"The Daughters of the South American Revolutions."

THE DULUTH CONVENTION.

Moorhead Citizen: The Democratic state convention held at Duluth on the 22nd, was one of the largest and best conventions ever held in the state and everything passed off nicely and an uninstructed delegation was sent, there being eleven for Hearst and eleven anti-Hearst. The Democrats this year will make a hard fight to win and they have a good chance.

Fosston Thirteen Towns: John Lind, now that he succeeded in knocking Hearst all to thunder in the Duluth convention, says that he is ready to retire from active politics.

Cass Lake Times: The faithful ones of the old guard (Democratic) met at Duluth on the 22nd inst. and after much wrangling and unharmful scrapping, named delegates to represent the party at St. Louis on the sixth of July. Maj. Bowler, a rank Hearst man, was elected temporary chairman and his friends and all the followers of W. R. Hearst howled themselves hoarse with expectation of a complete Hearst victory. But Johnny Lind and Chris. O'Brien and several other flu-ent speakers were there, and when the time came for "giving tongue," the Hearst men, destitute of "spell binders," lost all their advantage and the delegation was not instructed. It is said that the delegation is equally divided, but that counts for nothing; Hearst has lost his hold upon the state, and when the vote is taken he will be bereft of Minnesota's support. Another speech from Lind, a few heart-to-heart talks and Parker will have secured the delegation.

Hinckley Enterprise: John Lind proved too much for the Hearst boomers at the Democratic convention this week. Hearst ought not forget the old adage that there's many a slip between cup and lip.

Indianapolis News: As a result of the eloquence of Congressman Lind Minnesota will send an uninstructed delegation to St. Louis instead of declaring for Hearst. It looks more and more as if the boom trust would be compelled to pass a dividend some of these days.

Mankato Free Press: Mr. O'Brien should remember that a Democratic convention without a first-class row could hardly be designated as a Democratic convention.

How He Got Out.

A typical anti-Cleveland man in Washington is the proprietor of a flourishing drug store. He used to be an officeholder.

"I attribute the meanest run of hard luck that ever I had to Cleveland," said this druggist to a Washington Post man, in explaining his antipathy to the sage of Princeton. "Remember how he used to make a regular practice along toward the close of his second administration of firing Democrats from office and allowing rampant Republicans to hang onto their jobs? Well, I was one of the fired. I was nudged into the chill, dark air on the charge of being an offensive partisan—me, one of the most putrescent Democrats that ever took a look up and down Pennsylvania avenue.

"And that wasn't the worst of it. I'd only been fired a little while before my pension was reduced.

"I was up against it for fair when I decided, one morning, to go over into the Maryland marshes for a day of bird shooting. Well, I was potting away at the birds when a big thunderstorm came up. The rain began to fall in torrents, and, so as not to get soaked and sozzled, I crawled into the hollow of a big hollow tree lying close to the verge of the river.

"My hard luck stuck right along to me. The torrential rain swelled that fallen tree up so rapidly that inside of half an hour I saw that the hole through which I'd crawled wasn't anything like big enough to permit of my getting out again. It was a mighty serious predicament for the finish. But I had a lot of things to say to myself while I was waiting to be smothered to death in the hollow of that dead tree.

"'What the dickens,' I muttered to myself, 'have I ever done to deserve such a continuous performance of hard, measly jolts as I've been having handed to me lately, anyhow?'

"I was raking over my past life with a fine-tooth comb, trying to recall if I'd ever done anything to merit such a series of hard upper-cuts at the hand of Destiny when, all of a sudden, a great while light broke upon my mind.

"'By jinks,' said I to myself, out loud, 'I know what I've done to deserve it all. I've voted twice for Grover Cleveland for president of the United States!'

"Well, sir, the recollection of that humiliating fact caused me to shrivel up so that inside of less than two minutes I was able to crawl out of the hollow tree through a knot-hole in the top, gun and all!"

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Mighty few men ever dream they can afford to wear such good clothes as they pay for their sons.

When a man brags about how little his wife runs their house on, it is a sign he won't give her what she asks to do it.

The time to squeeze a girl's hand is when somebody is so nearly looking that if she makes a sound or moves they'll surely see.

It's terrible hard to convince a woman that a man ought to walk crooked so as not to humiliate the man who is with him with a jag.

A Good Suggestion.

Chicago Journal: If the Democrats show as much energy, ingenuity and persistence in attacking the Republicans as they do in knocking one another, they might have some show of winning a battle now and then.

Writers' Rights.

Newark News: "Write 'rite,'" said Wright.

The wright wrote "right."

"That isn't 'rite,'" said Wright. "I tell you to write 'rite,' and you write 'right.' Wright 'rite' right!"

"Right away, Wright," right cheerfully replied the wright, and he wrote "write."

That's 'write,' all right," said Wright, 'but when wright tells a wright to write 'right' right, and the wright writes 'write' right, but doesn't write 'rite' right, it isn't right."

ST. LOUIS COUNTY CONVENTION HELD

Dunn Forces Were In Complete Control and Elected Delegates.

Instructions Given For Dunn For Governor and Judge Lewis.

Senator E. B. Hawkins, chairman of the Republican county committee, called the county convention to order at 2 o'clock sharp this afternoon. The council chamber was crowded with delegates and spectators.

George J. Mallory, of West Duluth, after it was decided to dispense with the calling of the roll, moved that Senator Hawkins be made temporary chairman. This was carried by a very loud chorus of "ayes."

It was decided, on motion of W. E. Richardson, that in order to expedite business, the committee on credentials be dispensed with and the delegates in the hall seated.

George W. Buck moved that the chairman appoint committees on resolutions and on the selection of forty delegates to the state convention at St. Paul Thursday. This was carried with a vim. Everything proposed was taken through without any obstruction up to this time, but there was the general impression that some music would begin when the committees reported.

The slate was ready as soon as Senator Hawkins was able to read it. It was typewritten, and had all the committees on it, even to the credentials committee, which was dispensed with.

The following were the committees chosen, and the members were called out by their respective chairmen as soon as appointed:

Resolutions—W. E. Richardson, chairman; A. A. Fider, C. D. Rutherford, Richard Trezona, Harry Thomas.

To select delegates to the state convention—George W. Buck, chairman; G. H. Crosby, E. Z. Griggs, George J. Mallory, W. F. Chinn.

While the committees were out Chairman Hawkins called on Joseph B. Cotton, who was in the hall, to address the waiting delegates. Mr. Cotton was enthusiastically received and felicitated the Republicans on their party and its candidates. His voice was strong and his speech clear and pointed. The delegates were greatly pleased with the informal address of Mr. Cotton and interrupted it frequently with cheers and hand clapping.

When Mr. Richardson read the resolutions, after Mr. Cotton had concluded, the hall was still until the mention of Candidate Dunn was reached in the document, when the men present broke into hearty applause, without a dissenting man being heard from. Congressman Bede's name was applauded.

When Mr. Richardson moved the adoption of the resolutions, he got a quick second and when the chair put the question for "ayes" they came as one man. He called for the "noes," and for a few moments the hall was silent. Then one courageous Collins man said, "no." There was more silence. Then another one held "no." But by this time the minority had waited too long and spent all its courage. No more opposition was heard on the resolutions, which were as follows:

"We, the Republicans of St. Louis county in convention assembled, hereby affirm and renew our allegiance to the Republican party, and with complete satisfaction subscribe to and ratify the platform and declaration of principles recently adopted by the Republican national convention at Chicago, and we hereby declare that the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for president and Charles W. Fairbanks for vice-president meets with our most hearty approval, and we pledge our loyal and enthusiastic support.

"We commend the able, loyal and beneficent services rendered the nation and the state by Senators Knute Nelson and Moses E. Clapp, and by our distinguished representative in congress from this district, J. Adam Bede.

"We point with pride at the services rendered the state by Judge Charles L. Lewis, of Duluth, and the delegates chosen by this convention to the Republican state convention are hereby instructed to vote for him for renomination as associate justice of the supreme court and to use all honorable means to secure that end, and they are hereby further instructed to vote for Honorable Robert C. Dunn, of Princeton, as the choice of St. Louis county for governor, and to use all honorable means to secure his election.

"Resolved, that the delegates by this convention chosen to the Republican state convention at St. Paul, Minnesota, June 30, 1904, be and hereby are instructed to vote as a unit upon all questions and matters coming before the convention, and that in the absence of any of these from the convention, those actually attending are hereby authorized to cast the entire vote to which St. Louis is entitled."

The committee on delegates was out a long time, presumably for the reason that the problems of getting a big list of names cut down to forty was a hard one. It was generally supposed that about 400 men in the county, more or less had expressed their willingness to go to St. Paul to represent the party in the fight.

The convention talked, smoked and told stories while the committee on delegates was gone and wondered what the Collins crowd might spring. It was painfully apparent up to this time that the wind which expected to fill the sails of the Collinsites war craft was woefully lacking. So far the convention had acted practically as one man and got through with all business before it in very short order.

The committee on delegates, through its chairman, George W. Buck, reported at 2:45 p. m., after half an hour's session. The delegates and alternates are as follows:

DELEGATES.

MALE WORSHIPERS

Wear Shirt Waists In New York Church.

New York, June 28.—At the morning and evening services in St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal church in Newark, N. J., Sunday many of the men in the congregation appeared in shirt waists or in dainty negligee shirts and without suspenders or coats. Some went from their homes to church that way, and others wore their coats and removed them after reaching the church. Others who intended to do so became timid and kept their coats on. More than one-half of the women in the congregation were without their hats.

In the mixed choir the men were in their shirt sleeves and the young women had discarded their hats.

The Rev. Clarence True Wilson, pastor, was responsible for the innovation. Early last week he declared that he had no objection to coatless men and hatless women in his church on Sunday, but would be pleased to see them. "There is no sane reason why people should be uncomfortable in church a few more than anywhere else," he declared. "In summer season more persons would go to church if they could be relieved of the necessity of dressing in what have hitherto been regarded as conventional clothes."

Birthplace of Our Flag.

It is gratifying to note that the building known as the "birthplace of the flag" is to be preserved, and to that end the government has decided to purchase the house. The fact that the nation did not secure the house of so sacred a symbol of national life long ago has often been wondered at. It is also gratifying to note the remarkable success of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in curing indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, nervousness, headaches and malaria, fever and ague, and it is to be wondered at that sickly people will continue to suffer when the Bitters will cure them. Women, too, who value their health should not delay in taking the Bitters. It is unequalled as a tonic for their weak organs, inducing regularity and preventing many of the ills they are subject to.

MISER'S WEALTH,

Confided to Old Housekeeper Is Found.

Walton, Ky., June 28.—Directed by "Aunt Cass," an old and faithful negro servant, searchers found $15,000 which had been secreted in and about the home of John Fleet, who died near Verona on Friday. Fleet was a well-known miser, and before his death he confided the hiding place of his money to the old woman, who has been his housekeeper for many years.

In addition to the hidden money was found a deposit book of Richard Fleet, now dead, showing that he had $5000 in the Farmers' and Traders' bank at Covington. A will was found in which he left the old negress $2000. The woman is 96 years old.

Eleven heirs, who come in for a total of $15,000, will also share in the proceeds of a farm valued at $12,000.

THE MISSING LINK.

Said to Have Been Discovered In African Wilds.

"No, I couldn't swear that they were human, and I couldn't swear that they were monkeys, but all that I know is that I saw them in the jungles of Central Africa on the shores of Lake Nyanza, about 10 years ago, and they looked to me like pigmies with tails about six inches long."

In these words James Godshall, a rugged old bachelor from Pennsylvania who lived 27 years in South Africa, traveling from the Cape of Good Hope to the headwaters of the River Nile, described a queer race of people which he saw during one of his expeditions into the then almost unknown Congo Free State, says a Philadelphia Exchange.

"I was with a party of engineers and electricians who were constructing the first eelegraph line from Johannesburg to the Upper Nile," he said "when we ran across the strange creatures. They were the most peculiar little men and women that can be imagined, and at first sight every man in the party took them, for a new specie of ape or ourang-outang. We were first attracted to them by hearing a strange sound like the voices of children in the treetops. Some of our party, including myself, determined to make an investigation and see if the little creatures were men or monkeys. We had been told by the natives that the countries of Central Africa contained some creatures which might be taken for the missing link, and so we began to make inquiries. At first the creatures appeared to be shy and would stay in the tops of the trees, jumping from bough to bough like apes, sometimes on two legs and sometimes on all fours.

"I climbed up into one of the trees and got close enough to observe several of the fellows closely. I satisfied myself that they were not monkeys although some of them were hairy and seemed to act more like monkeys than humans. The head seemed to be invariably shaped like that of a man except that the forehead was receding and resembled a low bred negro. They were black and dark brown in color and the tallest did not appear to be more than three and a half feet from his toes to his head. They had a dialect which resembled in a certain way that of the Kaffir tribes or the lowest Bushmen. The natives call these the little Bushmen.

"I took particular pains to examine the shape of the leg and foot as well as the hand of the small creatures. I found that the leg was entirely similar to that of a human, and not like a monkey, while the nails and hands were distinctly those of human people. There was one thing that convinced me more than anything else that they might be men and women although none of them wore a vestige of clothing and that was that they were armed with a queer little short spear called assegai. This was used to kill small animals, such as birds and monkeys, which the Bushmen eat raw. Meat and raw fruits and nuts formed their chief food.

"We saw more than 400 of the little fellows, and at no time did they ever offer the slightest violence. They seemed to be in the greatest awe of the white men and stood as though petrified with fear when we surprised them, but if they were far enough away they would give a cry of alarm and dart away to the foliage for hiding.

The tails which they possessed were attached to their bodies at the end of the spine, and looked like the tail of a bulldog, only it was broader, and hairless.

"I have asked a number of scientific people about the pigmies, describing them as minutely as I knew how, but they could never decide as to whether the little creatures were men or beasts."

Mr. Goodshall says that he believes the little creatures still exist in Central Africa and that some day their true species will be discovered.

TO FIND INDIAN GOLD MINE.

Through the blundering of an Indian guide, James M. Shieff, of Milwaukee, Wis., a former Australian miner, secured knowledge of a very rich pocket of gold on Great Slave lake, Northwest territory. Being unsuccessful in Alaska, Shieff went throught the Northwest territory on a hunting expedition. One morning his Indian guide reached camp with his pocket full of nuggets, the value of which he had no conception. Shieff closely questioned him regarding the location of the find, and had the Indian draw a rough map of the exact spot. Leaving their supplies in a dugout, they started out on the Great Slave lake. Within half a mile of the shore their boat capsized in the squall. The Indian was drowned and Shieff made land alone. Having only a revolver and a knife left he was unable to continue the search, and started home. In Chicago he raised money to return to the rich gold field. He sailed for Nome with a good outfit, intending to reach Great Slave lake via Mackenzie river. He is certain he will recover the Indian's gold field.

MONT PELE PROJECTION.

The projection at the summit of Mont Pele—it is no longer spelt Pelee—which rose to a height of 600 feet above the old summit of the mountain, promises to be one of the most interesting features in the study of that volcanic vent, says the Engineering and Mining Journal.

According to Hellprin, Hovey, Lacroix and other observers, it was thrust up through the crater at the rate of as much as forty-one feet per day, until it stood up as a sharks' tooth or obelisk far above the old cone. Professor Lacroix, who headed a commission from the French government, decided—nearly a year ago—that it was an exceedingly viscous acid lava which had solidified on extrusion, and rose vertically, instead of flowing out of the crater in the normal manner of lava streams.

Now, however, Professor Angelo Heilprin states that this towering mass is none other than the ancient core of the volcano loosened from its place and pushed up bodily by the energy at the volcanic orifice. When access can be obtained to the crater so as to obtain fragments of the rock of which this huge projection is built up, it should be possible to decide by microscopic investigation whether the rock is a rapidly cooled viscous lava or a slowly cooled volcanic plug. The solution of the problem will throw much light on the physiology of volcanoes.

PUTTING ON STYLE IN ARIZONA.

Every symptom points to a tendency to spread on style in Tombstone, says the Prospector. Among other instances in this direction, the boys bought a pair of beautiful barber pole suspenders and presented them to the amiable dispenser who shoves the amber extract of cheerfulness over the mahogany of the parlor saloon. He promptly donned the innovation, but claimed that he felt like he had a fence rail on each shoulder. Then, when they became overburdensome, he would unbutton them and permit them to dangle in front, but he has finally got them down fine enough to go to church in. Several old-timers, conspicuously court attendants from the other end of the county, have fallen into the habit of wearing boiled shirts, and it looks as if skybiue overalls might be discarded as a full-dress costume. Getting "powerful tony" in town nowadays.

NEW OHIO BALLOON.

It Is Said to Overcome Defect In Other Air Ships.

Maxim, who probably has spent more time and money on flying machines than any other man, has found out that a plane weighted with not more than one pound two ounces per square foot will not fall down rapidly to the earth, but will be retarded in its descent to such a degree that its fall will not be destructive, says the Columbus Dispatch. He tried many models on this principle and established the above law. The herein described machine follows this law and therefore is safe. To guard further against the machine striking the earth with too great a shock a number of air cushions are arranged around the under part of the framework of the car. These will prevent the machine from being damaged. The circular planes are very narrow, yet by looking at the plan view it will be seen that they form practically one large plane and act like a great parachute forty feet in diameter.

But another and entirely original method of safety is here shown: A collapsible balloon. We have all seen hundreds of hot air balloons, probably sent up small ones on the Fourth of July ourselves, and gazed at larger ones at the curcus. These larger sized ones are usually made of common stout muslin, under which a furnace is lighted and by rarefying the air in the muslin envelope the balloon will ascend with its attached weights. This one is made of muslin, but there are huge valves placed at the upper end of it that can be opened by ropes from the car. And it will be further observed that other ropes radiate from the car to different portions of the balloon.

We are now ready to start. The furnace immediately above the car of housing and directly beneath the balloon is lighted and soon heats the air and inflates the balloon. As soon as this is accomplished the balloon will arise and with it the planes and car. So far we are perfectly safe, for the balloon fabric will hold up many times the small weight of the 1000 pounds of the machine, so we cannot drop as long as our burners are lighted. Even if they should go out, the balloon would not lose its buoyancy but would come down very slowly to the earth.

We have gone up now, say 500 feet into the air, a very small distance, compared with the 10,000 feet often attained by balloonists. Now comes the critical moment. We open the great valves by pulling on the ropes, and the heated air all rushes out and we have a thousand pounds left hanging in the air. Will it drop? Certainly. Fast? No. How can it? As has just been shown the planes will form a parachute and the descent will be slow and the striking on the earth cushioned by the devices already described. But suppose we think we are falling fast. Why simply turn up the burners and the balloon will be reinflated and the descent of the machine checked. Then where is the danger? There is none.

Every one of the flying machines or soaring machines on the aeroplane principle have had to launch themselves from a height, either from a high houseboat or from the top of a hill. This machine carries its hill with it. It has its houseboat contained in its mechanism. And a very different and cheap one at that. One that can be always relied upon and has invariably proved its worth.

Our balloon is now collapsed and we are ready to fly. Did you ever notice a soaring bird drop from the branch of a tree? Or even a sparrow? Watch it. It drops its head and allows itself to fall rapidly a very short distance, dependent upon how far its flight is going to be. It then suddenly rights itself and spreads its wings, gradually throwing back its weight as it gains momentum until the front of its wings or planes are elevated just a trifle, and it then moves forward at a rapid rate. Of course the sparrow can hardly be called a soaring bird, and its flight with outstretched or soaring wings is brief, but the principle is the same in the machine.

The height has been gained and now by moving a weight in the car forward, the planes will be tilted downward and the thousand pounds will rush downward and forward at a rapid rate. When twenty miles an hour has been attained the weight is gradually moved backward and consequently the center of gravity changed and the forward end of the ring-shaped planes will be tilted slightly upward and the machine will move forward. So far we have but followed nature and the best practice known to man. The screws are now set in motion, worked by an 80-horsepower gasoline engine of but five pounds per horse-power and the machine will continue in its flight till the engine power gives out. And as long as the aeroplanes are kept at the correct angle and as they must do (for if the weight does not change the planes cannot) and as the planes are stationary and all well braced together they must all move together as a unit. As long then as the engineers force the planes along the machine is perfectly safe. And if the propellers do give out, as already shown, we can check the fall by means of the inflated balloon or just by the planes alone acting as a parachute.

But we have finished our ride and are ready to alight. We will now stop our engines and tip up the planes to a greater angle, which will slow down the machine and to aid this slowing down we will reverse our propellers. When we have come directly over the spot that we intend to alight on, we will turn out our burners to the full and rarefy the air in our balloon, and then as we near the ???-etaoin shrdlu cmfwypffffff? vbgkqjz ground we will gradually turn down the heat until our machine gently rests on the earth—upon the very spot desired. Should the wind blow and the machine would be carried out of its course, we have but to drop more quickly to start our propellers and steer the machine with the balloon inflated to the landing place. And it is this very fact that the machine is capable of flying with a balloon which has been done hundreds of times by Santos-Dumont and others, that makes it absolutely a surety that the trials of the machine will be successful which the Columbus Air Navigation company will hold here. The machine is bound to go up and bound to go forward. Slowly forward if the balloon is kept up and fast then deflated and dependence is placed in the aeroplanes. The former is sure, the latter seems reasonable.

QUEER TRICK ON GIRL FLIRT.

"A Chillicothe, Mo., young woman flirted the other evening with a middle-aged traveling man who at once 'caught on' and took a walk with the frisky young woman," the Chillicothe Democrat relates. "As they rambled on he questioned her as to the location of her home and she showed him the house, but when he asked her to take him in she refused, saying that she did not want her mother to see her with a stranger. But the traveling man insisted on going in and before she could remonstrate he had seized her by the arm and hurried her up the steps to the front door. An elderly woman responded to the summons. The traveling man inquired if she was the mother of the girl at his side. Receiving an affirmative reply the stranger gently led the girl into the hall, and, turning to the mother, said: 'Madam, your daughter flirted with me on the street this evening and I have brought her home to you. She doesn't look like a bad girl and she is altogether too young and pretty to be on the streets alone at night. I have a daughter of my own about her age and I would thank any man for doing what I have done tonight, and so would her mother. Take good care of your daughter and don't let her walk the streets at night, and teach her the evils of flirting.'"

AMERICAN TRAINS SLOW.

Apart from track and traffic considerations, the principal thing which is interfering with the increase in speed of passenger trains in the United States is the excessive weight of both locomotives and cars and the marked tendency to make them heavier, says the Railway Age. Recent American passenger locomotives with four drivers weigh 95 tons and the loaded tender 75 tons, making a total of 170 tons. The total resistance of the engine and tender alone on level at 60 miles an hour is equal to a drawbar pull of 3100 pounds, requiring an expenditure of 500 horse power to overcome it, and at this speed there remains at the drawbar a tractive power of only 7500 pounds for useful work in hauling the train. At 70 miles an hour the calculated power at the drawbar is 6000 pounds. The heaviest passenger work is at high speed on British or French roads is represented by a dynamometer drawbar pull of 5000 pounds at 70 miles an hour, but this work is performed by an engine weighing 73 tons and total weight with tender of 115 tons, or 32 per cent less than the weight of the American engine as above stated. The American train is made up of cars 70 feet long, weighing 50 to 60 tons, an average express train weighing 450 tons. The English coaches with four-wheel trucks weigh only 30 tons, and the heaviest dining and sleeping cars weigh 45 tons. When we attempt to run passenger trains at anything like the fast schedules in use in England and France it will be necessary to reduce the weight of our trains and to use more efficient and perhaps lighter locomotives and cars.

STRIKE AMONG GERMAN DOCTORS.

An interesting movement is now gaining ground in the social and political life of German physicians, as manifested in the outcome of the "strike" of doctors in Leipsic, says the Medical Record.

In accordance with the imperial statutes, every government employe with an annual income of less than 2000 marks must join an association whose membership consists of persons following a certain occupation, or those who live in a particular district, etc. These select their own officers and attending physicians, who are nominally responsible to the government. As a large part of the population belongs to these associations, the German physicians, 30,000 in number, have necessarily been compelled to assume the treatment of many such cases. The insufficient remuneration—in many instances only 15 pfennige per call (3¾ cents)—has animated most physicians to decline the appointments. Wherever an attempt was made, however, to better these conditions, the associations appointed certain physicians who served also as lodge officers.

The conditions grew gradually worse, and conferences between physicians and lodges failed utterly. The medical men finally formed a union for the preservation of their professional interests, the so-called "Leipziger Verband," under the leadership of the indomitable Dr. Hartmann. This association, by continuous agitation, has succeeded in having adopted at the last annual meeting of the "Union of German Medical Societies" a resolution whereby the members of these lodges are permitted to choose their physicians individually. This affords the patient the opportunity to consult whomever he desires, and also prevents the lodge officials displacing older and experienced men by others without cause.

It still remained to put this principle into practice; and as the lodges would not entertain friendly overtures, recourse was had to a "strike." The physicians' union organized branches in every German city, which dealt with the individual lodges and endeavored to dissuade other doctors from settling in this particular locality to take the place of their striking colleagues. In consequence of this agitation a more satisfactory basis of remuneration has been established and the choice of the physician is left to the patient. This much has been accomplished in Cologne and Munich, and the fight is being carried on in sixty-seven other cities.

CONGRESS OF FATHERS.

"Speaking of congresses, I read a suggestion the other day in a St. Louis paper, anent the recent congress of mothers, that struck me as being a good thing," said the man with the thin face, to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and I want to go on record as vigorously favoring the plan suggested. It was to call a convention of the fathers of the country. What's the matter with calling a fathers' congress? Mothers had much to talk about. Now, I have a few lines of conversation I would like to indulge in, if I only had the chance, and I dare say there are many other men in the country who feel and think just as I do about this matter. There is much we could say to each other at the convention of the fathers which I think would be helpful. Why not call the convention? I have a paper I would like to read on 'Padlocks and the Uses to Which They Can Be Put in Protecting the Pockets of Pantaloons,' not to mention another use which may suggest itself to the married man. Of course all these things would have to be taken up in executive session, and all manuscripts put under lock and key, and otherwise safeguarded. But these are mere details. We would have no trouble adopting proper regulations for the safety and well-being of the members of the convention. I am probably speaking too freely in advance, but my purpose is to emphasize the need of a convention of fathers. I could entertain them a whole day myself on the eccentricities of—but never mind. Wait. We may have the convention, and we can then talk out—in executive session."

CAPTIVE BULLFROG CRIED.

A medal for tender-heartedness must surely go to Irving Apgar, of German Valley, says the New York World. He liberated a large "jug-errum" because the frog was shedding tears at the thought that he was soon to be made part of his supper.

Mr. Apgar was walking along the north branch of the Raritan river, which flows through his place, when he suddenly spied an enormous bullfrog. After considerable maneuvering he managed to capture the frog alive. He says it measured 13 inches from tip to tip, and weighed a little over four pounds. He thought the legs would make a nice meal, so he took the frog home and put it under a box on the back porch.

A little while afterward he heard a noise like the crying of an infant or the faint sobbing of a young child, and he could not imagine where the sound came from, as no children lived at his house. But, as the wailing sound continued, he decided to investigate and soon found that the dismal cry came from the box under which he had placed the frog. Lifting the box, Mr. Apgar says, he was greatly surprised at seeing the frog actually crying. The tears were rolling out of his eyes and dropping on the boards, while the frog wiped his pathetic countenance with his forepaws. The sight so affected Mr. Apgar that he took him out and carried him back to the river, where, he avers, the frog at once gave voice to deep thanks for his liberation.

HOW SEVENTY-SIX GOT ITS NAME.

Back in Boon county, in a section which is rapidly forming through the development of its oil wells, is a village called Seventy-six, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. In the midst of the village is a waterfall, which greeted the eye of the first frontiersman who went to that part of the state when it was still a part of Virginia. He measured the depth of the fall and found it to be 76 feet. The accuracy of the measurement has never been called into question, and the inhabitants of the town to this day have their mails addressed to "Seventy-six, Ky." The fall is of little volume during the summer months, but is of great beauty at all times. In the winter it is a roaring cataract, and Indian creek frequently goes upon a rampage. The section was a favorite hunting ground of the Indians in the early days, and the creek derived its name from the number of spearheads and spikes which are found in the fields around.

CHANGE IN WALL STREET.

Operations Now Not On Basis of Years Ago.

Every time a share of stock is handled on the Stock exchange there is of necessity a buyer and a seller, says the Brooklyn Eagle. One broker acting for John Smith sells 100 shares of stock to another broker acting for James Jones. Both brokers collect commissions from their customers, and when the transaction is concluded the dear old "investing public" is out two commissions paid to member of the New York Stock exchange, also interest paid for many which never came into the possession of either Smith or Jones.

Assuming that the brokers confine themselves strictly to the execution of orders—and a conservative broker does not risk his own funds on the fluctuations of the market—no more than does the owner of a gambling house play against his own game—then "the public" is the sole factor in the determination of values. Of course it cannot win, for the good and sufficient reason that for every individual gainer in a stock transaction there is a loser, and for the additional reason that the broker deducts a commission from both. When a public gets rich from Wall street speculation it will not be difficult for a man to lift himself over a fence by tugging at his bootstraps, and the extraction of sunbeams from cucumbers will be one of the standard lines of manufacture.

The total sales of stocks on the New York exchange for the year ending in 1904 were 158,520,000 shares. At the regular rate charged by brokers for the execution of these orders the commissions paid by the public constituted the impressive total of $7,926,000. The sale of bonds should have netted $3,400,000 more. At a conservative estimate the interest charges amounted to an additional $6,600,000. Assuming, therefore, that the public was the only participant in the game, they paid into the "kitty" the tidy sum of $17,300,000. It would be a fortunate public and an impoverished Wall street were the commissions and charges no greater than this. We have taken no account of the transactions in wheat, corn, oats, cotton, coffee and other commodities, on the fluctuations of which one may risk his money. The total cannot fall below $25,000,000. Bear in mind this represents only the money paid by the public in commissions, and assumes that the speculative Smiths and Joneses were permitted to fight out their battles without interference from any other interest.

All that Smith asks is "a fair run for his money." He is firmly and unalterably of the opinion that he knows more of market values and is better qualified to judge of the effect of new conditions than does Jones. He would like to bet with Jones direct, but does not know how or where to get into communication with him. He is so sure of the accuracy of his judgment that he esteems it a mere trifle to pay Brown, the broker, a nominal amount for acting as intermediary and stakeholder. Jones holds identically the same opinion of Smith, and Brown has his own opinion of both of them.

In former years, when the buildings in the Wall street district did not reach above the sixth floor and when a man with $10,000,000 was considered a financial magnate Smith and Jones had the game pretty much to themselves. Practically all that they lost was their commissions. Once in a while an outsider attempted to control or corner the market, but the vast army of Smiths and Joneses were too much for the interloper who imagined that he could set aside the law of supply and demand. The financial writers who composed solemn editorials on such topics were fond of assuring Smith and Jones that the "market was greater than any one man or conspiracy of men." And so it seemed. Hutchinson attempted to corner wheat in Chicago, and the Smiths and Joneses crushed him. They did the same thing to a young man named Leiter, and the operation cost the fond father of that gentleman an uncomfortably large number of millions.

This was vastly reassuring to Smith and Jones. It proved to them that the game was a fair one, and that when a man loses he could charge his vanished money against a faulty judgment. If a corporation increased its earnings it was reasonably sure that its stock would rise. If its revenue fell off it was equally certain that the price of its securities would fall. Good news meant an advancing market and bad news a declining one. Dividends had much to do with market quotations. All of these conditions prevailed in the good old primitive days when Smith and Jones watched the figures as they were chalked up on the board. It was a hard game to beat, but it had the merit of being "square," and that was all that Smith and Jones asked. The rules of competition and the law of supply and demand had not been repealed.

The science of watering stocks was in its infancy. The idea that a trust could control an industry was laughed at. The number of stocks dealt in were few, and with rare exceptions they were safe investments. For a stock to fluctuate ten points in a year was an uncommon event. The financial and speculative world gasped when a New York operator demonstrated that it was possible to make a fortune by wrecking a railroad. Those old-time Wall street men weer a simple and confiding lot.

LITTLE GIRL'S PLEA WON PARDON.

The pathetic plea of a little 6-year-old girl, begging Governor Terrel of Georgia to pardon her father, has had its weight, and a few days ago a full pardon was granted to J. J. Reed, of Chatham county, who was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in July, 1900, and was sentenced to serve a term of fifteen years in the state penitentiary.

Reed shot and killed a negro, named James Stewart, says the Atlanta Constitution. The negro is said to have been drunk at the time, and by his language and what amounted to an assault, provoked Reed to the point where he could not restrain himself, and Reed shot him. He was convicted four years ago, and has since been serving his sentence at the convict camp at Fargo, Ga.

There were many recommendations before the commission in Reed's behalf. One of the strongest appeals, undoubtedly the strongest, came from Reed's little 6-year-old girl, whose letter to the governor touched the heart of that official. The result was the prison commission, convinced that Reed had been sufficiently punished for his act, which was partly in self-defense, recommended a full pardon, and this action was promptly approved by the governor, the joyful news being wired at once to his family in Savannah.

This is the letter from little Katie Reed, which did much toward winning over the prison commission and the governor in her father's behalf:

"Dear Mr. Governore: My mama ses you are the greatest man in Georgia but i think my papa is the greatest man in the hole world because i luv him better than all the res. My mama ses you can giv him back to me if you want to. Pleas do it and i will luv you better than any one but my papa.

I am a little girl just 6 an i pray every nite for my papa to cum home an i will pray for you every nite as long as i live if you will sen my dear papa back to me an my little bruther. Your little fren,

"KATIE REED."

PRINCE BISMARCK'S APPETITE.

"English people drink less nowadays than formerly, and for that reason their policy has become worse." This is not the opinion of a prejudiced brewer, but of Bismarck, as quoted in the journal of Herr Eugen Wolf, published in the Velhagen and Klasing's Review. Bismarck himself was certainly not a happy argument for the teetotalers, says the Pall Mall Gazette. His taste in wine, according to these memoirs, appears to have been delicate, and he once refused to drink German champagne, although it was offered to him at the emperor's own table. Bismarck is, indeed, rather a hard nut for the dietetic reformer, if the story be in any degree true, which states his favorite food for supper to have been hot lobster, with plenty of wine. The only answer that earnest reformers can make is, we suppose, that their rules are intended for the use of ordinary, not of exceptional, men, It is only the giants who can drink at one sitting, as old Bismarck a bottle of wine intended for drinking as a liqueur.

BOUGHT HERSELF A COFFIN.

A short, stout and healthy-looking woman who said she was Miss Martha Olingsdorf, of 4121 Germania avenue, Jersey City, entered Undertaker John Campbell's office in Central avenue, that city, yesterday, and asked the price of coffins, says the New York Sun.

"For some member of your family?" asked the undertaker, putting on his most solemn look.

"No, for myself," answered the woman, smiling.

"What style?" inquired Mr. Campbell.

"Something plain and not too expensive," replied Miss Olingsdorf. "I think I would like a nice black casket. And I want one carriage to follow the hearse. The carriage is for four professional pall bearers. I don't want any flowers, and I want you to keep my body just one day. Then, bury it. I haven't any family or relatives to mourn me when I am gone, and I'm glad to see there won't be any kind of a fuss."

The shopper said she believed, in doing things on a cash basis, and paid the undertaker in advance after carefully adding up his list of items. She left as soon as she got her receipt.

Mr. Campbell said last night that Miss Olingsdorf seemed to be happy and well for a woman 69 years old.

THOU SHALT NOT PASS.

Many of the railroads in the south are very prone to giving passes indiscriminately, so that on some of the smaller roads about all the prominent people who live along the line are carried free, says the Boston Transcript. Storekeepers, sawmill proprietors, politicians; in fact, almost everybody who can afford to pay his fare goes scot free, while the negroes and poor country folk pay the large fares exacted—the larger, of course, for the road's loss on the dead-heads. One Georgia railroad, however has set its face against the evil, and has resorted to scripture to make plain its position. It has posted in the two or three passenger cars that comprise its equipment the following notice:

This means you!

Thou shalt not pass. Number, xx., 18.

None shall ever pass. Isa. xxxiv., 10.

Suffer not a man to pass. Judges iii., 29.

The wicked shall no more pass. Nahum 1., 15.

This generation shall not pass. Mark xiii., 30.

Though they roar, they cannot pass. Jer. v., 22.

So he paid the fare and went. Jonah i., 3.

PREACHING BY MAIL.

Food for the body is being furnished in tablets, time is saved by the space annihilating telephone and telegraph, and now spiritual comfort is to be dispensed through the mails by a minister who may never meet the members of his flock, says the Detroit Tribune.

The Church of All Souls, with main headquarteres at Orange, N. J., and all the world for its parish, is the idea of a Unitarian clergyman, who proposes to put heart and soul into a work which he believes to be needful and feasible. It is to be a "postage mission"—an endeavor to reach and organize those who might otherwise remain permanently outside of any Christian body.

The idea is to mail a printed sermon to every member of the congregation each Monday morning. Every fortnight a pastoral letter is to go to the members of the flock wherever they may reside—whether it be under the balmy skies of California, in frozen Alaska, or the wilds of Texas, or even Kalamazoo, Mich.

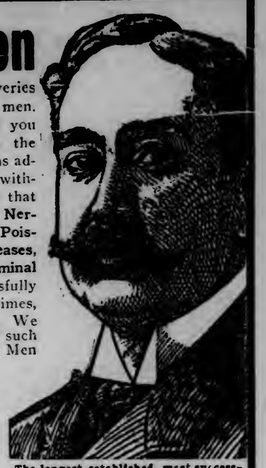

The man behind the idea is Rev. Walter Reid Hunt, pastor of the First Unitarian church, of Orange, N. J. Rev. Mr. Hunt has youth, energy, culture and a determination to succeed.

"The chief idea," said Rev. Hunt, "is to reach those who live in the remote and sparsely settled country districts, and who could not, even if they desired, attend regular places of worship. The plan involves the sending out of a great deal of literature of a cheerful and uplifting nature. The sermons and pastorals come first, and after that we hope to compile a regular mode of worship by which our members in their homes can attend religious services with the same system that would be followed in a church. Our contemplated printed program of worship will include regular prayers and hymns, so that a man in Manitoba and the man in New Jersey can follow the same form at the same time—although separated in body by many thousands of miles."

THOUGHT PLYMOUTH ROCK WORE FEATHERS.

The little boys and girls in the classes this university school in Mexico City do a great many things which make the teachers laugh, says the Mexican Herald. A few days ago a teacher had before her the history class, and the lesson was the landing of the pilgrims at Plymouth. After the lesson had been finished the teacher gave instructions that each scholar should draw from imagination a picture of a Plymouth rock. All the pupils got their slates in order and began work in

RUSH TO BE LIGHTER

Wheat Fields Not Expected to Draw Heavily For Harvest.

Wages Less This Year Which Makes Work Less Attractive.

Duluth employment agents offer little hope of an immediate improvement in the labor situation.

In spite of the fact crops in the Dakotas are expected to be very good this year, it is believed that the annual rush to the harvest fields of woodsmen and others from this section of the country who desire snummer employment, will be very much cut down this year.

As yet there are no men starting from the Western states in any number, and, according to reports men are very plentiful in the Dakotas and wages are correspondingly low. It is said that the farmers are able to hire help this year at from $8 to $10 less per month than they were last year. A like decrease is expected in the wages of the men who work by the day during the rush of the harvest season.

In a week or two the haying season will be on in Dakota and as yet it has stirred up no interest at all among the laboring men who usually turn their faces westward at this time of the year. Local men say that the number of men who go out of here will be smaller than it has been for years.

The lack of demand for men in the West is so marked as to have raised a doubt in the minds of the employment men as to whether or not the railroads, which usually make special inducements to men who desire to take in the Dakota season, will this year furnish the cheap rates which have usually been available.

STRIKE ABANDONED.

¶ Digestion isn't a mere chemical process alone.

¶ "FORCE" is already half digested and well milled. It gives these over-tried twentieth-century stomachs of ours a fair show.

EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

St. Louis, June 28.—The forty-third annual convention of the National Educational association formally convened today at the World's Fair grounds, when the first of the general sessions was called to order in Festival hall. Later in the day the sessions of the various educational departments were convened in various halls throughout the grounds, the whole constituting the general convention of the association, which will adjourn sine die on Friday.

Kindergarten and eelmentary education, secondary education, higher education, normal schools, manual training, music education, art education, business education, child study, science instruction, physical education, school administration, library, special education, Indian education the national society for the scientific study of education and the educational press association. The general sessions will convene at 9:30 each morning and the departmental sessions will convene at 2:30 each afternoon. It is estimated that close to 30,000 persons have come to St. Louis for the express purpose of attending the national convention.

It is expected that the record held by Boston for the largest attendance when the convention met there last year, will be eclipsed before the middle of the week when several thousand more educators will arrive.

Festival hall has a seating capacity of about 2500 but had the hall been five times as large it would not have accommodated the crowd. Educators from every portion of the United States and many from abroad constituted the vast throng that endeavored to find accommodation in the hall.

HEAD ALMOST CUT FROM BODY

An Old Cobbler of Des Moines Is Brutally Murdered.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 28.—Thomas Callahan, a jolly cobbler of 65 years, was found in his meager shop yesterday brutnllac o tymLO.S mfwyp vbgkqjxzfiiff which he earned his daily bread. He was lying upon his bed with his head nearly severed. The murderer had thrust the weapon of death into the dead man's hands to give the appearance of suicide. This theory was first taken by the police, but a subsequent investigation pointed to undoubted murder. Fortuna Pignerl, an Italian living in the adjoining house, is held for the crime. Callahan had been dead several days, Pignerl claiming not to know it, and telling conflicting stories. Frank Ford, a negro, is held as a witness.

Physicians say the wound could not have been self-inflicted and that other wounds on the body were made after death. It was thought the murder was for the fortune it was believed the cobbler had hoarded and hidden in his shop.

DIFFERENT LAWS

This County Operates Under Special Act Passed In 1881.

According to the St. Louis county commissioners the system in use in caring for the improvement of county roads in St. Louis county will not be influenced by the recent decision of County Attorney Kane of Ramsey county, which takes away the supervision of the road building from the county commissioners and turns it over to the organizations of the various townships throughout the county.

The Duluth commissioners say that St. Louis county road improvement is carried on under the authority of a special act of the legislature, passed in 1881, which gives them the sole control over the building of the county's roads.

There was in 1881, and still is, a large amount of unorganized territory within the boundaries of the county, and if the road impurovement were left to the township authorities it would never be done in those sections. Owing to this condition and the necessity of roads in various parts of the county where there were no settlers, the act was secured, giving the charge of the road improvement to the county commissioners.

In Ramsey county all the townships are organized and thickly settled, so it operates under the general law of the state, which County Attorney Kane has interpreted to mean that the township governments shall have control of the road building instead of the county commissioners, as has hitherto been the case in Ramsey county.

nI spite of the fact that they held undisputed authority over the county's road building, the local commissioners are disposed to be generous of their authority, and they say that in regularly organized townships they endeavor to turn the work over to the town authorities as much as possible.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was poor, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. MAN DIES BECAUSE HE COULD NOT FIDDLE.

New York, June 28.—Michael T. Roach, a gifted violin player who has traveled in many countries, is dead, at his home in Hampstead, Long Island.

Roach suffered from heart trouble, brought on by excessive playing on his beloved instrument, a Stradivarius. He had for years played frequently more than twelve hours a day. When he fell ill several months ago the doctors warned him that excessive devotion to music had weakened his heart, and that he would have to use the bow more moderately. He observed their injunctions for a time, but found it hard to master his passion for music, so that, two weeks ago he was forbidden to touch the fiddle again. He declined rapidly from that time to his death.

New Suits Filed.

John B. McLaughlin yesterday filed a personal injury suit against the Great Northern Railway company, for $1810, for personal injuries said to have been sustained while trying to board a train at Mountain Iron. The Sattler Liquor Co., yesterday began suit in the district court to recover $734.95 said to be the value of goods sold to Frank Heikkoa by the Sattler Liquor company and the Duluth Brewing company, whose claim the Sattler company has secured.

ATTEMPTED SMUGGLING OF ORIENTAL GOODS.

New York, June 28.—Treasures of the Orient, contained in forty-seven cases, have been found secreted on the British steamship Indrawadi by treasury agents. The seizure is valued at more than $10,000, and is the largest of the kind ever made in this port. Besides bolts of silk, there were many cases containing Chinese antiques and curios which were taken from the palaces and temples at the time of the occupation of Chinese territory by foreign troops. The officers of the ship expressed surprise that such things could have come aboard without their knowledge, and they expressed their willingness to aid in the capture of the guilty persons. Nobody on the ship would claim a single thing, so no arrests were made. The goods will be held for a time and then will be sold at public auction.

FISHING TO BE GOOD

North Shore Men Expect Unusually Prosperous Year.

Fishermen Deal More With Chance Than Does Farmer.

From present indications those men who make fishing their business in the western end of Lake Superior will this year enjoy one of the most prosperous seasons in the history of the market fishing on the lakes. Ever since the opening of the season fishing has been uniformly good near the camps along the north shore and in the vicinity of Isle Royale, as well as at most of the other regulation grounds along the lakes.

This success may not continue through the year, however, for it not infrequently happens that fishing will be the very best during one portion of the season and at another time will be so poor as to bring only discouragement to the heart of the fishermen. Men who engage in fishing for a living the year round find that they deal with a greater element of chance than do the farmers in regions of uncertain climatic conditions. The success of the farmer depends largely upon the rains. The fisherman cares little for weather conditions, provided there are not too many storms, but he finds his legitimate prey as moody and uncertain as Duluth's spring weather. He will have a period of remarkable success and just when he is busiest building air castles as to what disposition he will make of the season's big profits he will perhaps pull in his nets to find them nearly empty, and then there may follow a season of quiet, with plenty of hard work for small wages.

On the whole the Lake Superior fishermen of today are much more prosperous and contented than were followers of the craft a decade ago. As modern methods and late inventions have improved conditions on the farm, making work easier and more agreeable, so have they added much to the comforts and conveniences of the men who get their crops from the water.

Nothing will give a better idea of this fact than a comparison of the boats now used by the regular fishermen and those which were in use a few years ago. It will be found that at this end of the lake the majority of those engaging in the work on a large scale have modern gasoline launches to assist them. This is also an indication of the greater prosperity of the present day fisherman, for gasoline launches cost money. The up-to-date fishermen figure, however, that the boats add enough to the season's profits to pay for themselves in a comparatively short time.

RUMORS OF FINDING LOOMIS' BODY FALSE.

Cherbourg, June 28.—The report circulated by a London news agency yesterday that the body of Kent J. Loomis had been washed ashore near here, is false. The investigations made do not disclose any warrant for the circulation of the rumors as no body has been found near Cherbourg recently.

The American consular agent, H. J. E. Hainneville, after an inquiry into the matter also pronounces the report false.

CAUGHT BY HIS LAUGH.

Fugitive Swedish Bailiff Arrested at New York.

New York, June 28.—United States Deputy Marshal Bernhard made two important arrests yesterday aboard the Moltke, from Hamburg. The prisoners are Jonas Peter Holm, a bailiff, of Soderhamn, Sweden, and Ole Olsen, known as Ole Kristian Olsen Moshagen, a station agent at Hev, Norway, who was bound for Chicago. Both men are charged with embezzlement.

Holm, who is accused of appropriating about $2000, was found in the second cabin. The marshal had been informed that Holm would travel with a long knapsack, and that he had teeth missing from the lower jaw.

The marshal, from among 300 foreign passengers, found a man with a knapsack and a toothless lower jaw.

"I am glad to see you, Jonas Peter Holmn," exclaimed Marshal Bernhard.

"But I'm not Holm," protested the arival, and he affected a great laugh at the "funny mistake," as he called it. The laugh was his undoing, for it showed his toothless jaw, and he had to admit his identity.

COFFEE CATARRH

An Unsuspected Cause.

It is curious how any diseases come from a disordered nervous system which locates disease in some part of the body and the primary cause can often be traced to coffee which first breaks down the nervous system. A Georgian says:

"There is no doubt coffee gave me nasal catarrh. The ceptim in my nose was all gone and the catarrh was eating its way, getting hold of the main bone of the nose. It also affected my sight very much.

"My nose was constantly dripping bloody water but in two weeks time after I quit coffee and used Postum Food Coffee in its place, I could see my way very well, the dripping from my nose stopped and my nose finally got perfectly well and healthy as far as is possible for the ceptim to grow back.

"There is no doubt it was a case of coffee catarrh and the cure was made entirely by changing from coffee to Postum. The rest of my family took up the new drink and Postum relieved my wife and little boy of frequent headaches and what is called 'coffee headache' is not known in our family any more. Our sleep is so much more refreshing.

"We have influenced many people to try Postum and all of them like it better the longer they use it and most of them say it is better than coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ten days' trial Postum in place of coffee often works wonders. There's a reason.

GARBAGE PLANT

Council Directs Investigation of Establishment of One.

Mayor Recommends Increase In License Fee For Circuses.

The council last evening.

Received recommendation from mayor for increase in circus license fee.

Called for ordinance making conviction of employment agents ground for revocation of licenses.

Granted 122 licenses to sell fireworks.

The first steps toward the construction of a municipal garbage plant were taken at the meeting of the council last evening, when Alderman Moore introduced a resolution authorizing the mayor to appoint a commission of three or five persons to investigate the feasibility of the municipal collection and disposition of garbage and ashes in Duluth and to formulate some plan for the same.

"In other cities you do not find such large unsightly heaps of ashes lying on the streets as I have seen during the past few days on some of the streets in the business portion of the city," said Aldeman Moore in speaking to the resolution. "In some cities the ashes and garbage are not disposed of, but are made a source of profit to the city. It is time we had some such system in Duluth."

The agitation for a municipal garbage plant has been in progress for many months past, and Alderman Moore's motion will probably result in some definite action being taken in the near future.

In a communication to the council, Mayor Cullum advocated that the provisions of the charter be amended so that the blame for such accidents as the falling of the wall on West Superior street might in the future be more definitely fixed.

"I find that the provisions of the present charter conflict somewhat," said the mayor in his letter. "It is very easy under the present charter for the board of public works and the building inspector to shift the blame from one to another. I do not mean to blame the city officials entirely for the accident. The owners of the building should have given notice. The accident might easily have been a disastrous one.

"I have, pending your action, taken the responsibility of instructing the building inspector to stand no longer on little matters, but to use common sense and protect the public."

The sections of the charater under which the duties of the board and the building inspector conflict are sections 131 and 151.

The former section provides that the board shall have the power to remove, or cause to be removed, all buildings that may be liable to fall, so as to endanger life or property, and that whenever, in the opinion of the board, such building should be torn down to insure public safety, the board shall request the building inspector and city engineer to examine the building and report in writing.

Section 151 provides that the building inspector shall perform all the duties prescribed by the common council relating to his office, and shall cause to be enforced all the state laws and city ordinances relating to the construction and inspection of buildings.

* * *

There is no danger of a shortage in the supply of fireworks on July 4. Under the city ordinance governing the use of fireworks, none shall be sold in the city without a license issued by the city clerk, for which the applicant shall pay the sum of 25 cents. One hundred and twenty-two dealers made application to the council last evening for licenses, and were granted them.

* * *

Mayor Cullum, in a communication to the council, stated that in his opinion the sum of $250 was too small a license fee to be charged circuses for a city the size of Duluth.

"The wear and tear on the roads and sidewalks alone amounts to a considerable sum," said the mayor in his letter, "and the health department is put to heavy extra expense, for which it should be reimbursed. I would suggest that the license fee be raised."

The matter was referred to the proper committee, and will come up at the next meeting of the council. Two circuses are due in Duluth in the near future, but the council will probably be unable to take any action before the arrival of the first one, on July 4.

* * *

There was a difference of but 20 cents in the bids of P. McDonnell and George R. King for the $13,000 contract for the improvement of Seventeenth avenues east. The King bid was the lower, amounting to $12,914.50, while the McDonnell bid was $12,914.70. The contract had been let to George R. King by the board of public works, and the award was confirmed by the council last evening.

* * *

Alderman Barnes stated that he had noticed complaints in the newspapers in regard to the flushing of Superior street during the evening, and requested the board of public works to report whether or not the work could not be done during the night or early in the morning.

* * *

Alderman Sang requested the city attorney for information in regard to the present status of the fight between the city and the Duluth Telephone company. Mr. Fesler stated that the recent decision of Judge Windom dismissed the action against the company on the ground that the ordinance was illegal, and that a new ordinance was now being drawn up and would be submitted to the council at the next meeting, and if it were passed the case against the company would be tried upon its merits.

* * *

The city employes will be enabled to celebrate Independence day in a fitting manner. The council, last evening, decided to hold a special session Thursday night and pass the payrolls in order that all the men in the pay of the city may have their money on Saturday, in time for the holiday.

* * *

The conviction of three employment agents for charging more than the legal fees, was reported by the committee on police and license. The committee reported that the present regulations do not permit the council to revoke the license of an employment agent for a conviction on this charge and the city attorney was asked to draft a new ordinance which would enable the council to use such a conviction in the municipal court as a ground for revoking the license. Such action is possible in the case of a saloonkeeper convicted of selling liquor to minors.

* * *

Three minor improvements were ordered last evening. On a motion by Alderman Waugh the board of public works was ordered to fill in the holes on Third street, between Sixth avenue west and Eleventh avenue east with crushed rock to make the road passable. A strip of crushed rock sixteen feet in width was also ordered to be placed on Twentieth avenue west from the railroad to Superior street, and Twentieth avenue east from Superior street to Colorado avenue, was ordered to be graded.

The ordinance allowing the Zenith City Telephone company to transfer its franchise and assets to the Zenith Telephone company passed its second reading and was placed upon its final passage.

The use of the council chamber was granted to the Republican county convention.

REPORT OF LOGGING

On the Chippewa Indian Reservation and Ceded Lands.

Morris Law Was a Good Measure For the Indian.

Cass Lake, Minn., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Senator William O'Neil, superintendent of logging on the Chippewa Indian reservation and ceded lands under the terms of the Morris law, has just completed his report of all the timber cut on the lands under his jurisdiction for the season of 1903-4, and the report makes good reading and brings out more fully the fact that the Morris law, while admittedly defective in a few of its minor provisions, was on the whole the wisest measure ever passed for the benefit of the Indians. One of the facts that stands out in bold relief, and proves the truth of the contentions of the supporters of the measure, is the exceedingly low figure at which the tops and debris left from the cuttings have been burned. A conservative estimate places the cost of the burning, at the maximum figure, at no more than $1.50 per thousand for the timber cut on any one tract. This disproves the statements so often reiterated prior to the sales of the timber last December—that the burning of the slashings would cost, at the least, $4 per thousand. The report shows that the cut of timber by the various companies was as follows:

Total cut, 46,590,448 feet of both Norway and white pine, valued at $269,-198.04.

Wild Rice Lumber Co., (on the White Earth reservation)—Norway pine, 2,104,-312 feet; white pine, 1,074,776 feet.

Of the timebr cut during the season, the J. Neils company is at present sawing their lot, at their mill in Cass Lake. The Northland company will drive their logs down the Mississippi river, to be sawed at the various down-river mills of the Weyerhaeuser syndicate. The Pine Tree company will drive theirs, for the most part to their mill at Little Falls. The Standard will drive theirs down the Mississippi to their mills at Dubuque. The Thief River Falls company will land their logs at Thief River Falls. Wild Rice company to Ada, and Sver J. Lee to Bagley.

The work of Supt. O'Neil and the various scalers, clerks, etc., in his employ has been done in a highly efficient manner. Outside of a few minor kicks which some of the clerks at Washington must lodge against any official in order to hold their cheap jobs, there has been no fault-finding; on the contrary, there is commendation on every hand.

The various scalers have been furloughed until fall, and as far as is known at the present itme, there will be no more actual cutting until early in the fall, although the various companies who have purchased the pine have their representatives out in the woods looking over the grounds for the preliminary operations.

The crime was the outcome of a family quarrel in which Peck had attempted to act as a peacemaker and was ejected from Stewart's rooms for so doing.

Thieves worked a successful scheme for the robbery of a gambling house at Houston, Texas. About 8 o'clock a piece of dynamite was exploded under a poker table and the crowd of 100 immediately made a rush for the exit. During the excitement some one grabbed the bank roll at the faro table, getting between $1200 and $1500 out of the drawer.

Frank L. Catch, champion catch-as-catch-can wrester of the United States, Monday night, defeated James Parr, the British wrestler, in two straight falls. Catch had the advantage in height and strength and the great skill of Parr was of little avail.

Santos Dumont, who will probably be the first contestant for the $100,000 prize offered by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition company for the winner in the airship contest, is a busy man. He is hard at work assembling the parts of his machine, which have been unpacked from the boxes which contained them.

LOTTERY SCHEME

Disclosed In Raid on "Manhattan Exchange Bank."

Chicago, June 28.—An alleged lottery scheme, which is said to have netted its operators hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, was disclosed when the "Manhattan Exchange bank," located at 150 La Salle street, was raided and Joseph H. Dalton, a prominent local politician, and L. A. Goverdin were placed under arrest by United States marshals. The information was made on warrants sworn out in the United States district court by the postoffice authorities, charging that lottery tickets were being sent out by the "Manhattan Exchange bank" in violation of the anti-lottery law. When the prisoners were arraigned before United States Commissioner Foote, the hearing of their cases was set for July 7. Both furnished $5000 bonds. Dalton is well known in the federal courts for his connection with lottery concerns in the last five years, having paid fines aggregating several thousand dollars. Large quantities of advertising matter found in the "bank" was seized and will be used as evidence against Dalton and Goverdin.

VENUS DONNED

An Old Hat and Rouged Her Cheeks.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 28.—Judge Andrew Selleck of Stratford is a lover of art. When he arose Sunday morning, looked from his window and saw the statue of Venus de Milo in his front yard attired in an old linen skirt, her classic bust hidden by a black silk waist, worn threadbare in spots and on her head a shabby straw hat, he was angry.

On closer examination he discovered that someone had painted the cheeks of Venus a bright carmine, and at the feet of the statue there was a sign bearing the inscription: "Ain't it a shame."

For a long time several elderly married women of Stratford have expressed their horror of Judge Selleck's nude statues, which stand about his front yard like sentinels. The judge thinks that they set some smart young man up to the prank. The judge ordered the hired man to remove the skirt from Venus, and it was done.

DROWNED LIKE RATS.

Thirty-Three Men Die In Huge Conduit.

Kingston, Jamaica, June 28.—Thirty-three persons were killed by an accident which took place near Spanish Town, (10 miles west of Kingston), yesterday morning in the main conduit of the West Indian Electric company, which operates the street cars from Kingston, the shareholders of which are principally Canadians. Nearly 100 laborers had been detailed to remove sand from the enormous pipe which is nearly a mile long and conveys water from the intake on the Rio Cobra to the turbines of the power house. The work had practically been completed when orders were given to allow a small quantity of water to enter the conduit. Through misapprehension, accident or carelessness, the full force of water was turned on and a mad struggle to escape by means of the manholes ensued with the result that thirty-three persons were killed.

The tragedy has cast a gloom over the colony and a rigid investigation into the cause is now in progress.

A SETBACK GIVEN

To Wyoming Cattle Rustlers By the Capture of Tom O'Day.

Was One of Leading Spirits of Lost Cabin Gang.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 28.—It is near the end of the cattle rustlers. The profession in Wyoming has received a discouraging setback through the recent capture of "Tom" O'Day, "king of the cattle rustlers." The death of his partner, "Flat Nose" George Curry, about the same time, marks another chapter in the fight the authorities of the state have been waging against cattle thieves in the Lost Cabin district.

For years O'Day has been one of the leading spirits of the Lost Cabin gang of cattle rustlers and sheep stealers. He has been hand in glove with the Hole-in-the-Wall band of desperadoes, and has taken part in some of the train-robbing expeditions of that gang. His chief operations, however, have been in stealing, his practice being so expert that he has caused losses of thousands of dollars to Wyoming and Montana stockmen.

O'Day was recently captured by a daring sheriff and was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary. Such was the fear of the desperado exercised over the jurors that two disagreements resulted, though the evidence against O'Day was strong. As he left the court room the desperado cursed the men who had arrested him and declared that he would escape from the penitentiary before three months had passed. As jail breaking has always been one of the chief amusements of O'Day's gang, his threat is not looked upon as an idle boast.

Most of the "bad men" of the West have possessed redeeming traits. But, if the authorities are to be believed, there is nothing admirable about the "king of the cattle rustlers." O'Day is a heavy drinker, quarrelsome in disposition and always ready to resort to rifle or pistol, with both of which weapons he is a crack shot.

His hair is thick and dark and grows low on his forehead, and this, with his heavy, scowling eyebrows and long, unkempt mustache, makes a combination calculated to frighten the tenderfoot. O'Day is an inveterate gambler, and the authorities assert that he has killed at least two men in gaming table brawls.

"Flat Nose" Curry, whose name is enough to make any Wyoming or Montana stockman draw a rueful face, was "Tom" O'Day's guide in the cattle stealing industry. Curry was a Nebraskan, who moved to Wyoming in the '80s, when great herds were roaming the foothills. Curry organized a gang of cattle rustlers and began operations on a wholesale scale. He was an expert in the use of the running iron, an implement with which an expert can change the form of a brand. The iron is simply a point which is heated redhot and then used as a pencil to change the brand.

There was hardly a combination of brands among the Wyoming and Montana herds which "Flat Nose" George did not know how to change to his own advantage. If a brand defied his ingenuity he simply cut it out altogether and claimed the steer as a maverick or unbranded animal.

It was only natural that "Flat Nose" George should have appealed to "Tom" O'Day, who was a daredevil young cowboy. O'Day joined "Flat Nose" George. He proved an able lieutenant and the depredations of the two became so great that the cattlemen's association started after them. They made it so hot that the rustlers were forced to go to Montana. When things quieted down in Wyoming the rustlers returned and levied tribute on cattle and sheep men. Most of the individual cattle owners were intimidated and those who showed fight were one by one assassinated, some member of the gang being chosen to commit each murder.

The gang made its headquarters at Lost Cabin, in a desolate part of Wyoming, which for years has been almost as notorious as the Hole in the Wall. When there was little to be done in cattle-stealing the bolder spirits in the gang embarked on more hazardous ventures. O'Day was admitted to the councils of the Hole in the Wall gang, which included "Butch" Cassidy, Harvey Logan and half a dozen other bandits.

From Lost Cabin, which is about fifty miles from Thermopolis, Wyo., the gang made a descent on the bank at Belle Fourche, S. D. Here O'Day came near losing his career as a "bad man." Tom had been sent ahead of the gang to note the "lay of the land" and inform other members of the crowd if things did not look propitious for the robbery.

Tom took one drink after another and finally fell into a sleep in a saloon, propped in his chair. The gang heard nothing from Tom and supposed the coast to be clear. They rode into town, firing at everything in sight, and clattered up to the bank where they obtained a considerable sum of money. O'Day was roused by the firing of his companions. He found the robbers besset by the townspeople, who had flocked to the scene armed with rifles and shooting from behind every building that offered shelter.

All the robbers except O'Day made their escape. At Tom's trial he put on such a terrifying front that the witnesses were frightened out of their intention and there was nothing to do but let him go free. Then the bandit rode away and resumed his career of crime near Lost Cabin.

It is said that O'Day was a member of the gang that held up the Union Pacific express at Wilcox, Wyo., in 1890. About $8000 was obtained in this robbery and a posse of deputies was put on the trail of the robbers. The gang made a stand in Converse county resulting in the killing of Sheriff Hason and the escape of the bandits. The detectives are satisfied that the Logans and "Flat Nose" George Curry were in this job and it is more than likely that O'Day was with Curry.

"Flat Nose George" was hunted long and industriously by detectives, sheriffs and other officials and finally his career ended in 1901. With a confederate named Tom Cartwright, Curry was hunted down on the banks of the Green river. A battle ensued in which the then "king of the cattle rustlers" met his death, and his title passed to Tom O'Day.

In spite of the fact that the range had been greatly depleted of cattle in late years and that the herds are much smaller and less scattered than before, O'Day continued his daring work until early this year. Much of the Wyoming grazing land is now take up by sheep but this made no difference to O'Day. He found that sheep were readily marketable and easy to steal and he "rustled" them by hundreds, intimidating herders and boldly taking what he wanted from under their guns.

But recently a plucky sheriff had the hardihood to invade the Lost Cabin district and beard the outlaw in his den. He "got the drop" on O'Day and had the outlaw handcuffed and on the road to jail before Tom's confederates realized what had happened. Tom boasted that his cowboy friends would descend on the jail at Thermopolis and release him, but the boast proved empty. The jail was heavily guarded for many days, but no outlaws appeared and O'Day was tried and finally sentenced.

Unless O'Day makes good the threat of breaking out of the penitentiary the authorities believe that they have ended cattle rustling in Wyoming on a wholesale scale. The war against cattle rustlers has cost scores of lives in twenty years and hundreds of thousands of dollars in stock. The cattlemen will welcome the peace that is promised by the capture of the "king of the cattle rustlers."

THE WOES OF AN EX-BELLHOP

One Who Lasted Three Weeks In Women's Hotel Moralizes.

New York, June 28.—A boy of perhaps 16, dressed in the latest $9.68 two piece style of suiting, a natty 68 cent pattern in shirts, and one of those neat, nobby plaid effects of 28 cent ties, stood as near as he dared to the entrance of Hotel Martha Washington, the hostelry conducted exclusively for the benefit of women.

The white whiskered custodian at the door shooed him off whenever he came within a certain prescribed radius. It was the day after the Martha Washington threw out its bell boys for bell girls.

The youth leaned up against the church railing, borrowed a cigaret, and consented to grant an interview.

"I was viewing the scenes of my former prosperity," he said. "I was requested to resign yesterday to make room for a lot of fresh pullets from the Bowery coop.

"While the Waldorf-Astoria and the Holland are scrapping over who'll get my services, I'm over here a-wonderin' how I lived through it three weeks.

"On the dead and low down, that's the Martha Washington record for a bell boy. Most of 'em lasted three days, and counted up their 17 cents in tips and rang down the curtain.

"What d'you guess I got in tips in three weeks? Dollar thirty-one.

"Where did the 1 cent come in? Say, you'd never believe it. A party from Utica that had grips like trunks gave me a nickel and sent me out for four afternoon papers. Sort of bargain sale proposition.

"I got 'em and stood lookin' like there was something more to be transacted. That the way to bring 'em.

"'O, yes, my change,' she says. 'Never mind, you can keep it.'

"'Madam,' says I, holding out the copper like it smelt bad, 'I am a Casey, and the race of Casey never stoops to accept bribes.' And I gave it back.

"I was savin' my last chance up to do something sensational and leave my memory behind when the management beat me to it and signed their gang of girls.

"The pullets has my sympathy. There ain't nothin' in it.

"Where's a chance to roll up a wad butting into private scandals when they ain't no scandals? Where's the chance to touch a jolly drunk for a ten when they aint' no drunks?

"The only whole quarter I got was for quelling a mouse. Pretty near all the rest of my dollar thirty-one was got out of a lady that smoked cigarets on the fifth floor. She was all right.

"The Tenderloin for Willie. There's more good money dropped in the Tenderloin in a night than a prayer meeting dreams of in a year."

"Tips; that's the whole trouble," he said, wearily. "I don't like to knock, but bell boys certainly lack refinement, and we're strong on refinement here."

Hints To Advertisers

Local merchants are looking forward to a big trade this week, the last before the greatest national holiday. It is important to their own interests that their copy for the Friday issue be in The Herald ad room by Thursday noon.

If it is your ambition to "keep a little store" all your life, then don't advertise it in The Herald or your ambition will be thwarted. P. S.: Of course you can advertise it on bill-boards and handbills, safely enough.

If your store-advertising is interesting, well-placed and effective, then it becomes a question wholly of volume, of adequacy of space. Your bank balance decides this point. If it is big enough, your advertising space is big enough.

It would be a waste of money for anyone to advertise "catch-penny" offers in this newspaper. This ought to be true of any newspaper—and we hope that it is.

There ought to be—there probably is—a buyer in Duluth for every article of merchandise in your store. The readers of The Herald alone would be able to make your shelves as bare as Old Mother Hubbard's cupboard.

There is at least one man in Duluth who is convinced that you are using too much space in The Herald for your store-advertising—that is your chief busines competitor. If he is not so convinced you are making it too easy for him altogether.

GRAIN DEALER ENDS LIFE.

Chicago, June 28.—Despondency over financial matters is believed to have caused Lee Miner, a stock and grain dealer from Minier, Ill., to commit suicide at the Empire hotel here yesterday. When Mr. Minier retired Sunday night, he, apparently, turned on the gas, as when his body was found by the hotel employes yesterday he had been dead for several hours. In the pockets of the dead man's clothes were found letters from several commission houses requesting Miner to call and put up more margins or his deals would be closed out. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by asphyxiation with suicidal intent.

STRANGE STORY

Told By Man Who Emerges From River.

Milwaukee, June 28.—A special to the Sentinel from Fond du Lac, Wis., says: A man about 30 years old, fished himself out of the Fond du Lac river in this city yesterday and afterward told a weird story of being kidnaped in Chicago and taken on board a freight train. He says he remembers nothing after he was taken on the freight train until he awoke to find himself in the river. Then he managed to get to the shore and sought for a place to dry his clothes. He succeeded in borrowing 50 cents and telegraphed to Chicago friends to send him money to pay his fare home. The man said his name was Joseph Korsek and that his home is in Chicago. His mother, who kept a boarding house on Seventeenth street in that city, was murdered by one of her boarders last week in a fit of anger about the dinner, and the son was one of the principal witnesses against him. He believes it was friends of the murderer who threw him into the river, hoping that he would drown so that his evidence could not be given in the trial.

Chicago, June 28.—The Chicago police declare that no woman named Korsek was murdered in this city last week nor at any other time. The name Joseph Korsek does not appear in the city directory.

MET A HORRIBLE DEATH.

Leadville, Colo., June 28.—Wallace Colby, a well known mining man, met a horrible death while driving last night. The horse stumbled and Colby was thrown forward under the horse's heels. His feet caught the seat springs and in this manner he was dragged through the principal streets of the city. When the horse was finally stopped Colby was dead. His brains had been battered out by the animal's hoofs. Colby was 54 years of age and had been identified with mining here for twenty-five years.

TRAINS COLLIDE.

Billings, Mont., June 28.—Passenger train No. 41 on the Burlington & Missouri River railroad was wrecked this side of New Castle, Wyo., yesterday morning, crashing in an open switch and colliding with a train of stock cars on the siding. Larry Holden and a waiter named Kinney were injured. A great number of passengers were severely shaken up. The passenger engine and a box car were badly wrecked.

DECLINE IN WHEAT

Market Is Sluggish and Price Gradually Works Lower.

Chicago Is Weakest and Minneapolis Has Smallest Loss.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 28.—The wheat market was stagnant this morning so far as trade is concerned and prices fell away though not at a rapid pace. The Duluth market lost 5c for July and 3/4c for September and Minneapolis 1/8-1/4c for July and 1/4-3/8c for September. In Chicago the July option was 3/8-7/8c lower and September 1/4-3/8c lower. The Liverpool market closed 1/8 to 1/4d lower, Paris unchanged to 1/4c higher, and London unchanged to 1/4d lower.

Statistical information was missing owing to wire trouble.

Car receipts at Duluth were 65 against 46 last year, and at Minneapolis 224 against 243 last year, making a total of 289 for the Northwest against the same number a year ago. Winnipeg received 285 against 83 a year ago.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed 1/4d higher to 1/8d lower. September corn in the Chicago market closed unchanged and September oats a shade higher.

Trading in the Duluth market was very dull. The July option opened 1/4c lower at 91 3/4c, fell to 91 1/2c at 10:15 and held there for much of the remainder of the session. The close was at 91 3/4c, a loss of 5/8c. The September option was somewhat more active. It opened 1/4c lower at 81 3/8c, and then advanced to 81 1/2c. It fell from there, however, and closed 3/8c lower at 81c.

Cash offerings were light. There was no change in the basis of prices which continued at July price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was very dull. July held most of the morning unchanged at $1.09 and then closed 1/4c lower at $1.08 3/4. October also lost 1/4c and September was 3/4c lower.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Weather Conditions Had Depressing Influence on Wheat

Chicago, June 28.—Improved weather conditions and lower cables had a depressing influence on the wheat market today, but no great weakness was manifested. Trading was largely by local operators and the volume of business light. September opened 1/4c to 1/2@3/4c lower at 86@86 3/4c, sold up to 86 7/8@87c, and settled back to 86 3/4c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 329 cars against 217 cars last week and 291 cars a year ago.

Sentiment in the corn pit was bearish but prices showed little change from yesterdays closing figures. The principal factor was the large proportion of contract grade corn in the day's receipts. September opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 48 1/4c to 48 3/8c, and held at 48c. Local receipts were 234 cars with 95 of contract grade.

Oats were a trifle easier on moderate liquidation of July. Offerings were well taken by local bulls and prices were only a trifle lower. September opened unchanged to a shade lower at 31 3/4c to 31 3/8@7/8c, and held at 31 7/8c. Local receipts 122 cars.

Moderate covering by shorts caused firmness in provisions. Under the influence of a weak hog market there was some profit taking at the start. Opening prices were lower all around, but the initial loss was more than regained on the fair demand. September pork opened 7 1/2c lower at $12.95 and sold up to $13.12 1/2. September lard was unchanged to 2 1/2c lower at $7.10 to $7.12 1/2 and advanced to $7.17 1/2. Ribs opened down 2 1/2@5c to 5@7 1/2c at $7.65 to $7.57 1/2 and rallied to $7.65.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

St. Louis wires: Thirty-three sacks new wheat came in on steamer from the American bottoms yesterday. It was nice wheat but damp and a little tough. It sold at 85 on the levee. Last year this crop was lost. There will be large chunks of it this year to come in by steamer.

Dennis, Chicago: Jones is out with another optimistic wheat report, but it is spoiled for a grain man by the remark that "it looks as though a splendid business is opening up for the Southwestern railroads, and that the Santa Fe, Rock Island and Missouri Pacific will be favored, etc." A grain report to a railroad was never satisfactory to a well-posted grain man and never will be. It smacks

SHALL WE SAVE TOBACCO ASHES.

As everybody knows, the ash left on burning tobacco is considerable and, as a matter of fact, the mineral matter of the tobacco frequently amounts to as much as a fifth part of its weight, says the London Lancet. Thus, a ton of tobacco leaf would yield four hundredweight of ash, which represents valuable mineral constituents withdrawn from the soil, which have to be replaced by abundant manuring. It has been calculated that a ton of tobacco withdraws over a hundredweight of mineral constituents per acre of land. In 1901 the home consumption of tobacco in the United Kingdom was at the rate of two pounds per head or a total of about 40,000 tons, which represents, at what is now a probably low computation, approximately 8000 tons of ash annually committed to the winds or dissipated in some other way. On the face of it there would seem to be a fortune in store for that individual who could devise a successful means for the collection of tobacco ash, and it is a great pity that so much valuable material should forever be lost to the soil without any attempt at direct restoration being made.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Trading In the Stock Market Listless and Indifferent.

Prices Drooped Without Any Urgent Pressure to Sell.

New York, June 28.—The opening trading in the stock market today was listless and indifferent, and prices drooped without any urgent pressure to sell. Some of the leading stocks recovered 1/8 after the first transactions. Canadian Pacific rose 1/2, which was the most conspicuous change.

Opening prices failed to establish any demand, and hte traders offered the list down a small fraction, Union Pacific, Reading and Brooklyn Transit sugged 3/8. Purchases became more numerous later and the market stiffened. Brooklyn Transit rallied 1/2, but the Western stocks hung back.

There was not sufficient movement of prices to make a discernitive tone. Canadian Pacific rose 7/8 and reacted 1/4. United States Steel preferred declined 3/8. Changes of 1/4 either way were the extremes in many leading stocks. St. Louis Southwestern preferred fell 7/8 and Virginia-Carolina Chemical and Hocking Coal 1/8, the latter with a recovery of 3/8. Bonds were irregular at noon.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf to B. E. Baker: A number of traders who left Wall street last Friday for a couple days outing returned this morning in a bearish frame of mind. Impressed by the continued dullness and the vague talk of a scare incident to the Democratic convention they have sold stocks rather aggressively under the lead, it is said, of H. G. Weil. In influential circles, however, the views expressed are in strong contrast with the pessimistic utterances of the foregoing professional element. Brokers who have been in touch with the market for many weeks past and whose forecasts have been born out by the event with a fair degree of accuracy, make the position that while prices may yield moderately to bearish pressure the outcome of the existing conditions will be a considerable advantage.

• • •

Evans to Paine, Webber & Co.: The tone of yesterday's market was slightly reactionary. This is not surprising in view of the Saratoga bank suspension and the poor statement made by the Atchison road. Sentiment has been for some time more cheerful in the street and yet it seems difficult to see anything in the business situation which denotes any real improvement. In a market such as we have been having lately, it is pretty hard to tell what the main tendency is because transactions are so small that fluctuations as a rule signify very little. It is beginning, however, to look a little bit topsy at this level. Stocks fail to go up higher than they have been and declines take place from time to time, although, as a rule, they are not important. I should say that if the market moves at all it will move downward at present.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 28.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 5@24 points on the old crop and of 6@13 points on the new crop months in response to the liquidation following surprisingly weak cables and favorable weather accounts. It was the first July notice day and notices to the extent of some 20,000 bales were said to be circulating. It was reported, however that they were being taken care of and following the call the market steadied up on covering with the net loss cut down to a matter of 3@19 points. Towards the end of the first hour, however, it was seen that part of the notices were reaching the pi tand the list weakened under a renewal of liquidation with prices selling down to a net loss 21@30 points on the old, and of 8@10 points on the new crop, ruling very irregular and unsettled.

SUGAR ADVANCED.

New York, June 28.—All grades of refined sugar were advanced 5 cents per 100 pounds today.

FARMING IN PIONEER DAYS.

The Work Hard and the Profits Small.

To get a clear idea of what progress agriculture has made, it is necessary to look at the conditions under which farming was done in the first half of the century, says Waldo A. Brown in the New York Tribune. First, a very heavy amount of labor came upon the farmer in the clearing of the farms, particularly in those states where there was the prairie and where the timber was large and heavy. Then log houses had to be built for the family and stables to shelter the stock, and also churches and school houses, for the men who settled Ohio, and, in fact, most of our states, were men of ideas, who were determined to give their children education and to minister to their higher wants as well as to the wants of the body. Then roads were to be built and bridges constructed, as the market in those days was accessible only by wagon, and this often at a long distance from the farms.

Another hindrance to agricultural progress was the character of the implements with which the farming must be done. They were crude and clumsy, mostly made by the nearest blacksmith; and even the hoes, instead of being the light, steel hoes so easy of operation, were clumsily forged by the blacksmith, and the handles were made and put in by the farmer, and often these handles were simply bean poles.

Another difficulty the farmers had to meet was in the markets, which not only were often at a great distance from home, but were also easily glutted, as the cities had not made growth enough to furnish a market for the surplus of the farm even when that surplus was small. Fortunate was the man who was located within fifty miles of a good market for his products, and even then he sometimes would find the market so glutted that after having drawn his load a long distance to it he could not dispose of the products. As an illustration of this, a neighbor of mine—a man of about my own age—tells me that when he was 18 years old he needed a little money, and applied to his father for it. His father said to him: "There is the cornerib; shell all the corn you wish; take the load to Cincinnati and sell it, and you may have all the money it brings." He shelled a two-horse load of corn, took it to the mill and had it ground, and went to Cincinnati, forty miles distant, with the meal. He found the market so glutted that 10 cents a bushel was the best offer he could get for it, and was not able to dispose of more than half his load at that. I have forgotten now whether he drew the remainder home or left it with a commission man.

This was not only true of corn, but of all products. During the '40s, when I was old enough to work on the farm and can recall prices received, dressed pork sold as low as $1.75 a hundred pounds, and the highest I remember during this period was $2.25 a hundred pounds. This was considered a remarkably good price for those who were within fifty or sventy-five miles of a market. And the same season in which pork opened at $3.95 in November, the price had dropped in February to $1.75. Eggs sold as low as 3 cents a dozen, and potatoes at times were scarcely worth drawing to market, selling at 15 cents a bushel. When there was a local failure of crop, however, prices were high; and I have known potatoes to sell at 25 cents a bushel in the spring, and advance to $2 before the following spring. There might be an abundant crop and a glut in the market within 100 miles, but farmers would not know it; and if they did, the wagoning of potatoes that distance would largely reduce this profit.

The want of transportation to market was one of the chief factors in the poverty of the farmers, for it not only lowered the price or increased the cost of marketing what they had to sell, but it also made what they had to buy, which came from an Eastern market, very high in price. The only way to get goods at this time from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington (which seem to have been the best Eastern markets) was to wagon them across the Alleghany mountains, and as a consequence the farmer paid more than double the prices at which he can now buy the necessities of life for the family. An examination of old account books kpet by my father in the '40s shows that nails sold at 10 and 12 cents a pound; sugar, coffee, calico and muslin at nearly double the prices at which they can now be bought. The first clean clover seed I ever saw cost $20 a bushel, as no clover hullers had been invented at that time, and the only way to get clean seed was to tramp a flooring with four horses for several days, and then only about half the seed was clean, and the chaff was invariably saved to sow on the home farm.

SLAVERY TO DRINK.

In condemning intemperance Mrs. John A. Logan recently said to the Cincinnat Enquirer:

"Alcohol so vitiates the mind that the degradation it imposes on its victims hardly seems like degradation to them. The woes of these men are changed to blessings in their besotted brains.

"For instance," said Mrs. Logan, smiling, "there used to live in Kentucky an old man called Fawcett Jones. Fawcett drank to excess, and he used to declare that whisky was meat and drink to him. But one hot summer night he drank so much that he fell into a puddle on the way home and in the puddle he lay snoring until dawn.

"A clergyman who had risen early found him with his head in the mud and his legs and body in the water, and the good man woke him up.

"'Ah,' he said, 'so whisky is meat and drink to you, is it, Fawcett?'

"Fawcett rose to his feet and began to wring out his clothes.

"'It certainly is,' he said, 'and washing and lodging, too, sir.'"

THE NORTH WEST

Big Boat Expected on Time In Spite of Delay.

Good List Expected to Go Out—Beeson Statistics.

Her first trip of this season is expected to land the big steamer North West here this evening at 8 o'clock. She passed Sault Ste. Marie last evening at 7 o'clock, about an hour late, but with her gait of 22 miles an hour is expected to have no trouble in making up this hour and touch at the copper country ports in the bargain.

There is a stack of mail awaiting the passengers of the boat, and a number of people are expected to go down to look over the ship this evening, unless the weather is too threatening.

A number of people are here from trips in the West who will go down east on the big liner, and a company of people are expected in this afternoon on the Great Northern to board the boat and go down the lake. Among the people who will be up from St. Paul are F. I. Whitney, formerly general passenger agent of the Great Northern.

SOME STATISTICS.

Interesting Figures In Beeson's Directory.

Beeson's Marine Directory for 1904, just issued, gives some interesting statistics on a subject which receives little general attention—that of the number of vessels abandoned and lost in other ways to the lake marine. According to these figures, a total of 131 vessels, steam and sail, large and small, were thus lost to the lakes during the past year.

The great size, however, of the new vessels that came into commission would more than offset the shrinkage of the tonnage from these causes for a period of five years. In fact, one steamer building at Lorain, Ohio, according to Beeson, will have a gross tonnage exceeding that of all the 53 abandoned vessels combined, and adding the tonnage of the 18 sold foreign, the total will not equal the gross tonnage of the steamer Augustus B. Wolvin.

In casual thoughts of the growth of the lake marine, note is always taken of the number of vessels wrecked or destroyed by fire, and of the number of new vessels built. But one is not so apt to think of or to realize the number of vessels which annually go out of existence by being abandoned by their owners as unfit for further service. Many of them live to be of a ripe old age, and others, through poor construction and rough usage, with little attention to repairs, pass out of existence after a comparatively brief career.

During the past year 53 vessels have been thus abandoned. Ten were of 10 tons burden or less, 36 were between 10 and 50 tons burden, 3 were between 100 and 200 tons, 1 between 200 and 300 tons, 1 between 300 and 400 tons, 1 between 400 and 500 and 1 of 1000 tons. In addition to these vessels abandaned, 18 steam and sailing vessels were condemned, the remaining 60 were wrecked or destroyed by fire, bringing the total up to 131 vessels lost to lake marine.

SAHARA IS NEAR.

The new steel steamer Sahara, of the Tomlinson fleet, is due to arrive in the local harbor late tomorrow on her maiden trip, bringing a cargo of bituminous coal for the Northwestern Fuel company. She will return down the lakes with a cargo of ore.

GRAIN RATE BELOW ONE CENT.

Chicago, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—For the first time in several years indeed, for the first time since the panic, grain rates are quoted fairly below 1 cent. The rate today is 3/4 and 7/8 cent and for vessels going begging at these prices. At noon, some of the line agents reported they had not been able to secure small lots enough to fill out their cargoes. "The East will not buy grain at present prices," say the shippers, and that seems to be all there is to it.

BLUE FOR VESSELMEN.

Cleveland, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—With a grain movement that is absolutely cutting no figure whatever, and with a coal movement that is expected to be 15 per cent less than last year's, and with the uncertainty of the steel corporation chartering any outside tonnage for the ore trade, the general outlook is very blue for vesselmen. Vessel owners have endeavored to discover the position of the steel trust with reference to its requirements, but have not made much headway. It is expected that the steel trust will want some outside tonnage to carry its ore, but there is nothing certain about it, and President Coulby is not desirous of talking about it. At present, it looks like 75 cents from the head of the lakes. The drop in the trip rate on coal had, of course, been expected for several days.

ANOTHER WIDOW

Appears to Claim Estate of New Yorker.

New York, June 28.—The appearance of a rival claimant for the title of widow and money left by James Smith, former division superintendent of the public service corporation, who died April 4 last, at his home in Newark, will result in a suit at law. Smith left an estate worth about $9000.

Nothing to indicate that the estate should not be paid to Mrs. Smith and her children developed until a lawyer went to Newark and notified the administrators that he represented Smith's legal widow, who was not the woman known in Newark as his wife.

CALIFORNIA MAN

To Be Tried Second Time For Murder.

San Francisco, June 28.—The supreme court of California has decided that a man once acquitted may be tried again for the same offense, despite the provision of the constitution to the contrary.

The decision was rendered in the case of Dr. Benjamin F. Stoll, who was charged with the murder of Dr. Robert J. Blake, on Oct. 18, 1902. Stoll claimed the shooting was in self-defense. When the case came to trial the court instructed the jury to acquit. The supreme court holds that the judge exceeded his powers.

SO HE PAID.

Just before his departure for the South recently John W. Gates, with several friends, was seated in the cafe of the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. Some refreshments had been ordered, and there was a good-natured dispute as to who should pay.

Mr. Gates was the more insistent. "You know I am going away," he said, "and I insist this is my treat."

"But, J. W., said another of the party, "you are my guest, and I could not think of letting you pay."

Another in the party suggested a compromise by having him do the honors. The waiter, awed presumably by the importance of the men he was serving, had a sort of nervous spasm. He started to wipe off the top of the table, and in doing so upset two large high balls. The liquor poured over Mr. Gates' trousers. The waiter, showing incipient stages of heart disease, mopped up the flood.

"You see, gentlemen," said Mr. Gates, "there can be no further discussion. The drinks are on me."

ONE OF UNCLE JOE'S YARNS.

Uncle Joe Cannon tells of the tribulations of a congressman from the West, out for re-election, whose wife craved social honors.

It appears that the statesman referred to was a man of very plain habits, little given to the frivolities of the smart set, but in some way his spouse managed to convince him that his re-election depended in a large measure upon his taking a more prominent part in "society." So the Westerner energetically set about to meet his wife's views. But it went hard with him, and, finally, he despaired of ever becoming anything like a society man.

"One day," said Mr. Cannon to a New York Times man, "he came to me in great distress. 'I'll be hanged if I'm not getting sick of it,' said he. 'The social game has got me goin' good, for sure. But what makes me mad is that I should be trying to make good a bluff like this when I haven't mastered one of the fundamental ideas of the scheme.'

"'And what is that fundamental idea?' I asked.

"'Simply this,' replied the candidate for re-election, 'the fundamental idea in order to be a society man is, as I figure it, to be able to talk while you eat. Now, it's absolutely ridiculous in a man like me trying to make anyone believe he is a society man. When I talk I have to stop eating, and when I eat I have to stop talking. It's no use,' he added, dejectedly. 'I'll never make a society man.'"

ROTHSCHILDS'S ADVICE.

Upon a client complaining to Baron Rothschild that he had lent 10,000 francs to a person who had gone off to Constantinople without leaving any acknowledgment of the debt, the baron said:

"Well, write to him and tell him to send you the 50,000 francs he owes you."

"But he only owes me 10,000," objected the other.

"Precisely," rejoined the Baron, "and he will write and tell you so, and thus you will get his acknowledgment of it."

AMERICAN WOMEN'S PERIL.

Some Phases of Her Progress Cause Great Alarm.

The twentieth century American woman seems to be regarded the world over as the most attractive of her sex, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean. At home her pre-eminence is unquestioned. Abroad she is severely criticized, but it is noticeable that the foreign women were jealous of her and that the foreign men marry her when they get a chance, facts which speak louder than words.

This triumphant progress of the twentieth century American woman does not appear to cause the fair creature hersef any misgivings, but certain phases of it are evidently causing great alarm in various quarters. Some German scientists and some British eduactional experts are greatly exercised over the probability of her becoming too educated. Along this line they see a grave peril to the nation, and prophesy the extinction of the American.

Now, two Americans have written books intended to sound wild notes of alarm. One, a man, seeks to prove that woman is entirely unfit for the higher co-education, and seeks it at her peril The other, a woman, sets forth the horrors of the modren woman's club.

The man is D. Ely Van de Warker, a physician of Syracuse, N. Y., and his book has the title, "Woman's Unfitness for the Higher Co-education." He is profoundly convinced that men and women never ought to be together in any relation, save that of sex. He regards the plan of bringing them together as human beings for the exercise of their intelectual faculities as unnatural and altogether horrid, due in the West to a sordid commercialism and in the East to pernicious influence of the women suffragists.

He admits the value of higher education—in women's coleges; it is the propinquity of coeduactional institutions that causees him such alarm. When the girls excel the boys in studies they do it at the expense of cruel injury to their health. Coeducation has a cearsening effect on girls and does not refine boys. Athletics by boys are improper because of their vicious effects on the girl spectators. And, finally, the faculities of coeducational institutions deliberately encourage courtship and marriage.

The woman is Mrs. John Van Vorst, and her book is "The Issues of Life." It is intended to be a sweeping denunciation of certain phases of fashionable life and terrible arraignment of the modern club woman.

Her characters are all members of a lunch club. One woman becomes an invalid for life. A second becomes infatuated with a cheuffeur, and because her father declines to hire him leaves home and goes to live in a settlement. A third commits suicide because she cannot live without her lover and cannot make up her mind to run away with him. A fourth gets a divorce and marries a man who makes her unhappy forever afterward. A fifth loses her small boy by appendicitis because he had been weakened by a hygienic bringing up. A sixth is injured by an automobile accident in which her lover is killed.

Evidently, with several hundred thousand women actively engaged in club work, and the coeducational institutions turning out sweet girl graduates by the thousand annually, and the charming creature becoming more educated every day, the future of the American woman is dark, indeed.

However, hope springs eternal in the human breast. It is never too late to mend. It is necessary only to abolish women's clubs stop coeducation and shut up women's colleges. This may be somewhat difficult, especially if the women should object, but surely the American woman is worth saving.

DRINK IN ENGLAND.

Women Writer Says It Is Killing the Nation.

"The chief cause of our industrial decay," writes Margaret Polson Murray in the Contemporary Review, "the real ghost in the cupboard, is, without any doubt whatever, our great national hobby, drunkenness—the one national and universal panacea for the ills of men and women, old and young, high and low, rich and poor.

"On this hobby our direct expenditure last year was £150,000,000, about £25 per family ($125), plus the cost in poor rates, homes, refuges, police, prisons, hospitals and asylums, for the devotees of the habit. But what is the cost to the country, from an industrial standpoint, in brain and muscle, in the deadened mind, the blunted intellect, the unsteady hand, the unreliability and unpunctuality of a habit invincibly established behind centuries of tradition, and winked at by employer as well as by employe?

"Men at the head of our large industries may drink if they will. No temperance crusade invades their sacred precincts. But in an industrial competition which is rapidly becoming an industrial warfare this weak point in their armor is the first to reveal itself. The two generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves are already telling their tale. The middle classes, speaking industrially and not socially, follow the example with which they have become so familiar.

"The artisan, the backbone of the country, is in a plight still worse, for in addition to his general ignorance, his narrow horizon, his antiquated tools and methods, his unalterable conviction that he has nothing to learn, he must meet the brunt of the warfare handicapped by his intemperance.

"And worst of all, we are in very actual possession of 12,000,000, about one in four of our population, who are in abject poverty, too incapable for anything, even for anarchy; men and women who stand around the streets of our large cities by the hundred thousand, bold, bloated, dissolute, black-eyed, sinful, dishonest, degraded, debauched, never sober except by accident, incapable of self-respect, and content to dwell in filth and rags indescribable.

"When a man spends childhood, youth and manhood in refining surroundings we anticipate a certain result—the natural outgrowth of such conditions. When a man passes his entire life in an atmosphere more debasing than pen can portray we are surprised at the natural outgrowth of the conditions. We expect a miracle, and in our chagrin we organize a rigorous crusade against the man—not against the conditions—and we maintain the crusade until we secure philanthropic relief by sweeping the man up into a statistic and arranging him alphabetically in a blue-book for reference.

"In common with humanity this man has cravings. So have we all. I do not believe that these 12,000,000 crave for whisky. They crave for something they do not possess. So do we all. But their hunger must be for something evil and ours for good.

"It may, instead, be for food, clothing, rest, warmth, three square meals a day, a warm sleep, a cozy fire, some human joy, the charm of a home, the true delight of work, the glory of independence, the full manhood of useful citizenship. Instead of an incubus, the man may be a commercial asset, and the thought is enough to haunt our philanthropy for the rest of its life."

WOMEN'S OUTFITTERS

OHIO "FIRELANDS" DISTRICT.

Unnumbered native Ohioans, not to speak of hundreds of thousands of residents of the state who have come from foreign lands and other states of the American union, must have wondered why a fertile and productive tract in northern Ohio, a district which in no way hints of the ravages of fire, should be called the "Firelands." Among all the vicissitudes of Ohio's early history great conflagrations were notable for their absence, says the Dayton Herald. No such terrible forest fires swept this state as ravaged large areas in Michigan and Wisconsin seventy or eighty years later.

The fires to which the name refers raged in Connecticut, not Ohio, and they were the work of British or Tory soldiers, instead of the result of accidents or natural causes. In 1781, when the long struggle for independence was nearly ended, Benedict Arnold commanded an expedition which ravaged the Connecticut coast of Long Island Sound. He burned New London and other towns and left behind misery and destitution, as well as a more bitter hatred than he had earned before that outrage upon his native state.

This and other cruel and senseless attacks upon Connecticut towns left so strong a felling of sympathy and injustice behind that in disposing of Connecticut's rights in lands now forming part of Ohio 781 square miles in the extreme western edge of the Western Reserve were set apart to be donatd to suffrers by the British raids. Five ranges of townships running north and south were included in this tract.

Sandusky Bay and Lake Erie extend so far southward at this point that the five ranges of townships contained only about five hundred thousand acres of land. The tract measured some twenty-seven miles by thirty. The Connecticut sufferers from the torch of the enemy lived chiefly in New London, Norwalk and Fairfield, and it was from these towns that many of the settlers of the "Firelands" came to build in the Ohio wilderness settlements bearing the same names and having like civic ideals and character.

EXPENSIVE MINING IN ENGLAND.

With increased and increasing demand, for coal came the necessity for opening our lower seams, and deeper shaft's meant heavier capital expenditure in colliery enterprises, says the Engineering Magazine. It is worthy of remark how little the outside public realize of the great difficulties that often have to be overcome in sinking—such as passing through water bearing strata or running sands—or of the enormous cost entailed by some colliery developments.

As early as 1829 John Buddle, in giving evidence before the house of lords, declared that the cost of sinking, even then, was frequently £10,000 to £15,000, and J. T. Taylor stated before a select committee on rating of mines in 1857 that at Haswell colliery, in the county of Durham, £40,000 was expended in contending with quicksand, and that the shaft had ultimately to be abandoned. At Morton colliery, a few miles distant from Haswell, £300,000 was expended in sinking; the quantity of water pumped during the operation of passing through the overlying magnesian limestone bed amounted to an average of 9306 gallons per minute, from a depth of 540 feet; and the three shafts ultimately reached the Hulton seam, at a depth of 1338 feet from the surface, in April 1843.

Many deep and costly sinkings—several much deeper than in the last instance—have been put down since the Morton winning, but none, I believe, at a greater expenditure of capital, owing doubtless to the greatly improved methods now employed in carrying on such operations through watery straits, notably the Kind-Chaudron system, whereby the shaft is bored out and the side protected by metal cylinders lowered from the surface, and the Poetsch or Goberat methods, whereby the water is frozen in the "running" sand or other water-bearing stratum, and the shaft sunk through the solid mass.

STOLE HIS OWN SHIRTS.

There is a prominent man in Mexico City who ought to be awarded the medal for absent-mindedness, says the Mexican Herald. He is a bachelor and has for his servant a faithful Indian named Juan. Not long ago he purchased several very fine shirts, articles of apparel in which he takes special pride, fancy shirts being, in fact, his hobby. About a week ago he began to miss a few of his fine shirts. A day or so later another had disappeared, and finally six of his fancy shirts were misplaced. After racking his brain for a couple of days, he was reluctantly compelled to suspect his faithful servant of theft. One morning he called Juan into his room and charged him with stealing the shirts, but he gasped with surprise when the Indian told him that the missing shirts were upon his own back. An investigation showed him that Juan was right, for upon taking off his first shirt, he found five others under it. He had been putting on a new shirt every morning without removing the one that was already upon his own back. It seems that Juan had noticed it, but he was too good a servant to be surprised at what he considered one of the oddities of his master.

Herald want ads. have plucked many a "thorn" from the flesh; so don't let anything continue to bother you for one more day if a want ad. will cure it—as it probably will.

"Want is wit's whetstone;" and wittily worded "wants" win.

"The Herald want ad. way" of doing things, of getting things, of selling things, of solving the little riddles of the day, is the NEW WAY—the easy way, the unfailing way.

"Gold that's put to use more gold begets." Dollars grow and raise large families, only when invested—never when hoarded. Put your "hidden wealth" into real estate—but study the ads. first.

Through The Herald want columns you may trade bicycles for books; busts for bureaus; bonds for board; cutlasses for cupboards; desks for dishes; dresses for diamonds; dogs for dinner-sets; lots for lumber; paintings for pool-tables; rugs for rings; yawls for yachts.

WISCONSIN'S DAY AT WORLD'S FAIR DULY CELEBRATED

World's Fair Grounds, St. Louis, June 29.—Wisconsin day was celebrated at the Louisiana Purchase exposition today. Governor La Follette, who came from Madison especially to be present, was met at the depot, and with about forty members of his staff, who accompanied him, was escorted to the administration building, where the party was joined by President Francis and a military escort. There was a parade to the Wisconsin state building, where a program of music and addresses was carried out. The building was presented to the exposition by ex-Governor W. E. Hoard, president of Wisconsin state board of managers, who made an address which was responded to by President Francis. Governor La Follette followed with a short address and was succeeded by Congressman H. C. Adams of Madison, Wis., and Hon. Kirby Thomas of Superior, Wis. Music was furnished by the merchants' and manufacturers' octette of Milwaukee. Mr. Thomas spoke as follows:

"With varied natural resources, a state government well founded and a people who have ever had in mind the progressive motto of the commonwealth, Wisconsin has attained to high rank among the states of the Union.

The variety of natural resources has been a distinct advantage in the material development of the state, for in the absence of any one preponderating interest, farming, dairying, lumbering, manufacturing, mining and commerce have each engaged the energies of its people. With this diversified industry there has come to the business interests of the state stability, and to the individual broad opportunities. With the exception of the pine forests, these advantages are not transitory. Where, in the earlier days of the state, the Wisconsin farmer raised but one blade of grass, now, under scientific guidance and with the rich soil and the good climate, he raises not two but several blades; while in the northern part of the state dairying and farming bid fair to produce annually greater wealth than ever came from the forests. The mines of zinc, lead, copper and iron will yield for many generations. The extension of transportation facilities and the utalization of the numerous water powers of the state have given to manufacturing an ever-widening and increasingly profitable field.

The political founders of Wisconsin builded well. They were vigorous, intelligent and high-minded young men, who had come out of the "East." In the first constitutional convention there were 42 natives of New York state, 29 of New England and 12 of foreign birth, and in the second constitutional convention the nativity list shows that 25 were born in New York state, 24 in New England and only 7 in foreign lands. Wisconsin thus secured a distinctively conservative constitution and a thoroughly American code of laws. On this foundation has been built a government whose record for more than half a century has been progressive, liberal and intelligent.

Wisconsin was first developed by men from the original colonies, with all the fearless ambitions and unbounded hopes

PROHIBITIONISTS IN NATIONAL CONVENTION

Indianapolis, June 29.—The tenth National Prohibition convention opened today in Tomlinson hall, with 4000 delegates, alternates and visitors present. The hall was decorated with the national colors, many large flags being used. Over the platform hung pictures of Abraham Lincoln, Clinton B. Fiske, and Frances Willard. Around the hall, suspended from the galleries, were pictures of Hale Johnson, Samuel B. Pearson, sheriff of Cumberland county, Maine, who gained a high place in the estimation of Prohibitionists by his vigorous enforcement of the law. The delegates were seated by states, Nebraska, Iowa and New Jersey occupying the reservations immediately in front of the platform. The convention was called to order by National Chairman Oliver W. Stewart of Chicago. In introducing the Rev. George H. Peake, of Sandusky, O., to make the opening prayer, he said:

"There is one convention where the opening prayer is not a mere formality, and it is now about to be opened."

Chairman Stewart introduced W. S. Doan, of Indianapolis, who welcomed the delegates on behalf of the Prohibitionists of the city and state. When he mentioned the name of Gen. Miles there was a burst of applause. When he concluded, a Delaware delegate moved three cheers for W. S. Doan, "the next vice president of the United States," which were given.

National Chairman Stewart made a brief reply. He said the convention just assembled was the only one that had a real issue to present to the American people. Mr. Stewart introduced Homer L. Castle, of Pittsburg, temporary chairman of the convention. Mr. Castle said in part:

"That canker worm of the West, polygamy, today holds at bay our United States senate and its power is so great that the greatest lawmaking assemblage of this country, composed of Republicans and Democrats, dare not strike because polygamy said there is a national election at hand.

"This problem must be solved by a braver lot of men than Republican and Democratic senators. The homes of our land have stood for years at the doors of congress asking for such a uniform system of marriage and divorce laws as will protect the sacrament of marriage. It has been treated not simply with scant courtesy, but with no courtesy at all. This problem of indissoluble home life is one of our legacies. An intelligent national solution of the mutual rights and wrongs of capital, called "trusts," on one hand and labor with its organization on the other is a problem never yet approached from the standpoint of a statesman, but always as a politician.

"There is but one party left with the absolute monarchy existing today in the Republican party, expressed in its imperialism, militarism and commercialism on the one hand and the Democracy with its absolute anarchy, want of consecutive thought on any subject, upon the other hand, there was never a clearer call for a party who can stand before the American people, sure of the needs of our great land, positive of its protection on public questions and fearless in its espousal of the cause of the right whether that power, however strong, is in this land."

When Mr. Castle, after his denunciation of the Democratic party shouted: "Nor will we wait to see what they will do," there was a tremendous burst of applause which broke out several times.

Following Mr. Castle's address, W. G. Colderwood, of Minneapolis, took charge of the records as temporary chairman and the committees selected at the state meetings and the names of the new national committee were read and adopted.

An invitation to the St. Louis exposition was read by W. M. Godwin, a Missouri delegate, signed by President Francis. Free admission was offered. A recess was taken till 2 o'clock.

WOMAN KILLED AND THROWN INTO RIVER

Body of Stylishly Dressed Unknown Woman Found at St. Paul.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—With a silk tie knotted tightly about the neck, the body of a stylishly dressed woman, who had been strangled to death, has been found floating in the Mississippi river at the St. Paul boom. The appearance of the body and the manner in which the cloth was wound about the throat indicates that the woman was murdered, and cast into the river to cover up the traces of the crime.

The identity of the woman is a mystery. She was, apparently, about 30 years old.

As the body was found at the boom it is supposed that it was thrown into the river either at Fort Snelling or Minneapolis.

It had been in the water, it is believed, but a short time.

The police of both cities are investigating the affair.

WILL THERE BE TWO CONVENTIONS AT ST. PAUL? RETURNS INDICATE DUNN DELEGATES IN LEAD

Bitter Contests Certain Over Ramsey and Hennepin County Bolts.

Nine Counties Send Contesting Delegations to the State Convention.

Both Collins and Dunn Still Claiming They Will Win Out.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Dispatch, which has supported the candidacy of Judge Collins, says:

"The opinion seems general that St. Paul will be the meeting place of two state conventions tomorrow—the regular, controlled by Collins, and a rump convention, headed by those who have sworn allegiance to the man from Princeton.

"Dispatch returns give Judge Collins the gubernatorial nomination by a narrow margin, but the Dunn managers are emphatic in their statement that they will not accept any such decision.

"State Printer Dare, an uncompromising Dunn supporter, told the Dispatch last night that, leaving the contested elections out of the reckoning, Mr. Dunn had a majority of the delegates. He added that if any attempt was made to seat them before ascertaining their legal standing, Mr. Dunn's supporters would be justified in walking out. Bolting delegations were a conspicuous feature of no less than seven county delegations throughoutt he state yesterday, prominent among which were Ramsey and Hennepin counties. In every instance but one, it was the Dunn delegates that walked out.

"James A. Martin, in charge of Judge Collins' campaign, claims that this bolting feature was prearranged, and says he holds copies of instructions telegraphed the local leaders by the Dunn managers ordering a bolt. These instructions he says were: 'If it looks like a Collins victory, bolt and hold a convention of your own.'

"It is thought that the state central committee will ignore all delegates elected at rump conventions and seat those sent by the regularly called county conventions unless passed upon otherwise by the committee on credentials. If this is done a bolt on the part of Mr. Dunn's followers probably will follow."

DUNN CLAIMS CONTROL.

Says He Has Majority Without Contesting Delegations.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although the friends of both R. C. Dunn and L. W. Collins both claim enough delegates to control the organization of the convention tomorrow, returns from every county in the state indicate that Dunn has a majority of 200 delegates, not counting the nine contesting delegations, with a total of 233 delegates.

If the contesting delegations, including Ramsey and Hennepin, are prohibited from voting on the temporary organization of the convention, R. C. Dunn will control the convention beyond any possible doubt. The Dunn men claim that they have 640 delegates instructed or declared for the Princeton candidate, without the contesting delegations, and that the nomination of Dunn on the first ballot is assured. The Collins men claim a small majority of the uncontested delegates, and maintain that they will control the temporary organization.

"We have got the Collins men whipped to a standstill," said R. C. Dunn last night, after he had received telegrams from thirty counties instructed to vote for the Princeton candidate first, last and all the time. "I shall be nominated hands down without Hennepin or Ramsey."

The run of the Collins men in Ramsey county was a great surprise to the Dunn men, and the stock of the Princeton candidate was below par early yesterday morning. Then flocked in telegrams from all over the state showing that Dunn was making a phenomenal run in the country districts, and the hopes of the Dunn men began to brighten. Early in the afternoon the Minneapolis Journal, which favors Collins, conceded Dunn 400 delegates outside of the contesting delegations. At 5 o'clock the paper conceded 524, and in the 6 o'clock extra conceded 541.

The contesting delegations and the number of delegates which each county has in the state convention follows: Beltrami, 10; Benton, 8; Cass, 9; Anoka, 11; Hennepin, 113; Ramsey, 67; Roseau, 8; Sherburne, 9; Traverse, 8. Total, 233.

Some of the Collins men last night began to talk of a third candidate. J. F. Jacobson, chairman of the state board of control, who has been a Collins man from first to last, said:

"If the Republicans do the right thing they will nominate a new man. The present campaign is merely rule or ruin."

The following claimed for Judge Collins by the Dispatch have been instructed or declared for Mr. Dunn: Becker, 12; Chippewa, 11; Chisago, 11; Dodge, 5; Freeborn, 8; Meeker, 13; Otter Tail, 19; Redwood, 14; Wabasha, 12; Wright, 18. Total, 124.

The counties named below and claimed for Collins by the Dispatch will have divided delegations and Mr. Dunn will have in proportion about as follows: Brown, 6; Lac Qui Parle, 4; Marshall, 3; Stevens, 3; Winona, 13. Total, 34.

The Dispatch claims the following counties for Collins, when in fact they will have double-headed delegations: Beltrami, 10; Benton, 8; Cass, 9; Hennepin, 113; Ramsey, 67. Total 207.

Subtracting the above from the Dispatch estimate of Judge Collins' strength, he would have only 265 votes. Of those classed by the Dispatch as being doubtful the following are for Mr. Dunn: Anoka, 11; Clearwater, 3; Goodhue, 12; Hubbard, 9; Isanti, 11; Norman, 11; Wilkin, 8. Total, 67.

Assuming that the Dispatch figures on Mr. Dunn of 415 are correct we will add to them the mistakes of the Dispatch and they clearly give him 640 votes in the convention without counting the contesting delegations.

The following counties given by the Minneapolis Journal for Collins have been instructed or have declared for Mr. Dunn: Becker, 12; Chippewa, 11; Meeker, 13; Winona, 18; Wright, 18; Clearwater, 6. Total, 78.

In the Journal columns the following are credited to Collins but Mr. Dunn will get part of each delegation as follows: Blue Earth, 4; Chisago, 7; Dodge, 5; Fillmore, 5; Freeborn, 5; Lac Qui Parle, 4; Marshall, 3; Norman, 12; Stevens, 3; Wilkin, 4; Winona, 8. Total, 60.

Further in the Journal column the following counties are contested: Beltrami, 10; Benton, 8; Cass, 9; Hennepin, 113; Ramsey, 67. Total, 207.

This makes a total of 354 to be subtracted from the Journal column figures and leaves Collins but 244 votes in the convention. Adding the 138 votes taken from the Collins column, which properly belongs to the Journal concession to Mr. Dunn, makes Dunn's vote on the first ballot 662.

COLLINS MEN CONFIDENT.

Chairman Martin of the Collins campaign committee now claims 686 votes in the state convention and the nomination of Judge Collins on the first ballot. He insists that his claim of 686 delegates for Collins is reasonable and conservative.

The Dispatch, which is anti-Dunn, says: "The supporters of Robert C. Dunn are putting up a desperate game of bluff. They are apparently beaten on all sides and they apparently know it, but they are fighting to the last ditch, and have disclosed the evident intention of precipitating upon the state convention as many contesting delegations as possible. They have paved the way to this course by setting up a cry of fraud wherever they are beaten. In Duluth, where they had it all their own way, there was no suspicion of unfairness in their complaints, but wherever the Collins supporters outnumbered them, the

JAPANESE SAID TO HAVE CAPTURED THREE OF OUTER DEFENSES OF PORT ARTHUR

Unconfirmed Report Says That Southeast Forts Have Fallen.

Taken After an All Day's Fight, Beginning With Artillery Duel.

The Czar Inspects Baltic Fleet to Be Sent to Far East Soon.

Tokio, June 29.—It is unofficially reported that the Chik-Wan-Shan, Chit-An-Shan and So-Cho-Shan forts, southeast of and part of the Port Arthur defenses, were captured on Sunday after an all day fight, beginning with an artillery duel. So-Cho-Shan, it is added, was first captured and the other forts fell soon afterwards. The Russians retreated west, leaving forty dead or wounded. The composition of the Japanese force has not been ascertained beyond the fact that it is said to have consisted of all branches of the service. The Japanese lost three officers and 100 men killed or wounded and captured two guns, and a quantity of ammunition. The officials here do not confirm the report.

RUSSIANS ANXIOUS

To Hear Result of Great Decisive Battle.

St. Petersburg, June 29.—The whole city is awaiting with breathless interest news from the opposing armies in Southern Manchuria, grappled in the decisive battle of the campaign. But, those fully appreciating the almost impassable country through which the Japanese columns are advancing, and the difficulty of moving large bodies of troops into position, hardly expect the battle to begin in earnest inside of several days, although admitting that heavy fighting between the advance forces may now be in progress. The papers, with the exception of the army organ and the Novoe Vreyma, are unanimously of the opinion that a pitched battle is now certain. The former is silent on the subject, which may be significant, especially as Gen. Kuropatkin's movements are shrouded in mystery. The Novoe Vreyma says:

"The time for strategy is passed. We are now on the eve of tactics. Not knowing the exact position of our forces we cannot state what Kuropatkin intends to do. It is possible he may consider it untimely and unprofitable to enter upon a decisive engagement of all his forces, in which event, while engaging the enemy, who is pouring troops down upon him, he may retire northward to meet his reinforcements."

The tone in both public and official circles has greatly improved. The report that the Port Arthur fleet has successfully put to sea, and that no ship has actually been sunk, seems to have removed the despondency, and developments on land and sea are looked forward to with increased cheerfulness. Confidence is manifested in the influence the navy will have upon the campaign and many people are inclined to attribute the Japanese precipitancy to get at Kuropatkin to the fact that the squadron at large threatens the Japanese army's sea communications.

Special dispatches say it was Maj. Gen. Mistchenko's division which has been engaged in constant fighting in the vicinity of the mountain passes over which the Japanese are advancing. One dispatch says the country is almost impassable, Mistchenko retiring only when the enemy appeared in overwhelming numbers. The correspondent considers it doubtful whether Gen. Kuroki will advance all three columns, as this would disunite his forces. He is more likely to push home his attack from Siu-Yen upon Ta Tche Kiao, exclusive of Gen. Oku. The correspondent figures that Kuroki has 70,000 troops, the Japanese commander being in personal command of 25,000 men at Dalien Pass.

Gen. Kuropatkin has issued an army order, insisting on the kindest and most humane treatment of Japanese prisoners and wounded, notwithstanding the tales of atrocities committed by the Japanese. The order, which directs that the same respect and honors be paid to the brave foes as if they were Russians, is most favorably commented upon by the Novoe Vreyma, which says:

"The Japanese are apparently unable to restrain their instincts. As the military operations develop, and our reverses multiply, they seem to become more savage. God grant Japanese barbarism may not influence our soldiers to give way to feelings of vengeance, but that they will preserve the good reputation which always has distinguished the Russian soldiers."

The emperor today inspected the condition of the ships of the squadron destined for the far East. High Admiral Grand Duke Alexis, Commander-in-Chief Grand Duke Vladimir and Marine Minister Avellan and many officers of the admiralty were at Cronstadt to greet the emperor, who arrived there on a yacht from Peterhof.

Rear Admiral Von Voelkersam, junior flag officer of Vice Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron, had hoisted his flag on the armored cruiser, Admiral Nakhimoff, which, with the other vessels of the fleet now in commission, fired an imperial salute.

The Admiral Nakhimoff has been greatly changed in appearance since she visited New York in 1893. Masts and rigging have given place to the fighting tops, and she has been altogether refitted as a modern fighting ship.

The emperor thoroughly examined the battleships, Alexander III, Kniaz Souvaroff, Orel and Borodino, which were moored inside the basin. He expressed himself pleased with their condition and addressed the workmen, who cheered him lustily. The emperor said he hoped the workmen would devote all their energies and duties to the patriotic cause of completing the warships at the earliest possible moment and concluded with doubling their pay for the day. The emperor did not visit Admiral Von Voelkersam's division, the Admiral Nakhimoff, Aurora, Oslabia and Sissoi Veliky being anchored outside the basin, explaining that he would visit them next week. The division, which has been engaging in target practice, will sail on a trial cruise in the Baltic.

There is no truth in the report that a portion of the Second Pacific squadron will sail from Cronstadt today for the far East.

Upon his return to St. Petersburg Minister Avellan went across the river to the Baltic works to inspect the scene of this morning's catastrophe.

SUBMARINE SINKS

Men Were Detailed For Instruction In Submarine Boats.

St. Petersburg, June 29.—The submarine boat Delfin sank at her moorings in the Neva, off the Baltic shipbuilding yard at 11 o'clock this morning, with the loss of an officer, Lieut. Cherkasoff, and twenty men. The accident was due partly to the excessive number of the crew, mostly inexperienced men, and chiefly to the unfortunate attempt of a man to escape while his comrades were screwing down the manhole.

The officers and men detailed for submarine boat instruction had assembled at the Baltic yard and three officers decided to go down in the Delfin, although her captain was not present, relying on the experience of her skilled crew. A score of novices were anxious to go with the three officers. The Delfin's nominal capacity is ten men, instead of which thirty-two entered the boat, bringing her manhole in dangerous proximity to the river level. Just then a tug passed, sending a heavy wash against the boat. As soon as the water splashed into the submarine boat's interior it created a panic among the novices and one of them tried to get out from the manhole, which the older hands were screwing down preparatory to the descent, the submerging compartment having already been opened. The water rushed in and the submerged vessel sank like a stone.

The officers and some of the men were saved by being blown up through the manhole by the rush of escaping air. The Delfin shortly afterwards was raised. Lieut. Elagusuin, who was one of the officers saved, said to the correspondent of the Associated Press:

"The tragedy was like a dream. I remember a sickening sense of suffocation from the fumes of the storage batteries, and then a rush of air and water. The next thing that I knew was that I was ashore."

The Delfin is Russia's best submarine boat. She was designed by Naval Architect Boubnoff and Capt. Beklemisheff and underwent a successful trial in 1903.

EXPECT TO SETTLE THE RATE WAR SOON.

London, June 29.—Shipping circles here confidently expected a settlement of the passenger rate war as a result of the conference to be held in London, July 7, between Lord Inverclyde, chairman of the Cunard company and Director General Ballin of the Hamburg-American line.

It is confirmed that this meeting is almost entirely due to the initiative of King Edward, whose suggestion Emepror William warmly supported.

One of Emperor William's guests at Kiel asked him if he would not cross the Atlantic.

"There is nothing I would like better," replied the emperor, "but it is too far and at present the trip takes too long. When you build a boat that will take me over in two or three days I will go."

DEMAND BY GERMANS

For Changes In the United States Customs Administration.

An Important Memorial Presented to German Officials.

Berlin, June 29.—An important memorial on the American customs administration and German trade has been presented by the league of German manufacturer to Chancellor Von Buelow, Baron Von Richthofen, secretary of foreign affairs; Herr Moeller, Russian minister of commerce and industry, and to Herr Buenz, German consul general at New York, who is now in Berlin.

The memorial is based upon material which the league collected in accordance with a resolution adopted in 1903, and was written by the Saxon manufacturer, Alfred Petschow, who was sent to the United States to collect information among importers. The league summarizes its views in the following five points:

First—The American government must be prevailed upon to accept German manufacturers' declarations, sworn to before American consuls as evidence of value in all cases.

Second—It is necessary to reintroduce the former privilege of appealing directly to the American treasury department became, under the present practice, a decision rendered by the general appraisers cannot be overthrown even when the courts find it to be erroneous.

Third—The general appraisers must be required to communicate to the importer sentenced, the penalty and duty and the reasons for the board's decisions, so that the importer can defend himself.

Fourth—The practice of classing German goods sold in the United States as consigned and subject to special legislation, merely because the invoices are made out in dollars and cents, must cease.

Fifth—Shipments of goods and samples must not be detained in public stores, as hitherto, until the buyers refuse to take the goods because of too late delivery and the samples are no longer available for the approaching season.

The memorial complains that such detention now occurs even when bond or security is offered. It concludes with reference to the importance of the German market to American exporters as being much greater than that of the American market to Germany and argues, therefore, that it is only a question of how the German government acts in the matter which will decide the response of the American government to the wishes of the German manufacturers.

SEVERE CLOUDBURST INUNDATES MANY HOUSES NEAR PITTSBURG

Buildings Were Torn From Foundations and There Were Many Narrow Escapes From Loss of Life.

Pittsburg, June 29.—Over 500 homes, business houses and schoolhouses, a short distance from Pittsburg on the Pan Handle railroad were inundated in from two to ten feet of water in Robinson's Run Hollow and the Chartier's Valley by the cloud burst there last night. Many buildings and bridges were washed away, horses and cattle were drowned and at least one life was lost. It was rumored that others had perished, but the reports have not been verified. There were many narrow escapes.

In the Bastian hotel at McDonald, Charles Hayes, the engineer, was caught in the basement. He reached safety by crawling through the transom.

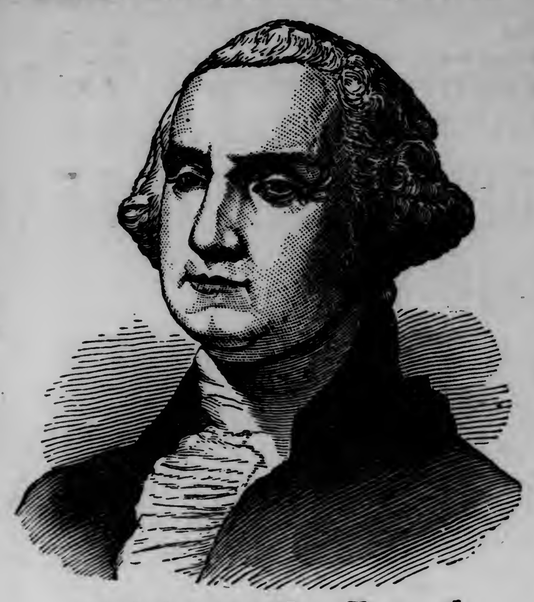

The Marchland sisters, who conduct a millinery store at McDonald, narrowly escaped death in the flood. Their store was raised from its base with the three women in it. They were rescued by Charles Cameron, who waded out to the building and carried out the sisters one by one. The home of Arnold B. Lazer was overturned by the force of the rushing water. The members of the family succeeded in reaching land by swimming and wading.

Miss Blanche Bush, a clerk in a newstand at McDonald, had a narrow escape. The store was lifted from its place and swept into the stream. Miss Bush was caught in the structure and as it floated away she screamed for help. Her cries were heard by George Hemmerling, an oil operator, who swam out to the building and rescued her. Both the electric light plants at McDonald were flooded and the town was in total darkness. The flood did not subside until daylight and many families slept out doors all night. Railroad traffic on the Pan Handle railroad through the flooded section is completely tied up, tracks washed away and many towns above and below Oakdale and Carnegie are without means of communication.

The only fatality reported so far, was the drowning of an unknown Italian, whose body was found floating in Robinson Run early today.

PROPERTY IN CITY

Result of Assessment of Real and Personal Holdings.

Net Increase of More Than Million and Three Quarters.

A net increase of more than one and a half million dollars in the valuation of the real property of the city of Duluth since 1902, is shown by the report of City Assessor Olafson, which has just been completed.

An extra force of twelve deputies have been at work during the past six weeks making the bi-annual assessment of real property, and the report was prepared this morning.

The total value of the land, buildings and other improvements amounts to $23,472,513, as compared with $21,880,745 in 1902. The following shows the detailed figures for the two years.

Lands, exclusive of buildings and improvements:

1902	$16,534,174
Increase	$ 783,520

Value of buildings and other improvements:

1902	$8,155,871
Increase	$ 922,783

Aggregate value of lands and improvements:

1902	$24,690,045
1904	26,396,348
Increase	$ 1,706,303

	1902.	1904.
Exempt	2,809,300	2,923,836

The personal property also shows a decided increase since 1903, when the last assessment was made. The following table shows the assessor's figures for 1903 and 1904 and the increase:

Assessor's figures for 1903	$6,134,623
Assessor's figures for 1904	6,422,456
Increase	$ 287,833

In 1903 the figures of the board of equalization were $3650 less than those of the assessor. The figures of the board are not yet available for 1904, but the difference is not likely to exceed that of 1903.

The total assessed value of all the property in Duluth, real and personal, for 1904 is, therefore, $29,894,969, as compared with $28,015,368, a net increase of $1,779,601.

The board of equalization is still in session. The majority of complaints have been disposed of, however, and the board will probably complete its work this afternoon and adjourn.

UNKNOWN BODY IS IDENTIFIED

Woman Found In River Was Miss Ruth Teachout.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body found in the Mississippi has been identified as that of Miss Ruth Teachout, 18 years old, residing at 4202 Third avenue, South Minneapolis. Miss Teachout left home last Saturday to attend school and had not since been seen. Her parasol, purse and hat were found on the river bank near the Tenth avenue bridge. The police are convinced that she was the victim of foul play but as yet have absolutely no clue as to her murderer. An examination of the body makes it appear that death was caused by strangulation, from the silk tie knotted about her neck, and that she was dead when thrown into the river. The girl sometime ago was said to be involved in a domestic tragedy which culminated in a suicide, but whether or not that circumstance has anything to do with the present case, the police have not yet determined.

It is expected that at least 125 teachers will take the examinations this summer.

NO NEWS FROM LOOMIS.

Washington, June 29.—It was said at the state department today that there was still no news from any of the department agents in Europe respecting the whereabouts of Frederick Kent Loomis, who disappeared from the Kaiser Wilhelm II off Plymouth. The theory most generally accepted here is that the missing man may have been concealed by some of his friends in a sanitarium until he shall have recovered from his fit of abstraction.

TO BE INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

Persons Named By Coroner as Responsible For Slocum Horror.

New York, June 29.—Through an agreement between United States District Attorney Burnett and District Attorney Jerome, the cases of the persons named yesterdaw by the coroner's jury as being responsible for the Gen. Slocum disaster, will be presented to the federal grand jury. Gen. Burnett said the evidence adduced at the coroner's inquest would be placed before the federal body tomorrow and that he would take personal charge of the matter.

Mr. Jerome said he had placed the matter in Gen. Burnett's hands because there was doubt as to the jurisdiction of the county clerk.

Several directors of the Knickerbocker Steamboat company, all of whom are charged with responsibility for the Slocum horror, today surrendered to Coroner Berry and were admitted to bail to await the action of the grand jury.

PROBABLE CAUSE

For the Removal of Beavers to Washington.

New York, June 29.—United States Commissioner Benedict in Brooklyn today ruled that there is probably cause for the removal of George W. Beavers, former superintendent of the salaries and allowance division of the postoffice department to Washington, D. C., for trial under the indictment found there. The case was formally presented to Judge Hurst; who heard arguments on the motion by Beavers' council to quash the Brooklyn indictments and for a bill of particulars and announced that he would give a decision on those motions at a later date.

WHO IS IT FOR?

Much Speculation as to Railroad Survey Toward Duluth.

Considerable Belief Exists That It Is For Soo Road.

Much speculation is being idulged in at present as to what road is surveying for a right-of-way into Superior, with the evident intention of building a road to the head of the lakes. Some of the local railroad men are inclined to believe that it is either being done by the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, known as the Soo line, or the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

Commercial Agent C. L. Kennedy, of the latter road, said this morning that he had no knowledge of his company attempting to build a new line into this territory.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul has equal rights with the Northern Pacific on the tracks which are used into Duluth by the two roads. This being the case it looks as though the Milwaukee road would have no great object in having a new line to the head of the lakes, as it is practically as well off in this respect as any road which does not absolutely have sole ownership in the situation.

But with the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie it is another story. If that company were to build into Duluth from Taylor's Falls it would have a short line between Duluth and the Twin Cities and tap a territory in between which is scarcely served by any railroad. This would give the Soo line a double advantage of getting into what is practically an exclusive territory and of having a short line between the two greatest commercial and passenger markets in Minnesota, if not the entire Northwest. It would no doubt be one of the best lines for its length as far as tapping desirable towns is concerned that there is in the Northwest, provided, of course, that it was able to make the shortest connection between the two points which would be possible, unless the line would be varied to suit topographical conditions.

There is some surmise that the company may be building to connect Duluth with its main line at Ladysmith, to feed the main line and take through business East, but why it should do this when it can get fed by the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, which is a part of the same family of roads, is a question. The two lines meet at Sault Ste. Marie.

But the line to St. Paul and Minneapolis if built, would not only give a short line and open a fine territory, but would give the company a new route to the far West for Duluth. The people who are doing the surveying have not up to this time betrayed the identity of the people whom they serve, but this does not prevent the guessing.

Another Huge One.

Since the Hamburg-American line's announcement of two new large liners the White Star people have made known the fact that they propose to inaugurate the Baltic, a leviathan which has already arrived at Liverpool. This line already has the Cedric and the Celtic, but the Baltic is still bigger, being 25 feet long, with 24,000 tons register. Her capacity for cargo is about 28,000 tons and the displacement at her load draft about 40,000 tons. She is expected to steam about 17 knots and can carry 3,000 passengers besides a crew of 370 people. The big dining room extends the full width of the ship, which is 75 feet.

Railroad Notes.

It is said that a number of the roads in the Western trunk line association are contemplating continuing the present tariff on coarse grains, which was put into effect June 11 to expire tomorrow. The tariff is for the shipment of corn and oats via the Niagara gateway, as well as the Canadian gateway, rates through the latter having been established for some time past.

A. J. Perrin, agent o fthe Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic at Superior, has been elected a director of the Duluth-Superior distributing company to succeed F. L. Bacon. The company looks after distributing the advertising matter of the railroads running into Duluth, practically all the roads holding memberships.

D. M. Collins, traveling freight agent of the Union Pacific, was here yesterday from Omaha.

On July 1 the rate on flour from the Twin Cities and New York, which has been 23 cents, will be restored to 25 cents, the old rate.

GRAND JURY BEGINS NEW BOODLE INVESTIGATION.

St. Louis, June 29.—As a result of the confession of Charles A. Gutke, the grand jury began today a new boodle investigation. Six members of the alleged combine and four members of the house of delegates, who were not members of the combine, were summoned to testify, presumably in corroboration of revelations made by Gutke. Those summoned were John J. Murrell, George F. Robertson, John Helms, Otto Schumacher and W. M. Tamblyn, all of whom have served as state's witnesses.

The former house members, not members of the combine, summoned were Paul Reiss, Leon Parker, Charles W. Holtcamp and Lafe Sturdevant.

Impaired Digestion

May not be all that is meant by dyspepsia now, but it will be if neglected.

The uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, sourness of the stomach, and disagreeable belching may not be very bad now, but they will be if the stomach is suffered to grow weaker.

Dyspepsia is such a miserable disease that the tendency to it should be given early attention. This is completely overcome by

LYNCHING IS FRUSTRATED

South Haven, Mich., June 29.—An attempt has been made to lynch Charles L. Allison, a well-known citizen and Sunday school worker, who was arrested yesterday on the charge of assaulting 4-year-old Edith Secor. When arrested Allison was taken to the city hall, where he was placed under guard of six men heavily armed. A crowd surrounded the building and several demonstrations were made, but the doors of the building were locked and they could not get in.

The demonstration continued during the evening and early today fifty citizens went to the door, demanding admittance. They shouted that they were prepared to break down the door and lynch the prisoner. The officers on guard telephoned for help. A posse which the sheriff had sworn in during the afternoon arrived soon after and a fierce fight ensued in front of the city hall and it was over an hour before the men were driven away. Many were severely injured, but it is not thought there were any fatalities.

The prisoner was spirited away through a basement door and taken to Paw Paw.

SOLDIERS ARE CALLED HOME

Winona, Minn., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The members of Company C, of Hudson, Wis., of the Third regiment of Wisconsin militia, who since last Sunday have been scouring the country across the river from here in the hope of running down the murderer of Sheriff Harris of St. Croix county, Wis., who was killed at Eau Claire a week ago Sunday were called home this morning. A most thorough search for many miles of the territory where Outlaw Smith has been supposed to be in hiding has been made, the militia being aided with bloodhounds, and the growing belief that in some manner the man has eluded his pursuers and crossed the river to Minnesota, where he has made good his escape, is understood to be the reason the militia has been called home.

DELEGATES LEAVE

Go Down to Capital to Be In Thick of Fight.

Collins Workers Try Hard to Land Cook County Delegation.

Senator E. B. Hawkins, Collector Levi M. Willcuts, County Auditor Odin Halden and a number of other faithful Republicans, who are delegates to the state convention at St. Paul tomorrow, left this morning for the Saintly City, and a large number of others are going down this afternoon and tonight, including some of the range delegates. Most of the latter remained in this city last night.

The Cook county delegation will be among those going down tonight from this city. The fact that the governorship contest is so close has led to extra efforts on the part of the Collins people to try to work the Cook county delegates into voting for their candidate.

Local Collins missionaries were busy at the St. Louis this morning trying to convert Charles Johnson, of Grand Marais, who holds the delegation from Cook county in the hollow of his hand, but he merely met thir overtures with a courteous reception, without promising anything. The Cook county delegation is uninstructed, as far as the convention there is concerned, although the convention endorsed Dunn and the delegates are supposed to ratify this action by giving their five votes for the Princeton candidate.

A number of people other than delegates are using the low rate on the railroads, one fare for the round trip, to go to St. Paul, but the roads are not finding any extra equipment necessary.

Several Collins workers have also gone to St. Paul to endeavor to swing things for the St. Cloud jurist. Among these are E. L. Millar, Simon Clark, A. Snyder, T. S. Wood, F. C. Talboys, of Eveleth, and F. B. Rossom, of Virginia.

CONTINUE TO ADVANCE

The Japanese Troops Are Rapidly Moving to the Northward.

Hai Cheng, June 29.—The Japanese are continuing to advance from Siu Yen and Feng Wang Cheng. Gen. Oku is also moving north from Senu Chen. Gen. Samsonoff is contesting his progress, but is not offering serious resistance. The Japanese force advancing from the Mo Tien pass (?) is composed of at least three regiments and ten batteries of artillery.

A force of equal strength is advancing from Fen Shui pass, on the high road to Liao Yang. The flank move on the latter is supported by a column marching from Saimatza.

St. Petersburg, June 29.—A report has just reached the Associated Press correspondent that the Russian ironclad, Netron Menca, rammed the Russian battleship, Navarin, at Cronstadt, this afternoon. The circumstances and the extent of damages have not yet been ascertained.

BAPTIST DIVINE FINED $250 FOR AN ASSAULT.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 29.—Rev. J. B. Holly, a prominent Baptist divine of this state and one of the editors of the Southern Baptist and Baptist Witness, was fined $250 in criminal court today. He was charged with assaulting Rev. W. A. Hobson, pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, and also an editor on the Southern Baptist. Rev. Holly struck the Jacksonville divine in the face several times and bruised him severely. The matter is to come up at a meeting of the council of the First Baptist church tonight. The trouble arose from a dispute as to the management of the Southern Baptist and Baptist Witness.

EDUCATORS SLOW

World's Fair Attractions Prove Too Much For Them.

St. Louis, June 29.—When the second days session of the forty-third annual convention of the National Educational association was called to order it was found that the attraction of the World's Fair had drawn away a considerable number of the educators, and the attendance was somewhat diminished as compared with that of yesterday.

The election of officers will be held tomorrow. No candidates for the presidency have been announced, as there is an unwritten law in the association which prevents a candidate from successfully seeking the presidency. Heretofore, those who have worked for the honor have been defeated and the mantle has fallen on unanticipating shoulders. Consequently none are announcing themselves as candidates.

The indications however, point to the election of W. H. Maxwell, superintendent of schools of Greater New York. According to present plans, it is stated, Superintendent Maxwell's name will be presented by New York to the nominating committee.

Owing to the dilatory arrival of educators, the meeting was delayed almost an hour in opening.

The first speaker was Captain Percy Adams, in charge of the British educational exhibit at the exposition. He discussed the topic "Popular Education in England." He reviewed the growth of education in England, saying that in 1876, compulsory education was established and now education throughout England is one of the ordinary phases of English life.

O. J. Kern, superintendent of schools, Winnebago county, Illinois, spoke of "Educational Possibilities for Country Child in the United States." He said in part:

"The country school of its kind should be just as good as the best city school for the most favored child. It should not be the same kind of school with the same course of instruction. There is a difference of environment which must be considered. The school training should relate more to the daily life. Let us give the country school all the credit possible for its work of the past. It has done a great work, and will yet do a greater work. But there is room for vast improvement.

"There are two great movements, at least, now operating in the new education for the country child, if it may be called a new education, which gives us a glimpse of the educational possibilities. The first the school, and the home, and the second has to do with the environment of the has to do with the spirit of the child, child, a consideration of the farm and its interests as educational factors.

"By the awakening of the spirit, I mean that sul-culture that will enable the child to thirst for and enjoy the best of the civilization of the age. It is the country child's right to be brought into contact with the best music, literature and art. There should be no discrimination between the child living in the fields and the child living on the boulevard in this respect. There is plenty of hard work on the farm, much that it is necessary perhaps, and no insignificant factor in the education of the individual to a life of usefulness. But the child's education can impart a spiritual force that will give freedof from the slavery of toil. This spiritualizing force that will lead to more attractive farms and comfortable homes, better reading in the homes has its beginning in the improvement of the material environment of the country school, by this is meant the outdoor art movement for more attractive school grounds. The indoor art movement is bringing more attractive school rooms for the country child. There are great possibilities in the library movement.

"The course of study for the country child should be more practical. The things surrounding the child on the farm should be utilized in a system of training that will result in greater efficiency for life's work.

"In the creation of this more rational system of education and thus creating a new ideal with reference to the farm and country life four powerful agencies are now at work—the farmer's institute, agricultural college extension work through organizations of boys and girls in experimental clubs and home culture clubs, the educational excursion to the agricultural college and experiment station, and the consolidation of country schools, the organization of the district schools so as to secure better elementary instruction and at the same time bring the possibilities of secondary education to the great mass of country children."

SMUGGLERS ARE CAUGHT.

Goods Valued at Thousands Hidden In Ship.

New York, June 29.—One of the most important seizures by custom officers at this port was made yesterday, when searchers for smuggled goods found a false bulkhead in the forward part of the steamship Idrawdi.

Behind the false bulkhead was a compartment packed with smuggled articles, amounting in value to about $800 according to the estimate by the appraisers. There were forty-two cases, containing Chinese and Japanese curios, three sets of magnificent screens, richly embroidered and lined insides with heavy China silk; four boxes of ostrich feathers and a score of other cases containing laces, handkerchiefs and carvings in ivory and wood.

Near the bulkhead was the carpenter's room, and therein a tool chest which the agents had cursorily inspected, but which they now thought warranted a more thorough search. It did. Beneath the tools were found more screens, fitted with costly ebony frames.

DEMENTED TRAMP

Poisons Section Hand and Starts a Fire.

Butte, Mont., June 29.—Jack Gannon, a section hand on the Great Northern railway near Portal, Forty miles north of Butte, was almost instantly killed by a draught of prussic acid administered by a hobo who is believed by the authorities to be demented. The hobo stopped at the bunkhouse of the section hands and asked for something to eat. Food was furnished and he said he would return from Wickes, a nearby station, with some liquor, which he would divide with all hands.

When the tramp returned he offered the section hands a drink from his flask. Gannon was the first to accept the offer and no sooner had he drank than an ashy pallor overspread his countenance and he rolled over in agony, expiring at the feet of his comrades.

While the workmen were endeavoring to resusciate Gannon, the hobo grabbed an oil can and after saturating a bed with the liquid, set fire to it and started to run. The section hands pursued and caught him.

AIRSHIP TAKEN BACK TO PARIS FOR REPAIRS.

St. Louis, June 29.—Charles F. Morrison, of Sugar Run, Pa., who is held on the charge that he cut the Santos-Dumont airship, said today that he was innocent. The authorities have secured little evidence against him except that he frequented the airship sheds for several days before the damage was done.

The damaged gas bag was put back into its box today and will be shipped at once to Paris to be repaired. It is said Mr. Dumont will leave today or tomorrow for Paris, taking the gas bag with him, and will return to the United States probably within six weeks, this being contingent upon the successful repairing of the gas bag. The boxes of machinery will be left here in the meantime.

OBJECTS TO MINERS.

Colorado Springs Orders Deported Men Away.

Colorado Springs, June 29.—Another train load of deported men has been sent out from Victor with orders to unload the men at Colorado Springs, but upon the arrival of the train here Capt. Moore, in charge, was met by Chief of Police Reynolds and a force of policemen and ordered to not permit the men to leave the train. The train is being held, awaiting the result of efforts on the part of the military and police to arrange for transportation for the men to Palmer Lake or Denver.

TALKS ON BOLTING

He Will Open the Battle at St. Louis on "Fourth."

New York, June 29.—A Lincoln, Neb., dispatch from James Creelman to the World says: Seated on the veranda of his handsome brick and stone residence this morning Mr. Bryan watched the weeds growing in his big alfalfa field and listened to the meadow larks and mocking birds singing in the half-grown trees. He was resting for the great struggle at St. Louis. There was a haggard look in his eyes and his mighty jaws were set hard.

His glance rested for a moment on Mrs. Bryan bending over a brood of white chickens, and on his daughter, Grace, frolicking about a bed of red and yellow flowers, with a black poodle frisking at her heels, and then swept the landscape, beautiful with rye and oats and sprouting corn. For an hour at least the political crusader was lost in the farmer.

Then came a friend to ask him what his plans for the coming national convention were. He would not utter a word save to say that he would do his best to secure a real Democratic platform and prevent the nomination of Judge Parker "or any other man of that type."

When he was asked whether he would bolt the ticket if Mr. Parker were nominated, Mr. Bryan replied by reading the editorial which he printed in the Omaha World-Herald on Feb. 26, 1896: "Is Bolting Ever Justifiable, and If So, When?"

"The World-Herald holds that the individual members of a party at all times reserve the right to vote against the nominee of a party and to abandon his party entirely, whenever, in his judgment, his duty to his country requires it.

"He may abandon the party temporarily, as for instance when an unfit candidate is nominated—this is recognized by the fact that newspaper and speakers discuss the character of the candidates and point out their fitness or unfitness. The voter may abandon his party permanently either when he himself changes his position on a paramount public question or when his party changes its position. The strength of party organization is found in the fact that men do not like to repudiate a nominee or leave their party for light or trivial causes; in fact, the tendency to vote a straight ticket is so great that men require the strongest of reasons to justify desertions, and yet the right to bolt or abandon is essential unless man is to become a mere machine and unless the party machinery is to become omnipotent. The desire to draw voters to the party makes the party careful to indorse the wisest policies, and the fear that men may bolt is the most effective protection against bad nominations. If the members of a party agree upon the important issues, difference of opinion on minor matters is of little consequence, but difference of opinion upon the questions that are for the time being paramount, always has destroyed, always will destroy and always ought to destroy party harmony. It may be said to contemplate the disturbance of harmony or the disintegration of a party, but until human nature is changed and our form of government abandoned such things must be contemplated.

"Can a national convention harmonize the discordant elements of the Democratic party? Impossible. Suppose that the advocates of bimetallism control the national convention and nominate a free silver Democrat upon a free coinage platform, will Cleveland, Carlisle, Olney, Morgan, et al., support the ticket? Of course not. If to continue Mr. Cleveland's financial policy is to declare war against the common people, what friend of the common people would be willing to enlist in such a warfare, even at the command of his party? If abandonment of party is ever justifiable the voter must determine for himself when the time for abandonment arrives. When should he decide? The proper time if not the only time is after the party has adopted its platform and named its candidate. Until that time he does not know whether he can rely upon it to secure the government which he regards as good and the legislation which he regards as necessary. Does participation in a primary or convention bind the voter to support a policy which he considers ruinous? If he tries through his party organization to save his country and fails, must he then take a hand in its destruction?"

After reading this editorial Mr. Bryan said: "That is my position today. I do not see how any one can say a word against it."

Mr. Bryan has been invited by President Francis to make a speech at the St. Louis exposition on the Fourth of July, so that the opening note of the convention battle will probably be sounded two days before the convention meets. From that time on he will force the fighting.

Apparently he has no idea of what his strength in the convention will be. Even if Hearst delegates were joined to his own small personal following and enough scattering votes to make up a third of the convention were captured that would not serve his purpose. His main plan seems to be to concentrate all his strength on the platform fight. In that way he may secure the assistance of Parker delegates who favor a radical platform and trust to his temporary association with such delegates to get into the fight over the nominations.

It is evident that Mr. Bryan has received little encouragement to demand the specific reaffirmation of the Kansas City platform. He does not boldly insist upon that point, as he did a few weeks ago. But he points to reaffirmation as the easiest way out. If an entirely new platform is written it will be compared plank by plank with the Kansas City and Chicago platforms and the comparison will afford foundation for the charge that the party has abandoned its position. Upon that issue it is believed enough of the uninstructed delegates can be persuaded that Judge Parker represents cowardly and plutocratic interests to make his defeat certain. The Bryan men ignore the fact that an overwhelming majority of the Democratic state conventions have refused to commit the party again to the Kansas City doctrines.

Mr. Bryan resents any attempt to draw his views regarding the proper nominee for president. He hopes to be recognized as the leader of all the anti-Parker forces and to indorse the candidates of one faction would be to destroy his influence with some other faction. He is known to be bitterly opposed to Gorman. His staunchest followers in Nebraska are not willing to support Hearst. Many of them favor Charles A. Towne and nearly all of them want to vote for Mr. Bryan himself. There seems to be no unifying idea in the anti-Parker movement except of a general opposition to a conservative course in the convention.

Every attempt to count delegates and figure out a vote has resulted in a failure. Mr. Bryan says frankly that he has no idea of how the forces will divide when the test comes. His idea is that a fight must be made for a platform, and that it will be easy enough to agree upon a candidate to fit it. Beyond that he refuses to express an opinion.

There can be no doubt that the fight over the platform is to be used as a means of dividing the Parker forces. That is the breach through which the Bryan men expect to enter into control of the situation. They are counting upon the united support of the Hearst delegates, although they freely say that Mr. Hearst himself has no chance. Mr. Bryan declines to commit himself on this point, and, with some show of feeling, he insists that he cannot be justly accused of being evasive or cunning because he will not name a candidate and other duty which the commanding officer organizers and invite the charge that he seeks to be a political dictator.

THEY BREAK EVEN.

Game Apiece For Superior and Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Colts and Maroons broke even in the double-header played here yesterday. The afternoon game was a pitchers' battle between Shaw and Bartos, in which the latter had a shade the better of it, but lost the game through the untimely error of Howard in the seventh inning, which let in the only run of the game.

In the second game, played in the evening, Kilroy was hit hard, but kept the safe ones well scattered and but three runs were scored off his delivery. Green deserved to have a shut-out to his credit, but the visitors were allowed another unearned run.

TAKE ONE APIECE.

Crookston and Fargo Also Have Even Break.

Crookston, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two hotly-contested games played here yesterday afternoon between the Crookston and Fargo teams resulted in an even break, Fargo taking the first and Crookston the second.

The first game was a slugging match, in which the home team outbatted the visitors but failed to land on the ball at oppertune moments.

In the second game Miller pitched gilt-edged ball, allowing Werden's men but two hits. He was given perfect support and a shut-out resulted.

The Crookston team left for Winnipeg last evening, having closed its home series. In the thirteen games played ten were won by the Crooks.

Duluth, Superior, Grand Forks and Fargo will have home games on the holiday.

Crookston won ten out of the thirteen games played at home. It was one of the prettiest rallies ever seen in the Northern league.

Twenty thousand people should witness the six games played on July 4, if the weather is favorable.

* * *

Superior seems to do better work away from home than in Bugville. The Colts have broken even so far.

The race in the Northern league at present is about as close as any in the country. Duluth is still within reach of the others, and Winnipeg is not yet hopelessly in the rear.

In the last double-header between the Duluth and Grand Forks teams the Tigers won both games. It is an unfavorable omen.

SYRACUSE WON

Freshman and 'Varsity Eight-Oared Race at Poughkeepsie.

Wisconsin Was Never a Factor In Either Event.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 29.—Cornell's supremacy is broken and the Syracuse men are in a state of hilarious delight, for in two out of the three races on the Poughkeepsie course yesterday the only races in which she was entered, the crews of Syracuse snatched victory from the crews of Cornell. In the mile eight-oar 'varsity race and in the freshmen two mile, eight-oar race the Syracuse oarsmen won by handsome margins, coming out of obscurity so marked that the friends of Syracuse could not find takers for bets at 1 to 2. Cornell won the four-oar 'varsity race with ease. Wisconsin, which was thought to threaten all competitors in the four-oar and 'varsity races, was never a factor, coming in next to last in the four-oar race and last in the 'varsity.

Columbia, "the dark horse," whose mysterious doings up stream have led to a good deal of solicitude on the part of all her competitors, did well in the four-oared race in which she came in second, though she made but a feeble showing in the others, coming in last in the freshman race and fourth in the 'varsity. No records were broken. Indeed, the time was slower than for three years in two of the races and more than a minute and a half slower than last year's 'varsity race.

The weather was on the whole nearly perfectfor racing. Dashes of rain marred the enjoyment of the spectators somewhat and a rather brisk southerly breeze toward the close of the day made the water somewhat rough, to which slow time may be attributed.

Cornell led off at the pistol shot in characteristic style, but lost her lead almost immediately to Syracuse, which, with a quick stroke, pulled out ahead with a lead which they never lost during the race and which was increased to five lengths at the finish. Once near the two-mile mark, Cornell, in a fine burst of speed, did press her sturdy rival on almost even terms. The real race was between the other four crews. Wisconsin for a time fought hard for third place, but after the second mile she fell steadily out of it and finished rather badly at the tail of the procession.

Cornell took the lead in the first race—the four-oared—soon after the start, passing Georgetown, whose crew had gone to the front at the pistol. This race was never in doubt, Cornell pulling along with a strong, easy, almost leisurely stroke which opened up the water between her stern and the bow of her nearest competitor until there were five and a quarter lengths of lead.

It was in the freshman race, the second of the day, that Syracuse first showed her true form. Cornell srang into the lead at the word, but Syracuse quickly caught up with her and for the first time to the bridge it was as pretty a fight as any rowing enthusiast could wish to see. Passing under the bridge, Cornell and Syracuse crew forged ahead and as the last half mile was entered she had open water astern of her and was gaining.

Folowing are the summaries:

'Varsity four-oared race, two miles—Won by by Cornell. Time, 10:53 3-5. Columbia, 11:12 1-5; Pennsylvania, 11:15 3-5; Wisconsin, 11:18 2-5; Georgetown, 11:34 2-5.

Freshman eight-oared race, two miles—Won by Syracuse. Time, 10:01; Cornell, 10:12 2-5; Pennsylvania, 10:18 3-5; Columbia, 10:28½.

'Varsity eight-oared race, four miles—Won by Syracuse. Time, 20:22 3-5. Cornell, 20:31 1-5; Pennsylvania, 20:52 4-5; Columbia, 20:45 2-5; Georgetown, 20:52 3-5; Wisconsin, 21:01 1-5.

GEORGE LENNON TAKES A HAND

St. Paul Manager Butts Into Legal Fight at Toledo.

Toledo, Ohio, June 29.—George E. Lennon, owner of the St. Paul American Association club, last evening before Judge Barber in the common pleas court, secured an injunction restraining T. J. Bryce, of Columbus, and Harry J. Wylie, of Toledo, from taking or attempting to take the management and control of the Toledo American Association ball club or the receipts and profits accruing to the club.

Lennon alleges that Wylie, who owned a half interest in the Toledo club, gave him an option on his interest the consideration named being $6000, and that when he sought to execute the option Wylie had already sold his interest to T. J. Bryce, chief owner of the Columbus club. Lennon deposited $6000 in court and asks that Wylie be compelled to transfer his half interest to him.

A TORNADO KILLS TWO

Holmesville, Neb., June 29.—A tornado near this place yesterday killed two persons, fatally injured a third and caused the severe injury of five others.

The dead: Two children of R. J. Harris, 6 and 9 years old.

Fatally hurt: Mrs. R. J. Harris. Injured: R. J. Harris, badly bruised on head and body; Mrs. Harris' mother, aged lady, leg broken, body mangled, contusion on head, may not recover; three children of Mr. and Mrs. Harris, severe but not serious.

The tornado followed a sultry afternoon and came in the shape of a funnel-shaped cloud. It struck several buildings before reaching the Harris home. At the latter place part of the family reached a cellar in safety, but Mrs. Harris and her son Lewis and a 6-year-old daughter were unable to escape.

Great damage was done to crops and several farm houses were destroyed, but the occupants sought safety in cellars. In Holmesville several buildings were blown to pieces and others unroofed, but no casualties are reported.

Beatrice, Neb., June 29.—The worst hail and wind storm in the history of this town occurred late yesterday. Thousands of windows were broken and a number of roofs shattered. Crops suffered greatly. No one was hurt.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

As the result of a rowboat capsizing in the Allegheny river at Pittsburg Tuesday, Henry Hilliston and Ernest Halbey were drowned and two companions had a narrow escape from a similar fate.

The Rev. Sam P. Jones, when asked concerning the mention of himself for the vice presidential nomination on the Prohibition ticket, said: "I ain't got time for or the job like that. I can sit on the front end of my own shebang and do my own driving, and like that better than crawling up behind some other fellow."

The anti-Wolcott wing of the Republican party in Colorado captured control of the state central committee Tuesday and by a vote of 66 to 49 postponed the election of a new chairman to succeed D. B. Fairly until the state convention meets. The state convention will meet in Denver Sept. 14 to nominate candidates for governor and other offices.

Walter R. Miles, of Pacific college, Newberg, Ore., won the first prize of $100 in the Prohibition oratorical contest, which was held at Tomlinson hall, Indianapolis, Tuesday night. Miss Mamie White, of Wheaton college, Wheaton, Ill., was awarded the second prize of $50.

The Ohio supreme court has reversed the decision of the circuit court, which granted a new trial to Alfred R. Knapp, the Hamilton, Ohio, wife murderer, and fixed Aug. 19 as the day on which he shall be electrocuted. The circuit court granted the motion for a new trial on the ground that Knapp's confession should not have been admitted as evidence.

After ten minutes' deliberation a jury at Coldwater, Mich., found Katie Lundwick not guilty of the murder of her husband John, to whom she had been married but a few months. The thirteen days' trial was sensational in the extreme.

The bureau of labor is making an investigation of the labor difficulties in Colorado, under the act of the bureau which charges the commission of labor to investigate the causes of and the facts relating to controversies between employers and employes.

One of the attorneys in the Leiter case said that the total amount of the estate left by Mr. Leiter would approximate $18,000,000.

CANNOT TAX INDIANS

Unless They Become Citizens Is Government's Contention.

Missoula, Mont., June 29.—The taking of testimony has begun in the case of the United States against Treasurer Daniel J. Heyfron, of Missoula county, to restrain him from collecting taxes from alleged wards of the government living on the Flathead reservation.

The contention of the county in the case is that the Indians in question are not members of the tribes on the reservation, but residents of the county and therefore subject to taxation. The United States holds that they are wards of the government and under the United States law Indians are not subject to taxation unless they become citizens. The attempt to impose taxes on the Indians was the cause of the recent threat and outbreaks of the Flatheads eight months ago.

REVOLUTIONISTS WIN BATTLE AT TUPAMBAE.

New York, June 29.—Dispatches from Bage, a Brazilian town near the Uruguayan frontier report, says a Herald dispatch from Buenos Ayres, Argentine, that a courier sent by Saravia has arrived there with a report of the battle at Tupambae, Uruguay. The fighting began on Wednesday of last week and continued the following day.

The government forces had 600 killed and 8000 wounded, while the revolutionists suffered 100 killed and 600 wounded. The revolutionists captured a big quantity of war supplies.

Another dispatch from Bage says the rear of the revolutionary force under Mariano Saravia, brother of the leader of the revolution, is pursuing the government troops under Gen. Bena Vaente. The revolutionists occupy excellent positions.

THE ROYAL ARCANUM

Annual Banquet at Commercial Club Handsome Affair.

The Royal Arcanum held its annual banquet last evening in the Commercial club rooms. The event was the postponed celebration of Royal Arcanum day, a national affair in the order which should take place on June 23.

Three tables were crowded with guests, among whom were many women. The guests of honor were Grand Regent Frank L. Palmer and Grand Secretary George T. Hughes, of Minneapolis, and Grand Guide M. J. Mullin, of Duluth. The tables on which the banquet was spread were decorated with ferns, carnations and American Beauty roses. Flaaten's orchestra furnished the music.

Dr. Charles M. Wilson acted as toastmaster, and after the banquet a very entertaining program was given. George T. Hughes, Frank L. Palmer and Judge Cant gave short addresses of much interest to those assembled.

Judge Ensign was to have spoken, but because of the lateness of the hour, asked to be excused. The orchestra played "Hiawatha," Mrs. Emily Ellis Woodward and Louis Dworschak sang solos, with Max Obendorfer at the piano. H. P. Penner gave Joaquin Miller's "Columbus and His Sailors" and a satire on "Macbeth."

The members feel that the Commercial club did itself proud, the arrangements being of the finest. The program was given in the main reception room of the club.

SERIOUS COLLISION OF TRAINS AT CHASKA.

Chaska, Minn., June 29.—During a heavy wind and rain storm last night, the local freight train and the "extra" working between Chaska and Eden Prairie collided resulting in the probable fatal injury to O. B. Segafoss, a workman of Excelsior, Minn., whose legs were cut off below the knee, left arm broken and head badly bruised. Ernest Barr, of Waconia, Minn., had his chest crushed in and arm broken, and C. C. Hewlitt, fireman of the local freight had his collar bone broken and received internal injuries.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds to be unequaled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentonville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had Bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all Lung and Throat troubles, Consumption, Pneumonia and Grip. Guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

RIOT AT COLFAX, IND.

Colfax, Ind., June 29.—In a riot between Italian laborers living in a box car and local characters, Maurice Lane, a spectator, was stabbed, Bert Kickerson was cut with a knife and Joseph Ostein, an Italian, had his skull fractured with a stone. Officers armed themselves and with a physician visited the Italian camp. While there the camp was attacked by friends of the two injured men, who returned for revenge. Many shots were fired but no one was struck.

COAL MINE ON FIRE.

Billings, Mont., June 29.—The Brenning coal mine, three miles south of Sheridan, Wyo., is on fire. No lives have been lost. No effort has been made to smother the flames, and if the fire continues the mine will be so badly damaged that it cannot be repaired in several months.

WHAT WILL BE THE OUTCOME?

Great interest is now centered in the struggle for the Republican nomination for governor. Will Dunn or Collins win, or will a third man be selected on account of the bitter warfare that is raging between the managers and supporters of these two aspirants? On the face of the returns from the county conventions, Dunn has a lead over the other candidates, but whether he has sufficient strength to get control of the convention and capture the nomination is doubtful. His friends say he has, but the Collins men dispute this and some even assert that Collins has enough delegates in sight to give him the victory.

There may be a bolt at the state convention, and two tickets may be put in the field, as has been done by the Wisconsin Republicans. There are nine counties sending contesting delegations—including Hennepin with 113 votes and Ramsey with 67 votes—and the settlement of these contests opens the way for a very bitter fight that may wind up with one of the factions walking out of the state convention.

The convention meets at St. Paul tomorrow, but delegates and many other Republicans have been flocking to the state capital since last night, and the battle is now in progress.

GETTING READY TO SHIFT.

While the Republican platform does not promise anything definite to the Filipinos, Mr. Root's speech delivered to the convention does contain an outline of the probable policy of the Roosevelt administration and the Republican party. He says:

"None can foretell the future, but there seems no reasonable cause to doubt that under the policy already effectually inaugurated, the institutions already implanted and the processes already begun in the Philippine islands, if these be not repressed and interrupted, the Philippine people will follow in the footsteps of the people of Cuba; that more slowly, indeed, because they are not so advanced, yet as surely, they will grow in capacity for self-government, and, receiving power as they grow in capacity, will come to bear substantially such relations to the people of the United States as do now the people of Cuba, differing in details as conditions and needs differ, but the same in proinciple and the same in beneficent results."

It is evidently the purpose of the party leaders to hang onto the islands a little while longer in the hope that something may turn up that will justify their purchase and permanent reteniton, but if on the other hand public sentiment continues to grow in favor of giving them up because they are a useless expense, the party leaders will be in a position to suddenly discover that the Filipinos are capable of self-government and grant them independence.

In case the latter happens to be the outcome the G. O. P. will then be in a position to claim that it was the original Filipino independence party and never had any intention of permanent retention of the islands as a colony. The Herald does not claim special prophetic powers, but confidently expects some Republican member of congress to make that claim before the presidential election of 1908.

GRADE VS. HIGH SCHOOLS.

There are comparatively few public school pupils that ever reach the high school. In fact a high school education would be of little practical benefit to a large majority of people and would be only a waste of time in their case because they are not fitted by nature for higher learning and because their chosen work does not require such an education. The majority of boys could better improve their time and themselves by learning the details of a trade or other occupation than in taking a high school course, or in attending college. Although there is always room at the top, there is really room for only a few and their inner nature will prompt those few to ascend the ladder of fame. A man should always climb as high as he can with the top as a possible goal, but the bulk must eventually be satisfied with a position on the lower rungs.

For these reasons the grades in the public schools should receive more attention than they do. As the bulk of children are educated there, the best of talent should be required in grade teachers.

In New York as in other parts of the country there are educators, teachers and some others who think the New York schools are the very finest in existence and the best that ever was anywhere. Yet there is widespread dissent among the people. The New York Times, in seconding Mayor McClellan's demand for more school houses, says:

"There is a belief among the intelligent students of our educational system that there is relatively too much expansion of the public schools at the high school end and too little at the primary end. Too large a share of the appropriations is expended in carrying out educational things which, however desirable in themselves, are not proper to be taught at the expense of the taxpayer; and that the essentials of the common school course are, if not neglected, less thoroughly taught than the public interest demands. Doubtless all knowledge is useful, but some kinds of knowledge are more useful than others, and it would require no very profound argument to establish the contention that the pedagogic tendency is steadily away from the practical and as steadily in the direction of a highly embroidered cirriculum. The board of educaton has been the subject of a criticism constantly increasing in sharpness by reason of its tendency to unduly magnify the neglible while neglecting the necessary.

"The mayor is right in insisting that facilities for elementary educaton are the prime essentials of a public school system. How far education should be carried at public expense is another question. If the mayor does not feel called upon to discuss it at the moment it is probably because it is not quite relevant to the more important subject of elementary education."

The Herald believes that the best male educator obtainable should be in charge of the primary department of every grade school, and that the next best should be teaching in the seventh and eighth grades. It is at both ends of the graded school course that the important work is done for the big majority of pupils and it is there that the people's money should be most liberally used.

Perhaps the average high school is none too good, but relatively it is better equipped for teaching talent and receives more attention than the grade schools. This should not be.

WHY THEY ARE HOPEFUL.

Writing to the Toronto Sun concerning the political situation in the United States, Professor Goldwin Smith says:

"The writer has reason to believe that the Democratic leaders are hopeful. But he fails to discern on what their hope definitely rests. One man there is in their party who has a hold upon the popular mind, and has shown himself fit to govern. That man is Grover Cleveland. But Cleveland positively declines to run, and if he did, Bryan would cut his throat. It is, on the whole, a rather sorry spectacle."

The reason that the Democratic leaders are hopeful is because they expect the St. Louis convention to nominate both a sensible and a safe man for president and promulgate a platform that will unite the discordant elements of the party. They expect and hope, however, that the man they nominate will be of such character as to offer proof to the world that the party considers itself greater and wiser than any one member of it.

The Democratic party not only wants a man for president who is fit to govern, but who is amenable to reason and who will be governed by the overwhelming sentiment of his own party. It wants no boss—no ruler. It wants a man firm to uphold the law, but it also wants one who will not block the passage of laws that the party demands. The president of the United States stands in a dual role. He is not only an executive but a legislator and when his word is finally given it is the unwritten law in thousands of cases which come up where there is no law to regulate.

The Democratic party want somebody in that chair who can be depended upon at all times to represent the popular will and especially the will of the Democratic party. That is why they look forward with hope. They recognize the fact that one absolutist is already a candidate for the presidency. They will probably avoid the mistake of nominating another. Certainly it is not because of the probability of the nomination of Grover Cleveland that the Democratic leaders are hopeful.

THE LAW'S SUPREMACY.

Side by side are two leading editorials in the Brooklyn Eagle of Saturday, June 25, one entitled "Grover Cleveland's Way," and the other entitled "Latin Lawlessness." The Eagle highly commends the ex-president's course in the A. R. U. strike, and, comparing it with Roosevelt's, says:

"The Republican administration, a while ago, had a railroad strike brought before its attention, and forced a settlement of it, or a three-years' truce between the parties to it, which will soon expire. It was a forced truce. * * * Eventually, ours will have to be a government of law, not of devices, an administration of law and not of compromises with lawlessness. Grover Cleveland's way will have to become the habitual and the vindicated way of all administrations, if our federal system, of even if our federal forms, are to be virtually preserved."

So far, so good. Speaking of the stoning of a policeman by Italians in the "Little Italy" quarter of New York last Friday the Eagle said: "One seldom sees a drunken Italian, and although beggary is common in Italy, an Italian beggar on our streets is as rare as a Chinese mendicant. Until they join the unions the Italians are tractable and industrious."

See?

Continuing, the Eagle says:

"But the new-comers make no effort to control one another or themselves."

Now note carefully how the Eagle would deal with this problem so that the supremacy of the law shall be maintained. It says:

"We would like to make it clear that assaults on life, privilege and property cannot go on. Some of those who rioted in a public street because a carriage and four people use it as a thoroughfare would do wisely to consider how peace and safety were secured in New Orleans when the Italian element became obstreperous there a few years ago. The makers of trouble were taken from the jail by the citizens and hanged."

So it will be seen that while the Italian immigrant is a fairly good fellow until he joins a labor union, then he become a thing of evil at once. And when he does get bad and commits an ordinary misdemeanor the thing to do is for the good people of the United States to take him out and hang him.

Compared with that, of course, Mr. Roosevelt's efforts to settle a labor strike peaceably and honorably is a terrible crime against the law.

The Brooklyn Eagle pretends to be a friend of the Democratic party. If the Democrats it reaches are of the same disposition as those of the West it is making votes for Roosevelt every day.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

The decline and decay of Great Britain has already commenced. The proposal to resort to military conscription is but another step in the downward scale.

* * *

Since Dowie is for Roosevelt, the president has nothing more to worry about. While the prophet says he will flop if the Democrats nominate a better man, that is manifestly impossible.

* * *

Carter Harrison says President Roosevelt cannot be defeated. Had the Democrats of Illinois exhibited the wisdom of turning their state convention over to Carter, there might now be a different story to tell.

* * *

Republican organs may yet have opportunity to take back some of the generous praise they have recently bestowed upon Grover Cleveland.

* * *

Will Dunn be done or will Collins get his callin's?

* * *

The indictment of owners and crew of the fated steamer Slocum will no doubt lead to the placing of responsibility for the recent deplorable disaster where it properly belongs. The people of New York have evidently become tired of being asked by lawbreakers: "What are you going to do about it?"

HOTEL GOSSIP

As a rule a person can get a larger proportionate quantity of an article for a higher price, but it is very seldom that the price list of any concern shows a small amount of one thing to cost actually more than a larger amount. But such is the case, as was determined by a man in Duluth not long since.

M. R. Howell, traveling sales agent for a Cleveland paint house, is the man.

"I was never so much surprised in my life," said he, "as when I had the experience. I was in Duluth over Sunday and had occasion to invite some friends out to Sunday dinner. I had secured some nice fresh brook trout on the Saturday evening before and left them with one of the leading cafes here in town, saying I would want them cooked for dinner the next day for myself and some friends. That was all right, of course, and Sunday afternoon early I rounded up the party and we went into the restaurant for dinner.

"We all had some soup and then started in on those trout, which were very good, and finally got down to coffee and strawberries, which everybody seemed to want. The question came from the waiter as to who wanted large cups of coffee and who wanted the small, the 'demi tasse' as they are nominated on the bill.

"One young man in the party ordered a large cup, saying that he could make it taste just as kood as a small cup, and did not need to drink any more than he felt like. At the same time, he said, he would not have to send back for more coffee, or leave the table unfilled, as he would in case he ordered a small cup and it was not enough to satisfy him.

"The rest of us ordered the small cups—there were four of us all told—so that this made one large cup and three small ones. After we were through the waiter brought us the bill. I guess they thought there was something wrong with me, for I pondered long and deeply over that check. I called the waiter finally to look at the items and pointed to one and asked him if it was right. He said it was. It was 35 cents for the four coffees. I was getting pretty well worked up about it, and wanted to see the proprietor, but he wasn't to be seen, as he was out.

"They had those coffees down at 10 cents each for the three small cups and 5 cents for the large one. What do you think of that? It was correct according to the card, too, because I looked at the card. I've eaten in a good many places throughout the country and never noticed it before. It may be the custom in all the leading cafes to charge that way, but it is certainly unjust. I'll never order a small cup of coffee from a bill of fare again until I see that it costs at the most no more than a large cup."

"I saw some items in The Herald not long ago about a certain individual who is very closely allied to his coin," said a young man the other day.

"I know one about him that you have not printed, and I guess it might as well be added to the list. One night not long ago he went to the theater with his spouse, and after the show they went into a leading restaurant and had a bottle of ginger ale. Beer? No, why do you think so? I said ginger ale, and you'd better make it ginger ale or you will get yourself disliked.

"I believe the cost of the bottle of ginger ale was 25 cents, and our friends drank it with considerable enjoyment. The man when it was time to go got up and went to the counter to pay, tendering a $50 bill or something equally fabulous, in payment. The man behind the counter could not change it, and the customer insisted that he had nothing smaller. Well, there was nothing to do but trust the payment to the young man's honor.

"'Just let me make a note of your name, please,' said the clerk.

"When our friend gave his name, the clerk took a sudden change of front. He asked the man to wait a minute, and he wrote out a promise to pay and asked the buyer to sign it. It was a written promise to pay a quarter, and our man was game. He signed it. I think the best thing about his reputation for holding on to 'the stuff' is that anyone would not trust him for a quarter.

"Of course that was unjust, though. The fellow is a little close, but he pays his debts, and would not try to do anyone out of a quarter."

The Biggest Fish.

"Yes," he said, "it weighed three pounds,
And was just about so long.
Did it fight? For twenty rounds!
And you bet it finished strong.
'Twas a beauty, on the square!
And we photographed it, too;
Contradict me, if you dare,
Guess this snapshot shows it's true!"

"Yes," he said, "our luck was great.
Say, we caught 'em by the score.
Almost any kind of bait—
Some we've often used before.
Trout! By Jove, I've fished a lot,
But I never saw the like.
Every time I cast I got Like a flash a dandy strike."

"Yes," he said, "and, by the way,
We had hardly started out
(Guess it was the second day)
When I hooked a monster trout!
Got him almost to the shore'
Then he broke the hook—oh, pshaw!
Probably I wasn't sore—
Biggest fish I ever saw!"

Peerless O'Briens.

New York Sun: There is a new baby in the O'Brien family up in Harlem. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien were discussing a name for him.

"I see," said Mrs. O'Brien, "that the Roosevelts are using Roosevelt as a middle name. The O'Briens are just as good as the Dutch. Let's call the baby James O'Brien O'Brien."

"Just as good!" cried O'Brien. "The Irish are three times as good as the Dutch. We'll call the boy O'Brien O'Brien O'Brien."

A Word to William J.

Bill!
Say, Bill!
Don't you think it wise to ponder,
Ere you rap that Judge up yonder
Where the silver Hudson flows?
He is silent, goodness knows;
Still as dawn, but just suppose.
When he speaks, he uite agrees
With you and all your theories.
Better lie low, Bill.
Give him a show, Bill.

Bill!
Think, Bill!
Think before you fiercely brand him;
Think—be sure you understand him;
Pangs escae of grim remorse,
Think—He, too, may own a cross,
A cross of gold, to which, of course,
A crown of thorns he firm secures,
And fondles both, as you do yours.
Better think twice. Bill.
Friendly advice, Bill.

Bill!
Oh, Bill!
Stop a minute, don't attack him:
Really, now, you ought to back him,
Play him clean across the board.
Store your anvil, sheathe your sword,
Doff the gloves; you can't afford
To hurt a man who may adore you;
Or one, tis said, who voted for you.
Curl up your lash, Bill.
Do nothing rash, Bill.
—ARTHUR H. FOLWELL, in New York Sun.

The Sweet Graduate.

Today all human destiny I know;
I feel a mighty pity for the world
Which helplessly across dim space is hurled
All ignorant of where it ought to go.
The sweet girl graduate, too, is on show
With ringlets in the latest fashion curled
And essay bound with ribbons, blue, and furled
Between her hands, while she speaks soft and low
And tells that Italy still Lies Beyond,
Or, that The World Still Needs True Womanhood—
The way her dress may hang her only fear;
But for today had not completely dawned
Ere I was wishing that I understood
The world as I will in another year.
—Chicago Tribune.

Creatures of Contradiction.

Philadelphia Bulletin: She will sit in a draught in a low-necked gown with her arms and shoulders bare.

But she will go out on the hottest afternoon with her head and neck tied up in a thick chiffon veil.

She will forget to pay a bill of $5 for months.

But she will make herself conspicuous in a street car squabbling to pay for her friend a 5-cent piece which she doesn't owe.

She will wear a skirt about six inches longer than it ought to be for walking.

But she will hold it up about six inches higher than any walking skirt that ever was made.

She is up in arms when she sees a horse whipped.

But she will drag a poor little dog on a shopping bout that would enfeeble a good-sized man.

She has a will that no power on earth can bend.

Yet she would rather the world should come to an end than that she should be caught doing differently from her neighbors.

Roosevelt's Luck.

New York Times: Nobody now has the slightest doubt that Mr. Roosevelt will be unanimously nominated without the formality of a ballot. But up to the very time when illness seized upon him Mr. Hanna and the powerful friends of Mr. Hanna had in view a different outcome of the Chicago convention. Had Hanna lived, Mr. Roosevelt during the past three months would have been engaged in a desperate struggle for his political existence, with the chances perhaps very much against him.

A Way to Avoid Danger.

New York Times: Many criticisms of the construction, the equipment and the discipline of the Gen. Slocum and of the course pursued by its pilot are coming to us. But what is the first and great criticism to be made? It is that neither the Lutheran Sunday school excursion nor any other excursion party made up chiefly of women and children should be intrusted to any steamboat. Such parties ought always to be carried on barges, towed and without steam power of their own. Then nearly every element of danger would be eliminated.

Watterson Gives It Up.

Louisville-Courier-Journal: But the pert paragraphers! Go ahead, you galoots! Have it your own way. We give it up. The merest doit of a thing might have known how it would end. Lord forgive us! Speak light of those chaps; better attack a nest of yellowjackets or a woman's club!

To catch a dragon in a cherry net,
To trip a tigress with a gossamer,
Were wisdom to it.

Sure Proof of Ability.

New York Tribune: Ferdinand had just questioned Columbus' ability to discover America.

"But," replied the navigator, "your majesty forgets that I found my collar button this morning."

Thoroughly convinced, Isabella at once offered to pawn her jewels to defray expenses.

A Stimulus to Avoid.

Cincinnati Commercia Tribune: Office Boy: Mr. Scratcher, don't you ever take a vacation in summer?

Bookkeeper: No, I don't; when I take a rest it makes me feel so dog-gone energetic afterward that I nearly kill myself working.

TWENTY YEARS AGO IN DULUTH

The cold storage building is being rapidly completed.

Thomas Ross left last night for St. Paul for the purpose of trying to effect a settlement with the directors of the Susie Island Mining company. He did some contract work for the concern last winter.

It is reported that in the course of a couple of days from 150 to 200 men will be employed in clearing up the townsite of South Duluth.

THE FUNNY FELLOWS.

New York Weekly: Jinks—Why are you forever bothering me about that bill I owe you?

Minks—I need the money.

Jinks—Then you ought to be able to sympathize with me. I need the money, too.

Puck: "I shouldn't think the Smiths would name their new baby 'John'—there are so many John Smiths."

"That's a good thing one way. If his name ever gets in the 'police reports' folks won't know whether it's he or some other John Smith."

Chicago Tribune: Naggus—What are you going to do with the hero and heroine of that amazing story you're running now? Marry them?

Borus—Certainly. They'll be married in the last chapter.

Naggus—I'm glad of it! It will serve them right!

Yonkers Statesman: "Does that fellow own that machine?" said the man to a policeman, as he saw the automobile going from one side of the street to the other.

"Well, it doesn't look as if he had even a controlling interest," said the guardian of the peace.

"What do you think of it?" asked her mother.

"Fine," answered her father; "no one would think that Maudie chewed gum and slapped her little brother, would they?"

Waggles—It is altogether too uncertain. Some fellows become millionaires at it, while others starve to death.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Cass Lake Times: The late editorial excursionists at the World's fair were almost overcome with the great heat. It is claimed that many of the "Northern Barbarians" of the party sought shelter under the shade of the Anheuser bush. The next excursion is planned for the northern wilds between Winnipeg and Port Arthur, Canada, returning via Duluth, all the way through the bush—but alas, the aroma is balsamic, not maltose.

Fergus Globe: Occasionally a deluded devil thinks he can get even with the express companies by holding up a train that carries express matter. The holdup is never as successful as that practiced on the public by the express companies.

Bemidji Pioneer: Two comparatively nearby instances suffice to point out the wonderful development that awaits Northern Minnesota. These are the Roseau country and the Little Forks region. In the former progress has been steady; settlers have flocked in, great tracts are now under cultivation and stockraising and dairying is being carried on to an extent that outrivals many older settled sections of the state. Yet Roseau has no railroad within forty miles of its county seat. In the Little Fork country, despite the swamps which cut it off from the south and the fact that the railroad refuses to come to it, population thickens week by week. New towns are springing up throughout the territory, fine farming country is being developed and the foundation of manufacturing industries is being laid. These are but instances; they show what tremendous development is possible in northern Minnesota in the immediate future.

Starbuck Times: The Minnesota building at the World's fair is a serious sarcasm in stucco. Its style of architecture is grand, gloomy and peculiar and its hidden beauties strike the average inhabitant of the Bread and Butter state with the suddenness with which your great toe collides with the arm chair when you are searching for a match in the dark. Standing there almost in the shadow of the magnificent New York and Missouri state buildings it gives one the impression that Minnesota is only a back woods district after all. We are not critical. We are ashamed.

SELECTED HIMSELF.

Anaconda Standard: One of the "ringing phrases" with which Senator Beveridge regaled the delegates in President Roosevelt's convention was this: "One difference between the opposition and ourselves is that they select their candidate for the people and the people select our candidate for us."

"How is it about that? Take the people of Ohio, for instance; what happened in their case? A little more than a year ago, when he was coming from the Pacific coast, a running rumor reached President Roosevelt's ears that Mr. Hanna was not going to let the president get an expression in his favor from the state convention of Ohio Republicans. From a little town on Montana's western border, the president wired an aggressive message to Mr. Hanna.

The telegram amounted to a demand; it served notice that the president would get a commitment to himself from the Ohio convention or know the reason why, and that he expected Mr. Hanna to see to it. That was, as good as in so many words, the Roosevelt telegram. Mr. Hanna had, in fact, publicly announced that the Ohio convention held in 1903 would not declare for Roosevelt. After he received the Roosevelt message, which doubtless angered him, Mr. Hanna was constrained, on second thought, to let it be as Mr. Roosevelt demanded.

Where were "the people" all this time, about whom Mr. Beveridge prates? They had no more to say about the course the Ohio convention should take than had the man in the moon. The issue, at the moment, was not between the Ohio Republicans and the presidency but, exclusively, between Mr. Hanna and the president. The Ohio convention would not have declared for Roosevelt if Mr. Hanna had concluded not to have that done; it did declare because Mr. Hanna made up his mind that to reach a rupture with Mr. Roosevelt just then was not good policy.

The truth is that, in a manner more distinctly outlined and defined than ever before happened in this country's history, President Roosevelt himself selected the Republican party's candidate for the presidency.

Marriage Trust Magnate.

Emery County, Utah, Progress: Judge William Hill, who dispenses justice—and then some—at Sunnyside when not engaged in pursuing the festive dollar while arrayed in the fine raiment or common garb of a dozen other callings, is pretty much the whole thing when it comes to outfitting folks for the married state. A few days ago a love-sick swain called on the judge and solicited his services to unite him in holy bonds, etc.

"By the way, Judge," said the young man, "ain't you the proprietor of the dance hall?" "I am," replied the justice.

"Well, I want it for a dance. How about the music?" "Well, I can supply that," said the judge.

"Then I must give a supper," said the soon-to-be Benedict. "Well, I am a professional cook," replied his honor, "and can serve you nicely in that line."

"All right," said the young man; "now I must see a photographer and make arrangements for photos of the wedding party," "Hold on," said the limb of the law, as the fellow was about to slip out the door. "That is my line, too. Photography is where I shine, and if you don't want to go to Price for the marriage license I can fix that too."

"Well, I'll be ——," gasped the lover as he planked down a yellow piece of money as part payment for all proposed service. "Do you also sell cradles and baby buggies?"

CANOE SONG.

Dip, drip!
Trough the whispering sedges,
By the mossy edges
Of the woodland stream.

Dip, drip!
Scarce the nigat wind, dying,
Stirs the leaves to sighing,
From their idle dream.

Dip, drip!
Hark! a distant splashing—
Some wee fish is dashing
From a hungry jaw.

Dip, drip!
At the bats that flutter
Solemn bullfrogs mutter,
Laying down the law.

Dip, drip!
Stars are winking slyly—
See, the moon mald shyly
Unbinds her silver hair.

Dip, drip!
Water lilies drifting,
Drowsy faces lifting,
Scent the breathless air.

Dip, drip!
In the dusky shadows,
O'er the marshy meadows,
Fireflies dance and gleam.

Dip, drip!
Through the whispering sedges
By the mossy edges
Of the woodland stream.
—Harry Farrand Griffin in New York Sun.

Wouldn't Lose Anything.

Washington Star: "I understand," said the indignant citizen, "that you used large sums of money in the election."

"That's all right," answered Senator Sorghum, cheerily. "I'll get it all back one way or another."

June.

Let 'er sizzle! Let 'er sizzle!
If th' noonday's hot to you
You should git up in th' mornin'
When the grass is wet with dew,
An' the mockin' birds are singin';
Or wait till the day is still,
Steeped in night, an' in the darkness
Sings the plaintive whippoorwill.

Git up early in the mornin',
Never mind the sizzlin' noon;
For the nights and morns are dewy,
An' it's always hot in June;
Nights the gulf breeze stirs the prairie
And the mockin' bird croons low,
An' the jasmine vines are climbin'
Till one almost sees 'em grow.
—Houston Post.

Butterflies.

Through the meadow clover,
Down the orchard lane;
Dashing wildly over
Garden plot and grain;
For his toil requited,
Seldom by a prize,
Happy and excited—
Chasing butterflies.

At the gay cotillions;
At the teas and balls;
'Mongst the maids with millions)
In the concert halls;
Finding varied honey—
Kisses, lovely eyes,
Spends his time and money—
Chasing butterflies.

Snoring, lives it over;
There's the orchard lane;
The haunting breath of clover;
The romping boy again—
Happy, hatless, racing,
Trips—awakes and sighs;
Grandpa has been chasing—
Mem'ry's butterflies.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The thing to do is not to teach a woman how to play whist, but to teach her not to.

When the postman brings a letter from the right man a girl gets as quietly upstairs with it as a cat.

One way to convince a girl you think she has small feet is to find fault with the bigness of another girl's.

A woman appears to think a man ought to like to go to church to see how mad her new hat makes a lot of the congregation.

Her Beautiful Quiet.

Dear old Superior, I love thee!
I love thy quiet ways;
I love thy unobtrusiveness,
I love thy sleepy days,
I love thy quiet streets,
That never more are thronged
With busy, rushing trade;
I love to while away my time
In the quiet restful shade.
Don't talk to me of busy towns,
That teem and thrill with life,
Where people rush and push and scratch
And engage in bitter strife.
But give me rather thy beautiful quiet.

GOING TO FAIR

Y. M. C. A. St. Louis Exposition Party to Leave Tuesday Next.

Nineteen Certain to Go and Four Others May Decide To.

The Duluth Y. M. C. A. World's fair party, to leave for St. Louis next Tuesday, July 3, on a handsome private car provided for the trip, is now practically made up. Nineteen people have signified it as being their intention to become members of the party, and four others have said that they will probably attend. Following are the names of the eighteen:

Messrs Herbert wilson, B. O. Lauerman, J. H. Lauermann, O. F. Marvison, R. J. Kelley, William Hancock, Charles and Hubert d'Autremont, Monroe Warner, Frank Dardis, Charles Rickard; Mrs. H. S. Clark; Misses Rosa Grettum, Hattie Dickolm, Maud Dardis, Annie and Ellie White, C. N. Vaughn, Narvison.

The others who contemplate becoming members of the party are Charles Bradley, E. R. Root, Miss Hickson, principal of the Adams school, and Miss Hortense Larson.

Prof. Frank Maxwell, the physical director at the Y. M. C. A., will represent the association, and will head the party. He is an athlete of no mean ability and his compaions on the trip feel safe under his protecting care. It is expected that the party will be a most congenial one, and members are anticipating a much better time than would the case be if they intended to visit the big exposition alone, or in the company of only one or two of the relatives or friends.

These who are going to take advantage of the special car will meet at the association building next Friday evening to become better acquainted and to post themselves to some extent on the attractions to be seen at St. Louis. The Y. M. C. A. department at the Missouri city has furnished the local Y. M. C. A. with a variety of maps, guide books and circulars, setting forth in detail what may be found at the fair, and these will be examined at the meeting, so the Duluthians may have an idea of what they are to see and lay their plans accordingly, before arriving at St. Louis.

The private cars, which will accomodate twenty-four people, is one constructed especially for trips of this sort, and offers all modern conveniences. It has numerous advantages over the ordinary Pullman sleeper, and contains a kitchen and observation rooms in addition to the berths. It is large and roomy, designed as a hotel on wheels. Cooks, porters and waiters are included in the outfit. The party will be gone seven days, living in the car all the time while absent, except in cases where members desire to visit friends, or for any reason choose to put up at one of the regular hotels.

The car will leave Duluth at 3:45 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, arriving at St. Louis at 1:38 p. m. the following day, and returning on July 12 or 13. Arriving at the World's Fair city the car will be switched on a side track, in an attractive locality, within a block of the main entrance to the fair grounds. This does away with all necessity for street car fares and relieves the party from all annoyance and waiting for cars at a time when it is almost impossible to secure even standing room. Breakfast and a 6 o'clock dinner will be served on the car each day, and a 12 o'clock lunch will be sent to the grounds to be served in one of the pavilions provided for that purpose.

Names New Ones.

Miss Ella R. Stringer, Theobald O. Flett and Oliver Navarson have been chosen by Postmaster E. L. Fisher as new clerks and substitutes in the Duluth postoffice, under authority recently received from Washington. W. W. French and W. J. Drake are now sub-clerks on the waiting list at the local office. The former will be appointed on the regular list, but it is said the latter may not accept the promotion, and in this case Miss Stringer will be appointed as the additional clerk. Those of the newly named clerks who do not secure regular appointments will be named as substitutes in the order in which their names appear.

COPPER FIND IN HELENA

Permanent Lead Has Apparently Been Struck In City.

Helena, Mont., June 29.—Large and valuable deposits of copper ore have been discovered in the shaft being sunk in southeast Helena by the Iowa Mining company. The strike was made at a depth of only sixty feet. I. H. Adams, secretary of the company, was an early-day prospector in this vicinity. Along in the early sixties nothing but gold was sought, but after all these years, Adams remembered that he had picked up several splendid specimens of copper float about a quarter of a mile from the site of the present shafthouse. While living in Des Moines, Iowa, he organized a company to seek the lead from which this float originally came, and operations were begun on a systematic scale. The indications were good from the grass roots, and now what is apparently a permanent lead has been struck.

Assays made from ore samples vary from $25 to $90 a ton, with values in gold, copper, silver and lead. That the company is sanguine as to the future outlook is shown from the fact that it has purchased about thirty-five city lots in the immediate vicinity of the shafthouse, in order that it may have undisputed title to the discovery.

It is the intention of the company to install hoisting machinery and to develop the property thoroughly. The city council has granted the company permission to mine under portions of Blake, Second and Third streets.

Developments in the reported sale of the Heinze properties at Butte to the Amalgamated Copper company are anxiously awaited by the public, but in quarters usually well informed it is stated that no definite announcement will be made until after election. That the terms of the sale have been agreed upon is not questioned by any one.

The outcome is generally regarded as portending a bright future in that both political and commercial wrangling will cease; court calendars will be cleansed and it will be possible to get a supreme court decision in far less than two years, as at present. Investors will not need fear the losing of vested rights between sunset and sunrise, as has been the case in certain instances, and it is believed Montana as a whole will no longer suffer it its standing in Eastern financial circles because of the highhanded methods practiced in Butte.

A topic of conversation in mining circles is the new strike in the Bald Butte, near here. Te new vein is apparently a parellel to those already worked. It has been drifted on for about sixty feet with correspondingly increasing values as well as width.

FOURTH OF JULY

Coming on Monday Gives Two Days to Most People.

Seldom in the history of Duluth has the list of attractions for July 4 been greater than this year.

Next Monday is Independence day and practically every merchant in the city has already announced a whole holiday in honor of the occasion. Coming as it does on Monday it gives the clerks and business men an opportunity to spend the day at some of the neighboring resorts for campers and fishermen. Large numbers of pleasure-seekers will doubtless leave Duluth Saturday afternoon and spend Sunday and Monday in fishing on some of the lakes in the vicinity. For those who remain in the city, an unparalleled list of attractions is offered.

In the morning there is a baseball game at Superior between the Duluth and Superior nines, and another in Duluth in the afternoon.

The big Ringling circus will give two performances, one in the afternoon and one in the evening.

The Maude Adams company will give a performance of "The Little Minister" at the Lyceum in the evening.

Dances have been announced for the pavilions at Lester and Lincoln parks and at O-at-ka beach, and the steamer Newsboy will make three or four trips to Fond du Lac.

The alternative of two days in the woods and a day in the city with a baseball game, a circus, a dance, and the theater with the usual accessories of fireworks, is a difficult choice to make and many are hesitating to decide upon the manner in which they will spend the holiday.

Fervent prayers are being uttered for fine weather. For four or five seasons past the holiday has been accompanied by wet and disagreeable weather. This year fine and warm weather is probably desired more than ever before, and a storm means the loss of thousands of dollars to the different amusement enterprises and a loss of a day's pleasure to 75,000 people.

MYSTERIOUS TAKING OFF

Of Castek and Co-Respondent In Divorce Case Suspected.

Iowa City, Iowa, June 29.—Is Frank Castek a suicide or a victim of cold-blooded murder?

That is the problem that the officers of Johnson county are striving to solve today, and Sheriff Evan Rowland confesses himself puzzled completely.

Castek, a well-to-do farmer, was Monday found in a dying condition at his home in Monroe township, twenty miles from Iowa City.

A bullet hole in his head indicated the method of his death, and a shotgun near by proved the character of the weapon used.

Suicide was suspected for a time, but now the officers are holding Joseph Stefanek, who will be compelled to prove an alibi to separate himself from the shadow of doubt that is hanging over him.

Stefanek is the co-respondent named by Castek in his suit for a divorce from his wife—who, with their two boys, had been living apart from her husband for some time.

Stefanek, moreover, was to be tried the very day of the killing for an alleged assault, with intent to murder Castek. The husband alleged that, back in February, Stefanek tried to choke him and pounded him over the head with a stick of wood. This attack was connected with the wife's friendship for Stefanek.

Mrs. Castek charged her husband with being cruel and inhuman to her, and she, too, asked for a divorce. The court, leaving the matter undetermined for a time, granted her the custody of both boys, and ordered Castek to pay $300 into court, as temporary alimony, and to cover her attorney's fees. The money was to have been paid Monday. Castek is well-to-do, and the $300 would have been a mere bagatelle to him. Suicide over a few hundred dollars is unthinkable in his case.

On the other hand, Stefanek scorns the accusation that he has anything to do with Castek's violent end, and there is no clear evidence that makes him appear guilty, so far as the tragedy of Monday is concerned.

COL. GOUGH KILLED.

London, June 29.—Col. Bloomfield Gough, who during the Boer war was ordered home for refusal to obey Gen. Lord Methuen's orders, was killed yesterday in a carriage accident at Kelso, Scotland. Gough, at the time he refused to obey orders, was in command of the Ninth Lancers. He claimed that his men and horses were not fit for duty and refused to lead them to destruction. He was a veteran of the Afghanistan campaign.

OFFICIALS HELD

Directors and Officers of Slocum Charged With Manslaughter.

Arrested and Placed Under Bonds By Coroner's Order.

New York, June 29.—The inquiry conducted by Coroner Berry and a jury into the General Slocum disaster was concluded yesterday, and after nearly four hours deliberation a verdict was rendered in which the directors of the Knickerbocker Steamboat company, the captain of the Slocum, Capt. Pease, the commodore of the company's fleet, and others were held criminally responsible. Warrants for their arrest were issued. The mate of the Slocum, according to the jury acted in a cowardly manner, and the misconduct of Steamboat Inspector Lundberg, it was recommended should be brought to the attention of the federal authorities.

The charge in each case was manslaughter in the second degree. Bail was fixed by the coroner in amounts varying from $1000 to $5000.

When the assistant district attorney moved that warrants be issued after the verdict had been given, Mr. McManus, counselr or the steamboat company, protested that such procedure was unnecessary as all the men were ready to appear and give bail when called for. The protest was of no avail.

The mate, Edward Flannagan, who was under detention as a witness, was the first arraigned. He pleaded not guilty and his bail was fixed at $1000. No bondsman being on hand, he was committed to jail.

Bail was fixed at $5000 each for President Barnaby and Secretary Atkinson and bonds were furnished at once.

Capt. Van Schalck is a prisoner in the Lebannon hospital. Capt. Pease will not be arrested until Wednesday when it is expected that the directors of the company will also be taken into custody. At the assistant district attorney's request the coroner committed the assistant engineer, Edwin Brandow, and the deck hands, Coakley and Trembly, as witnesses, sending them to the house of detention.

After pointing out the duty of the different officers and persons named and their failure to perform their duties the jury finds:—

"That the president, Frank A. Barnaby, secretary, J. Atkinson and the board of directors of the Knickerbocker Steamboat company, namely, Frank A. Barnaby, Charls H. Hill, James K. Atkinson, C. De Lacey, —— Evans, Robert K. Story, Floyd S. Corbin and Frank G. Dexter were guilty of criminal negligence in the failure to see the proper equipment of the General Slocum in the matter of the fire fighting and life saving appliances on board said boat.

"That the captain, William H. Van Schlack be held criminally responsible for the accident.

"That the captain, John A. Pease, the acting commodore of the fleet, be held criminally responsible for his failure to properly equip the General Slocum with fire fighting and life saving appliances.

"That Edward Flannagan, the mate, acted in a cowardly manner and we recommend that he be held criminally responsible for failure to perform his duty on the General Slocum on the day of the disaster.

"That in the opinion of this jury, the misconduct of Henry Lundberg, the government inspector, in failing to report to his superiors the true facts concerning the vessel's fire extinguishing and life saving equipment, should be brought to the notice of the United States prosecuting officials, and we further hold that said Henry Lundberg be held for criminal negligence by reason of his incompetence, careless and indifferent inspection of the General Slocum's hull and life saving apparatus on the fifth day of May, 1904.

"The jury is also of the opinion that the system of inspection which prevails in the harbor of New York is very inefficient and does not properly determine whether the life saving apparatus and fire appliances on the vessels in this harbor are in proper and suitable condition to prevent the loss of life, and we recommend to the secretary of commerce and labor that he issue such instructions to the supervisors local force of inspectors as will cause them to efficiently and honestly examine the steamboats plying in and about this harbor."

MELLIN'S FOOD CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Finds Him Guilty.

After deliberating less than an hour, the jury in the case of C. B. Nunan returned a verdict of guilty to Judge Windom this morning in the municipal court.

Nunan was arrested on a warrant sworn out by State Food Inspector Otto Gafvert, charging him with selling adulterated vinegar.

The court held that the intent of the defendant had nothing to do with the case and refused to allow any testimony showing that Nunan was unaware that the vinegar was adulterated.

Nunan, through his attorney, asked for a stay of sentence for twenty days, and it was granted to him.

HOME WRECKED BY A MURDER

Father Jailed, Mother a Maniac and Children Set Adrift.

Bemidji, Minn., June 29.—Berswen Roan of Buzzle is in jail here charged with killing Ole Badken, a neighbor, in a drunken quarrel, twenty miles north from here, where both men lived. Roan's wife, hopelessly insane from the time she was told of the tragedy, is being cared for by friends pending her removal to an asylum; and in a modest but comfortable home on the outskirts of the settlement are eleven little children deprived of both a mother's and a father's care and who must become public charges unless Roan is able to make good in court his claim that he killed Badken in self-defense.

Roan and Badken were neighbors, apparently good friends, and no enmity has been known to exist between them. Sunday both men were much together, and late in the afternoon went to the Badken cabin, where more or less liquor was drunk, and where a fight took place, which was ended by Roan's driving a knife into his companion, causing almost instant death.

Roan immediately quit the place and, thoroughly sobered, returned to his own home and informed his wife of what he had done.

During the night she became violently insane. A doctor said she was hopelessly insane and advised her removal to a neighbor's house, away from her children.

WORST OF ALL EXPERIENCES.

Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your last? Such was the experience of Mrs. S. H. Newson, Decatur, Ala. "For three years," she writes, "I endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered." For Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Bowel troubles, Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It's guaranteed by druggists.

Social, Musical and Art Circles.

Last evening a pretty home wedding took place at the home of the bride, at Superior, when Miss Edith Grace Karon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Karon, and David Kenigsberg, of this city, were married. The rooms were prettily decorated in ferns and flowers, and at 7 o'clock the ceremony took place. The maid of honor, Miss Helen Karon, and the best man, Louis Zalk, of this city, entered first, followed by Miss Hattie Shapiro, of this city, and Max Coddon, of Cloquet. Little Hattie Goldie Karon acted as ring bearer and carried the ring in a yellow flower. The bride entered with her father and the ceremony took place under a canopy of smilax and ferns. Rabbi Trinblatt read the Jewish orthodox service. A concealed orchestra played the wedding music and softly during the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in heavy cream all over lace over taffeta and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. She wore a veil of fine net fastened with a cluster of lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore tan crepe de chene and carried American beauties. The ring bearer was gowned daintily in white.

Following the ceremony was a dinner with about sixty guests. The table was prettily decorated in flowers and ribbons.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenigsberg left late in the evening for St. Louis, Chicago and Milwaukee for their wedding trip. After their return they will be at home at the "Chaperon Cottage" on Park Point. The bride's going away gown was cream stamine over blue silk with blue trimmings and a white picture hat.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. L. Mark, of Ironwood; Miss Sadie Mark, Mary Mark, Etta Coddon, Esther Coddon, of St. Paul; Max Coddon, Cloquet; N. Rothstein, Chicago, and Jack Seigel, of Eveleth. There were many Duluth people among the guests.

St. Clement's Concert.

Last evening the choir of St. Clement's church gave a concert for the benefit of the church. The program was well arranged and greatly enjoyed by the large number present. The choir was assisted by the Polish choir, Mrs. James E. Goodman, Miss Hattie Riley, Miss Florence Kremer, Miss Clara Richardson, David Evans and Roy Pritz, as vocalists. Mrs. J. Stubler and Mrs. E. H. Borth and Edwin Bergh, who gave piano and violin numbers and readings were given by Miss Mary Shesgren and Master Harold Phillips.

Interesting Notes.

Miss Mignon Palmer, a daughter of Emma Nevada, the opera singer, has entered the operatic field, and it is quite likely that mother and daughter will present the rare spectacle of appearing on the stage together.

A New Orleans newspaper donated a fund to be used annually in bestowing a prize upon the person who has done the city the greatest service. This year the prize, a superb loving-cup, went to Miss Sophia Wright, who fifteen years ago started a free night school for those whose daily employment barred them from the public schools. When Miss Wright opened her school two pupils applied, and today there are 1500 in attendance, while only lack of room prevents an even larger number of pupils.

A little anecdote which Miss Jane

HELENA SILBERSTEIN.
Aged 2 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Silberstein. This little lady's portrait was published in July number of Ladies' Home Journal.

Addams told in a recent speech in Boston on trade unionism throws a world of light upon what it means to be the daughter of a reformer and a celebrity. She said that when she visited Tolstoi she was placed at supper beside his second daughter. This girl had been working in the fields all day in the place of a peasant woman who had hurt her toe. "Are you tired?" Miss Addams asked her. The young woman turned upon her almost fiercely. "Tired? Do you know what it is to work in the fields from 5 o'clock in the morning till 5 o'clock at night?" Miss Addams told that as an illustration of what hard work for a woman really is.

SEASON OF MUSLIN.

Distinguishing Characteristic of This Summer.

Was ever a season so much and so beautifully distinguished by muslins?

Many kinds of fabrics heretofore regarded as but light weights in silk or wool are now glorified in fascinating sheerness and the Frenchified appellation, "mousseline." Taffeta, delaine, voile and even velvet are gossomered, all rivals of the lovely old-fashioned organdie, swiss and grenadine.

To be quite in the same swim you must be mousselined in plain hues or in flowered stuffs, and done in full sweeps and flounces as to skirts and in fluttery fichu-like finishings as to waists. The prettiest of the sleeves are voluminous in a succession of ruffles and clear the wrist on the inside of the arm and droop in points on the outside. When the arm is in motion these ruffles frou-frou charmingly.

Perhaps these abundant sleeves that sway away from the arm are prompted a revival of the real lace gloves in chantilly that extend half way to the elbow, and which are used with evening toilets. The short kid glove is also in vogue for evening wear with elbow sleeves and even with wide band shoulder sleevs. Thse short sleves afford a scope for embellishing the arm with bracelets and the new vogue of velvet bands studded with real gems.

As well to say right here that the fichu habit is a picturesque chance to give variety to a costume. A plain gown can be enhanced with fichus in dainty harmonizing colors and trimmed with laces or ruffled. A black mousseline can be piquantly varied with a white lace fichu and chiffon fichus. A popular fancy is a pale yellow with flecks of orange in the pale yellow lace ruffles.

THE EVENING STORY.

A FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Capt. Bayne slipped from behind a pile of shingles on the wharf, and ran down the pier to the schooner Julia Tibbetts and, leaping over the rail, bolted into the cabin, closely followed by the mate and Ben, the boatswain, each quivering with curiosity concerning the skipper's absence.

"Where've you been?" queried the mate. "We thought you were lost."

Capt. Bayne groaned heavily.

"I've been that worrited," said Ben, "that I couldn't eat 'arty."

"I'm aground, boys," said the captain, despairingly; "high up on the beach and bilgin'. I'm a murderer, and the noose is around my neck."

"Wot did you murder?" asked Ben, with interest.

"Last night," sighed the skipper, "I was at Briggs' saloon, on the wharf, drinkin', moderate, and started for the schooner about 11 o'clock. That there pesky Jim Blodgett comes up and begs a dime. I told him no, and then he keeps on and gets insultin'. I tapped him on the head with my fist, and overboard he goes. I flung a line over, but he never riz, he drowned like a stone, and I'm a murderer. Take me to the perlice, boys," cried the skipper, excitedly; "let 'em hang me."

"What did you do then?" asked the mate.

"I was 'fraid to come aboard, and went to a friend's and lay close all day. Every time the door bell rang I thought it was the orficers and nearly jumped out o' my skin. Oh, what a day it's been."

"Who knows you hit him?" asked the mate.

"Briggs saw me hit 'im," replied the skipper. "He promised to keep mum, but I can't trust him when the orficers get to askin' him questions."

"A nasty way to die, hangin'," mused the mate.

"'Anglin' is not as bad as it looks," put in Ben, consolingly. "They says you don't feel anythin' after you drop."

Capt. Bayne glared at the speaker savagely.

"The only thing to do," said the mate, "is to hide close on the schooner 'till we get to Boston and then slip off on some ship to a furrin port. If any orficer comes before we sail I'll tell 'im you're not aboard."

"'E ought to 'ave his beard shaved to disguise 'im," suggested Ben.

"Yes," assented the skipper, eagerly. "They wouldn't know we then; but I can't shave myself."

"I wouldn't touch a razor for the world!" exclaimed the mate.

"I never shavel myself, let alone hany one else," said Ben; "but my uncle was a barber, and it might run in the family. I'll try."

Judging from the lamentations of the skipper, and the condition of his face when Ben had finished, the aptitude for shaving was not handed down to his descendants by his relative.

Next morning the skipper remained secreted in the cabin, and the mate suggested going down to Briggs' for news. This Ben opposed vigorously. The mate, he insisted, would surely be suspected and followed. It would be better for him to go, and he accordingly did so, previously borrowing a half dollar from the skipper in case news had to be bought. He returned late, and half drunk, with the information that the saloon was full of officers, all plying Briggs with questions as to who hit Jim Blodgett, and that his condition was not attributable to drink, but to supreme anxiety lest Briggs should disclose his secret.

That night the schooner cast off her lines and set sail for Boston. Early in the morning Ben beckoned the mate on deck.

"One of 'em is aboard," he whispered, hoarsely.

"One o' what?" demanded the mate.

"One of them detectives," replied Ben.

"What?" cried the mate, aghast.

"At daybreak," continued Ben, "the fust thing I sees is a man come crawlin' out o' the forepeak. 'Who are you?' says I. 'Where's your cap'n?' says he. 'I want to see him bad.' Then I sees the trick. I can tell a detective by the way they handle their heyes, and I says the cap'n 's not aboard and that you are sailin' the schooner. There he is a settin' on the main hatch."

The skipper was much excited at this baleful news.

"You can't get away from 'em," he groaned. "Might as well give myself up."

"Not a bit of it," retorted the mate, stoutly; "you hide in 'tween the decks and we'll fool 'em yet."

"Better treat him perlite," suggested Ben.

"Yes," said the skipper, "feed him high and ask him into the cabin."

When the skipper was concealed in the 'tween decks, the detective, who was a remarkably hangdog looking fellow, was asked into the cabin.

"Where's the capting?" he asked. "I believe he's on this here boat."

Ben and the mate asseverated that the captain had evidently gotten drunk and had missed the schooner.

"He's wanted, is the skipper," said the detective, suspiciously. "He's wanted bad, and I'll keep my eyes open all the way to Boston."

"Better not cross 'em," whispered Ben to the mate.

While the skipper passed a wretched time in the 'tween decks the detective, the mate and Ben fared sumptuously on the delicacies of the larder, and after an uneventful passage the Julia Tibbets was beating up Boston bay, when the mate noted the police boat bearing down on them.

"I'm glad of it," said the skipper, when apprised of the fact. "I'd rather be hung than live these days over again."

"Good-by, boys," he soobed, as he stood on the deck watching the approach of the police boat; "don't think too hard of me."

Three officers leaped on board the schooner.

"Captain," said the chief, addressing the trembling skipper, "there's a fugitive from justice on board, one Thomas Welsh, who assaulted with intent to kill a mate in Baltimore."

"Give me back my $10," snarled the prisoner, addressing Ben, who turned away shaking his head sadly.

"A gentleman," soliliquized Ben, later, "hoffers me $10 to get him privately away from Baltimore. I sees my way to do it, and I does it, takin' advantage of the skipper's scare. Hi've done my duty as a man and a Christyun."

That night Ben remarked to the captain. "I sees a man on one of the Baltimore steamers, and he says he saw Jim Blodgett alive and kicking the day he sailed. He says he looked cleaner than usual, but that was from the washin' he got when you plumped him hoverboard."

HAULS A MILK TRAIN.

Famous World's Fair Locomotive Near Junk Pile.

Watertown, N. Y., June 29.—"How have the mighty fallen!"

The famous New York Central engine, "No. 999," the pride of the transportation exhibit at the World's fair in Chicago, the boast of locomotive builders as the finest specimen of their handiwork, the admired of millions, the joy of the Vanderbilt heart as at the head of the Empire State express it was a pioneer in record-breaking speed to the West—this embodiment of mechanical glory now hauls a milk train.

Snorting somewhat feebly from age and hard usage, with a less steady gait and showing in rust and creak the ravages time has wrought "Three Nines" now ambles on between Messena and Utica at seventeen miles an hour instead of its former seventy, with not one car in its wake, but whole train loads.

The engine was built primarily for display at the Columbian exposition, as a part of "the model train"—the finest expression of the advancement of the nineteenth century in facilities for travel. It aroused more interest than even the palatial sleepers to which it was attached and became familiar to the great crowds of sightseers at the fair. Afterward "No. 999," when its show days were over and it was consigned to a field of usefulness, was given a position fitting its rank by being the first locomotive to pull the Empire State express, one of the first experiments of railroad magnates in reducing the time from New York to Chicago to twenty-four hours or less.

From that time until this little has been heard of the machine. Now, alas, it has reached the stage in degradation next to the junk heap.

Idaho Congressman Ends Romance By Marriage.

Norfolk, Neb., June 29.—As the ending of a rather romantic courtship, Idaho's only congressman and the youngest representative in the national legislative halls, Burton Lee French, of Boise, was married here today to Miss Winifred Hartley, of this city. CAMPAIGN BRIEF

Republican Speakers Not to Go Out Until Sept. 1.

Less Campaign Literature to Be Sent Out This Year.

Chicago, June 29.—The Republican national committee has decided to conduct a whirlwind campaign this year. It will be brief and will be directed on carefully worked out plans.

The "strenuous" work will be done during the months of September and October.

The plan has been approved by President Roosevelt and Senator Fairbanks, and has met with the approval of the members of the national committee.

George B. Cortelyou, the new chairman of the committee, and the man who will direct the party machinery watched over by the late Senator Hanna during the McKinley campaign, left for Washington last Saturday. He will put the affairs of his office as secretary in order preparatory to turning them over to his successor, Victor H. Metcalf.

Mr. Cortelyou will retire from the president's cabinet July 1, and from that day until November will devote all his time and vigor to the campaign work.

While the new head of the committee is disinclined to discuss politics at this time it is known that he will follow many of the policies adopted by Senator Hanna during the contest in 1900. He believes they could not be improved upon. In that belief he agrees with the members of the national committee.

The quiet and effective work, the work that really counts in a great national campaign, will be commenced July 1, when Mr. Cortelyou opens his headquarters in Washington.

Branch headquarters also will be established in Chicago and New York, and the chairman will divide his time between the three cities. The offices in Chicago and New York will not be opened until August.

While it has not been definitely determined who will be in charge of the branch offices, Harry S. New, of Indiana, is regarded as the most likely man to be selected for the Chicago work.

Governor Odell probably will be given charge of the practical work at the New York office. Other members of the national committee will be at the various headquarters from time to time as the necessity may arise during the campaign.

After all the preliminary work is done, about Sept. 1, the speakers will be turned loose over the country, and the bulk of the campaign literature mailed to the voters of every state in the Union. There will be less campaign literature prepared for this campaign than that of four years ago, and it will be put in more concise form.

Chairman Cortelyou will appoint seven or eight young men as his assistants. They will be selected from various states and will be young Republicans of recognized political and business ability.

One will be taken from Illinois, one from Indiana and one from New York and the others will come from some of the other states.

Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York, will be the "fund-getter" for the party this year, and his standing is so high, and his influence with the business interests so strong, that little trouble is anticipated in raising all the money needed to defray the expenses of the campaign.

There is a marked disposition on the part of the Republicans to wait until the Democrats have formulated their plans for the contest. The Republicans are confident that they can meet their opponents with assurances of victory on any ground they may select.

Before leaving for New York, Mr. Cortelyou spent some time visiting the business men of Chicago, and in confidence briefly disclosed his plans for the next few months. From his manner in seeking that class of men in Chicago, it is expected that the campaign will be directed largely along business lines.

SEARCH FOR HIDDEN GOLD

Two Texans Believe $50,000 Is Buried In Indian Territory.

South McAlester, I. T., June 29.—The residents of this section are hourly expecting to be apprised of the find of a great amount of hidden gold. James and Charles Davis, who hail from Texas, are here preparing to make a search for treasures which they claim are buried about fifteen miles east of this place. Their story of the hidden gold has gained credence, and it is likely that they will have several competitors in the search.

When aproached by a representative of the Journal, the two men were greatly surprised to learn that the news of their mission to the territory had preceded them. They were at first very reticent, but finally admitted the truth of the information. The story they tell resembles a tale of a dime novel fashion. Speaking of the proposed search one of them said:

"Many years ago our father found a Mexican lying in an almost lifeless condition on the plains. Father saw that the sick man received medical attention, and brought him to our home, and he finally recovered his health, through careful nursing.

"Just prior to the departure of the Mexican from our home he expressed, in profuse terms, his deep gratitude for the kindness extended him and declared that father should not go unrewarded for his trouble. He thereupon handed father a small roll of buckskin upon which had been roughly drafted a map, which, he said, if followed, would lead the possessor to a point where he would find more than $50,000 in gold buried. He explained that he had buried the bullion, which he secured as a member of a gang of frontier raiders, during a fight with a number of Indians, in order that the latter might not capture it.

"The Mexican further said that he was compelled to abandon the section in which the money was hidden and that he was on his way to recover it when he became ill. He explained that, as he was growing aged and would have but little use for money, he would give the map to our father in order that he might locate the treasures as a substantial evidence of his appreciation of the treatment he received under our shelter.

"Our father made one attempt to locate the gold, but in so doing was stricken with fever, and was compelled to return home. Subsequently he died from the effects of the fever. Recently we decided to attempt the task of locating the money and are here for that purpos."

TRIUMPHS OF MODERN SURGERY.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It so allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by all druggists.

MADE HIM MAD

If She Did Not Get In Bed First.

Richmond, Ind., June 29.—Mrs. Jeanette Knode, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., who recently separated from her husband, Oliver T. Knode, a Richmond business man, and against whom a divorce proceeding is pending, has filed a cross-complaint. She also asks $10,000 alimony. Mrs. Knode is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Hughes, of Mt. Clemens. She married Mr. Krode in October, 1903. Mr. Knode in his suit for divorce, alleges abandonment.

The cross-complaint avers "that at the time of her marriage to the plaintiff he was a widower with two children, and was much older than the cross-complainant, and that when she was sick he would laugh at her and make sport of her suffering. Frequently, for the purpose of mortifying her and wounding her feelings, she says, he would falsely accuse her of flirting with men, which charges, she says, were wholly false.

During the winter of their married life she says, he would become angry with her every night if she did not undress for bed quickly and did not get in first and warm the bed for him.

She says that the plaintiff is the owner of real and personal property valued at $25,000.

DIAMONDS PASSED

With Kiss But the Mother Restored Them to Owner.

Then Pleaded In Vain For Freedom of Her Son.

St. Louis, June 29.—The police have discovered that R. W. Royal Donmeyer a young dentist, whose home is in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, secreted diamonds worth $5000 while being searched by detectives, kept them in his cell during four weeks of imprisonment and finally passed them to his mother by means of a kiss when she was bidding good-bye to him in the jail.

The mother restored the diamonds to their owner in the hope of freeing her son, but failed. Donmeyer is held under a warrant charging grand larceny.

Several weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Hayes, of No. 4850 St. Louis avenue, met Donmeyer in Indianapolis, and invited him to come to St. Louis with them as their guest. He accepted, and for two or three weeks lived with them in their St. Louis avenue home.

One afternoon four weeks ago Mr. Hayes was in the bathroom. When he returned to his bedroom he found that five diamonds, valued at something more than $5000 and a number of valuable papers, mining stock coupons and notes were missing from his clothing.

Donmeyer was not in the house at the time. He came in a few minutes later, and said he had been walking.

Hayes and Donmeyer went to the Four Courts to report the matter to the police. Chief of Detectives Desmond questioned both men carefully. They asked the chief to have diligent search made for the thief.

Desmond promised that he would do so and pushed a button. Detective Heckel answered the call.

"Arrest and search this man," said Desmond, indicating Donmeyer. Nothing was found. Later his mother visited him, and in a long and fervent kiss he transferred the diamonds to his mother's mouth. She restored them to their owner.

Mrs. Donmeyer pleaded with Hayes not to prosecute her son, but when he became convinced that Donmeyer had deliberately planned and executed the theft he refused to grant the mother's request.

FORTUNE OF A PRUSSIAN

Given to American Institution and Relatives Get Nothing.

Denver, Col., June 29.—Charles M. Stebbins, a pioneer of Denver, died in Berlin, Prussia, June 1, leaving a fortune estimated by the executors of his estate at $300,000, to be used for the education and maintenance of an orphanage in Denver, to be called the Stebbins orphan home.

The will was filed for probate in the county court yesterday by Attorney W. W. Garwood, who is also designated as one of the executors.

The will directs that all the property of the deceased shall be converted, as soon as possible, into cash for the building of the orphanage. The annual income from the securities shall be devoted to the support of the institution. Any white child of either sex, under the age of 8 years, may become an inmate of the orphanage and remain until it becomes of age, provided such child shall be of reasonable parents, who were in their lifetime residents of Colorado.

For the purpose of managing the institution the will creates a commission, to consist of five members, and directs the commission first appointed to perpetuate itself by filling all vacancies that may for any reason occur. William R. Stebbins, of 1860 Sherman avenue, a brother of the testator, is made a life member of the board, and the mayors of Denver in succession are made ex-officio members. The will further directs that the children of the asylum shall not be treated as mendicants or waifs, but shall in all respects be treated as though they were the natural hereditary heirs of the testator.

In addition to the brother, W. R. Stebbins, the deceased, leaves a son and two daughters, to whom he left only nominal bequests. To his son, Charles Stebbins, who is a practicing lawyer in Boston, Mass., the father's sole gift is a solid gold watch long worn by him, while to each of his two daughters, one a resident of Boston and the other of Baltimore, an annuity of $400 is bequeathed. Mrs. Hannah Loveland, of Belleville, Wis., is remembered with an annuity of $80 during the remainder of her life.

Ten years ago Mr. Stebbins published a religious book drawn in a large measure from the experiences of his own life. So far as known to one of the executors only two copies of the book are now extant. The executors are directed to appropriate $15,000 for the publication and distribution of the book among the worthy young white men of America. To this end he suggested that each postmaster in the United States be provided with one copy, with the request that he present it to the most worthy young man of his acquaintance.

The executors named in the will are Attorney W. W. Garwood, Henry M. Porter, a lifelong friend and early business partner of the testator, and his brother, William R. Stebbins. All of the executors are in the city and were present at the filing of the will for probate.

When asked concerning a rumor that the probate of the will would be contested, one of the executors said: "I have no idea that there will be any contest whatever. There are no grounds that I can see on which such a contest could be predicated. Mr. Stebbins was certainly one of the most practical and sensible men I ever knew, and the provisions of his will are just what Mr. Stebbins' closest friends have long known were his desires and intentions. In my judgment there will be no contest, and as soon as proper publication can be made the court will order it admitted to probate."

DRESS WAS TORN

From Her Body When Maj. Taggart Was In a Rage.

Beat Her So Entire Body Was Bruised and Bleeding.

Wooster, Ohio, June 29.—Two weeks ago Maj. E. F. Taggart, of the Sixth infantry, transport quartermaster on the Sherman, hailing from San Francisco to the Philippines, while here to visit his parents filed a petition for divorce from Grace Viola Culvert Taggart, who was a society belle in Chicago. Taggart charged his wife with gross neglect and infidelity. Mrs. Taggart has reached here and filed her answer and a cross-petition asking for a divorce and the custody of the two boys, aged 9 and 6.

Mrs. Taggart denies all the charges and alleges that he has been guilty of cruelty and neglect. She says that in Manila Taggart beat her in the face with his fists while he was drunk.

Later in Leavenworth, Kans., she says, he threw her against a chiffonier and dislocated her jaw. On other occasions he struck her so violently that she was compelled to have medical attention. She says she attended a social gathering at his request and with the understanding that he would call to take her home. He did not call. With Capt. Poor and wife and Lieut. Fortesque, who is a nephew of President Roosevelt, she went to her home, but was unable to gain admission. She then went to the residence of Capt. Poor, acompanied by Mrs. Poor. While there Maj. Taggart phoned and wanted to know if it would be necessary to send an ambulance for her, meaning thereby that she was intoxicated.

When she got home, Mrs. Taggart alleges, he tore the clothes from her body and beat her so that her entire body was discolored and bleeding.

She avers that her husband has been in the United States army for twenty years, and that he failed to furnish her and their children suitable clothing and at times with the ordinary necessities. Having some means of her own she was forced to clothe herself and her children.

Mrs. Taggart alleges that Maj. Taggart's conduct became known to his superior officers, that he was threatened with court-martial and for a time was actually confined with a sentinel over him. She says that with his knowledge and consent she left Fort Leavenworth with their children. By reason of his conduct and treatment she was afraid to live with him.

ROMANCE OF CONVENTION

Brothers, Separated Since Children, Are Reunited In Duluth.

Minneapolis, June 29.—A politicial convention is not unusually considered a thriving field for romance, yet a remarkable occurrence, which had its romantic side, happened at the recent Democratic state gathering at Duluth.

Francis P. Brandon, who lives at Xenia, Ohio, was in the Zenith City while the Democrats were indulging in their love feast. One evening he met a stranger in the casual manner in which acquaintances are formed in and around hotel lobbies. During the several days that Mr. Brandon was there the two men saw a great deal of each other and a mutual friendship sprang up.

When his business affairs in Duluth were over Mr. Brandon left that city and his next stopping place was Minneapolis. He had been in town a couple of days when to his surprise he came across the friend whom he had met in Duluth. Thus the short acquaintance which had begun a few days before was renewed. In the ocurse of a chat their friendship got to that stage where each became interested as to whom the other was and in the usual questions as to name, occupation, etc., they learned that their names were alike.

With this rather surprising occurrence the conversation now assumed a cross fire of eager questions. Mr. Brandon learned from his new-found friend that he had run away from home at the age of 14 and had not seen or heard from any of his family since. This fact led to the discovery that they were brothers. It was truly a happy day for both to find the outcome of a few mere incidental meetings, the means of finding a brother whom each little expected ever to see again.

After a few days spent together in the Twin Cities they will go back to the home of F. P. Brandon in Ohio, where he and his wife live and in the true spirit of the occasion, will the fatted calf be brought forth in honor of the event.

BRIDE-TO-BE DISAPPEARS

On Eve of Wedding and Dies Hating Her Fiance.

Birmingham, Ala., June 29.—Rev. E. L. Roy, pastor of the Southern Methodist church at Gamble Mines, Walker county, is in a hospital here suffering from nervous exhaustion. He reached here from Diamond, Marshall county, where he was to have married Miss Lulu Johnson, daughter of a planter, last Wednesday evening. The marriage did not take place owing to the mysterious disappearance of the bride-elect.

Mr. Roy says that when he reached the Johnson home on Tuesday he found his fiancee in the happiest mood. Wednesday morning he went with her to the cow lot to milk the cows, and offered to help her, but she told him she did not need his aid. Then he returned to the house and sat with her father. That was the last seen of Miss Johnson.

A search disclosed the following note on the well curb in the cow lot:

"Dear Papa and Mamma and Brother, Sisters and Friends—Oh, my heart is grieved to tell you all that I must leave this old world. I could not marry some one I do not love. I would die before I would spend a miserable life, so I must die this very night. When you find me you will find me in the Tennessee river. No one will ever see me again. You all must know that I die hating the Rev. E. L. Roy.

"Dear girls, take warning by me; don't learn to flirt with young men. Ah! if you do you will be sorry. You all see what it led me to: to drown myself and cause my people to grieve my loss.

"Dear parents and friends, do not mourn for me; I am dead and gone. How I wish I was a little baby like I once was. I would certainly be a better girl. Dear friends, take warning by me. Sincerely, —LULU JOHNSON."

Mr. Roy and the family searched for two days without finding the slightest trace of Miss Johnson. The Tennessee river is a few miles from the Johnson home, and the belief is that she drowned herself in it.

Mr. Roy says the girl appeared to be deeply in love with him.

ASTONISHING CRIMINALITY

St. Louis, June 29.—It was announced yesterday that Charles A. Gutke, former member of the house of delegates, convicted on a charge of bribery and soon to be tried on another similar charge, made a complete confession to Circuit Attorney Joseph W. Folk, in which he declared that Former Delegate Charles F. Kelly had told him he had received $50,000 for going to Europe when his presence in St. Louis jeopardized men of prominence.

Kelly is also resting under one conviction, and is soon to be tried in another case. Circuit Attorney Folk attaches great importance to the revelations which have been made by Gutke. He said that it opened up many new avenues of investigation, and that it brought things to light which have not been heard of before, involving the men higher up.

When he came from the circuit attorney's office, Gutke handed out for publication written extracts from his confession, of which the following is a part:

"I became a member of the house of delegates in 1897, and at once became a member of the combination of that body, which was an organization composed of nineteen delegates for the purpose of selling legislation. The first bill that came up after I had become a member of the combination was the 'Suburban loop bill.' The combination got $20,000 for their votes on this bill; on the Union avenue bill we got $18,000; on the Suburban bill we were to get $75,000, which is now in the safe deposit box in the Lincoln Trust company, being placed there with the agreement that it should be turned over to us when the bill had been passed.

"While these are some of the largest bribes secured during my term of office, there were innumerable others, ranging from $10,000 for switching bills to a few hundred dollars for some minor privilege. The bill prices were fixed in meetings of the combination, the proceedure being for some member to get up and move that a certain price be fixed on a certain bill. Other members would give their opinions and a vote would be taken and the price receiving the highest number of votes would be adopted.

"Then we would select an agent of the combine by ballot to negotiate for and receive the money. This agent would distribute the money amongst us. From my intimate knowledge of dealings of this combine, and from information of what has been going on here for the last quarter of a century, I make the positive statement that there is hardly a corporation in the city of St. Louis, of $250,000 or over, that has not either been held up for bribe money or bought official action from the combination in the house of delegates."

Other details were given by Gutke, who mentioned the name of a prominent local politician, whom he said had been at the head of nearly all combines during the past twenty-five years. He said the boodle gang in St. Louis, which is more powerful than the people of St. Louis dream about, has already planned to capture the circuit attorney's office at the next election.

A Vile Disease

Contagious Blood Poison has wrecked more lives and caused more misery and suffering than all other diseases combined. Some are inclined to treat it lightly, but these soon learn that they have to deal with a powerful poison that is slowly but surely breaking down the constitution. Contagious Blood Poison not only metes out punishment to the one who contracts it, but others may become innocent victims of this vile disease through inheritance. If your blood is tainted you may live to see your children battling with the same disease—puny and sickly, made miserable by disgusting sores and skin eruptions. Under the mercury and potash treatment all signs of infection may disappear, but leave off these minerals and you soon find out the poison is still alive and you are just as bad off as ever. S. S. S. is the only antidote for Contagious Blood Poison. It destroys the virus completely without injuring the system. It is a vegetable remedy, and we offer $1,000 for proof that it contains a single mineral ingredient. S. S. S. not only works the poison out of the blood thoroughly, but restores vigor and strength to all parts of the system.

For years I was troubled with the most malignant type of chronic blood trouble. After trying various other remedies without getting any benefit, I was induced by a friend who was cured of a constitutional blood trouble, to take S. S. S. A few bottles cured me permanently. I also consider S. S. S. the best tonic ever made. While taking it my weight increased and my health improved in every way. S. A. WRIGHT, 2503 Perryville Ave. Allegheny City, Pa.

The Old Reliable

Duluth Van Co.,

210 West Superior St. Phones 492.

A NEW PRINCIPLE IN MEDICAL SCIENCE.

For years it has been the practice of medical men to treat patients suffering from piles by local, external applications. These treatments give but temporary relief, but have never affected a positive cure.

After months of research and study, accompanied by actual experience with various patients, Dr. C. A. Perrin arrived at a positive conclusion as to the exact action of the various parts of the bowel system, under different conditions, and when subjected to various prescriptions.

He finally prepared that wonderful internal remedy known as DR. PERRIN'S PILE SPECIFIC, which is put up in bottles, retailing at all reliable drug stores for $1.00 each. This internal remedy has been on the market for the past ten years, and in all of that time there has been but three cases where a positive cure has not been effected.

Dr. Perrin's Pile Specific is sold under a positive guarantee by the druggist making the sale, to refund the full purchase price, providing the remedy fails to cure. This is the absolute proof of its merit. Any man or woman who suffers from blind, bleeding, itching or internal piles can try this internal remedy with the absolute certainty that it will cost nothing unless it cures. Here is what one sufferer says of this wonderful remedy:

Dr. C. A. Perrin, Helena, Mont.—I wish to thank you for the cure your wonderful medicine has done for me. I had the piles some five years, and under the advice of a doctor had them removed by the knife and felt free for awhile, but they returned and I at once got a bottle of your Perrin's Pile Specific and one bottle has entirely cured me, and I am as good as I ever was.

Yours truly,
JACK SULLIVAN,

MISSOURIANS FOR COCKRELL

Democratic State Convention Will Instruct For Him For President.

Joplin, Mo., June 29.—Before the Democratic state convention to elect thirty-six delegates to the national convention met here today, United States Senator William J. Stone, Governor A. M. Dockery and Congressman Champ Clark and D. A. De Armond were still in the lead for delegates-at-large. However, there was some sentiment in favor of naming either Harvey W. Salmon or State Representative Oliver of Cape Girardeau in place of De Armond. There was no talk of Hearst nor Parker, and it was a foregone conclusion that the convention would instruct for Cockrell for president. The organization was in control of the machine, so-called, and the followers of J. W. Folk, the St. Louis boodle prosecutor, who is running for governor, received but slight recognition. All of the leading candidates for delegate-at-large were machine men, with the exception of Oliver, whose chances of election were small. James A. Reed, ex-mayor of Kansas City, who withdrew last month from the gubernatorial race after a majority of the county primaries had instructed for Folk, was named by the machine as temporary chairman.

The state nominating convention will be held at Jefferson City later.

KIDNAPED HIS CHILD.

Minneapolis Man Snatches Girl From Her Mother.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 29.—Sam Esser, employed in a sash and door factory in Minneapolis, kidnaped his little daughter, Mamie, aged 3 years, from her mother, and is supposed to have gone to Minneapolis. He is originally from Holland, and it is feared he is on his way back there. Mrs. Esser went to Minneapolis today to try and gain possession of her child.

Mrs. Esser was an adopted daughter of S. F. Francis, of this city, and five years ago eloped with Esser, who was a farm hand. They went to Minneapolis to live. Last March Mrs. Esser separated from her husband, and, with her little girl, returned to St. Cloud.

On Saturday Esser came to this city and on Sunday induced his wife to bring the child to the hotel that he might see her. Then he induced them to go to the train to see him off. He stood on the platform conversing with his wife until the train started, when he grabbed the child and jumped aboard, leaving the frantic woman on the platform. Legal proceedings for divorce and to gain possession of the child will be started by Mrs. Esser if he can be located.

MAINE REPUBLICANS IN STATE CONVENTION.

Bangor, Me., June 29.—The Republican state convention assembled here today, with William T. Cobb, of Rockland; Charles H. Prescott, of Biddeford; Bert M. Fernald, of Poland, and Eliot Wood, of Winthrop, rival candidates for the gubernatorial nomination. While there was little apparent choice between the men, as shown by the anti-convention demonstrations, there was strong feeling among the more conservative party leaders that Mr. Cobb would be nominated.

MANY NEW THINGS

Original Devices to Be Found In This Year's Fireworks.

Number of Them Inspired By War Raging In Far East.

The man who makes the fireworks has been busy during the last year and when Duluth dealers display their stocks of Fourth of July explosives to the public on Friday morning many new and interesting means of Independence day jubilation will be seen.

The greatest novelty of the season is appropriately Japanese. Whether it will treat the American youth as other Japanese explosives have been treating the Russians for some time past is still to be demonstrated. "Hirayama Japanese Day Fireworks" is the name of this novelty. It consists of a shell which is projected from a mortar or upright gun to a great height where it breaks displaying many different figures in many colors of fire. Men, women, rainbows, moons, gods and goddesses, rainbows and flags are some of the effects that are secured with this combustible. They come rather high and only the affluent will be able to have them on the evening of July 4.

"Searchlight Batteries," which burn with a brilliant white light and "Cracker Jack" are the names of two more joy producing novelties. "Whistling Volcanoes" and "Naval Batteries" heavily charged which display the naval signal lights are other wonders.

Rockets that will shoot higher, sing louder, and burst more prettily than ever seen here before will be on sale. There will be the same Roman candles holding an inexhaustible supply of multicolored fire balls, the peacock plumes, pin wheels, hopping and flying devils to delight the heart of youth. The sizes of firecrackers will be restricted and none of really dangerous magnitude will be sold.

The new regulations in regard to the sale of fireworks have this year saved Duluth from the nuisance of premature celebrations, which formerly occurred for about a month preceding the Fourth of July. Dealers are required by a city ordinance to keep their stocks in hiding and not display them to the public view until July 1, and then they must hide them away in the closet again on July 5.

This makes the season for the sale of the explosives very short. Another drawback to their sale is the reluctance of owners of buildings to have them housed in any of the stores which they rent and the excessive insurance rates which are charged for the protection of such buildings.

"We are not going to handle fireworks this year, although we always have before," said a dealer who formerly carried one of the largest stocks in the city. "There is nothing in it. If we stocked up this year we would have to pay extra insurance on our own stock on the stock of the store next to us, on the building and on the office fixtures in the rooms upstairs. For the three or four days which the explosives would be on display this would cost us perhaps several hundred dollars, and although there is a long profit on fireworks, it is not enough for that. Then it dirties up the store so that you can't get it clean for weeks and there are a great many other drawbacks."

In spite of this, however, there will be no lack of fireworks in Duluth on the Fourth as 122 dealers have applied for and received licenses to sell fireworks, from the city council. Most of these are taken out by dealers who will carry only modest stocks, but one or two of the large bookstores and hardware stores down town will have a lot on hand to select from that will satisfy the taste of the most fastidious celebrator.

COPPER IS RISING

Metal Has an Advance From Last Week's Low Point.

Copper has stiffened a little in price but is still a pretty good fraction below the 13 cent price. A good buying element has appeared in the market and this brought the price up from the low point. George L. Walker in his weekly letter on the copper market and copper shares says:

"Copper is stronger. Lake is now selling at 12¾ cents and electrolytic at 12⅝ cents per pound. When prices got down to 12½ cents, the early part of last week, buyers appeared in such great numbers that sellers hesitated and raised their asking prices. There has since been a considerably larger volume of business, both for domestic and export account. Consumers are feeling less pessimistic than they were, and some of them are buying their July supply of copper at prevailing prices. It is reported that negotiations are under way for two very large blocks of copper for export.

"There is a very aggressive bear party in the foreign market, and it apparently made some money on the recent decline in prices. Of late it has been increasingly active, and has issued circulars telling of Amalgamated manipulation of the metal market, overproduction of copper, etc. It is thought that its tactics have to some extent injured the confidence of foreign consumers; but, notwithstanding this, the buying for export is still the best there is in the market.

"The most encouraging thing about the copper metal market is the fact that the outlook for the future is especially bright. Mining developments now under way and contemplated are too limited to permit of the continuance of the past ratio of increase in copper production; while every indication is that the consumption of copper must grow very much more rapidly than it ever has in the past. Viewed from a strictly economic standpoint, with due regard for its many fields of utility, copper at 13 cents per pound is unquestionably the cheapest metal in the world. Nothing but rising prices can greatly check its consumption.

COPPER SHARES.

"Investors are awakening to a realization of the fact that the best bargains to be had at current prices are the better class of the copper stocks traded in on the Boston market. They now recognize that they have watched Amalgamated too much and other coppers too little. Two years ago Wolverine sold down to 43, Mohawk to 27 and Utah to 19 at a time when Amalgamated was quoted 5 to 10 points higher than it is at present. Most traders refused to buy the former stocks because they were afraid Amalgamated would decline farther. It did decline; but it didn't prevent a rise of 30 points in Wolverine, 15 points in Mohawk and 29 points in Utah. If it declines again it will not prevent several other good copper stocks from advancing in market price as their increased production and earnings warrant. Investors are coming to understand this, and are buying Utah, Bingham, Mohawk, Osceola, Copper Range, Winona, Centennial, Shannon, Victoria and other good copper stocks. The present prospect is that prices will recover to the level where the merits of the coppers entitle them to sell, and that they will be considerably higher than they are now selling."

WISCONSIN'S DAY AT WORLD'S FAIR

that sprang naturally from the American pioneer spirit. And although later, when the influx of people from Europe began, the state received a very large addition to its population from this source, the political and social foundations had been so well laid that these immigrants, who were of a distinctively high class, were soon assimilated. The Welchman and the Cornishman in the lead district, the German in the Lake Michigan counties, and the Scandinavians in the northern part of the state soon became imbued with the American spirit, and all these divergent nationalities played their proper part in the great work of building up a commonwealth whose appropriate motto is "Forward."

Thus, with its varied industry, and consequent widely distributed wealth, its social institutions and homogeneous people, Wisconsin rightly claims a place in the foremost rank of the great states of this great nation. Besides these material things, which native wealth fosters in Wisconsin this rank, there are other reasons which make its citizens proud of their state—It has never repudiated its debts, it did its full duty in the critical times of the war of the rebellion and responded beyond need in the Spanish-American war. It has furnished to the nation many able statesmen and executive officers. In its entire history Wisconsin has had no blot on its escutcheon.

At this greatest exposition the world has ever known, Wisconsin has properly and liberally provided for a representation. This is a matter of business and of public pride. But there are also historical reasons why this state, though not one of the commonwealths which were created from the Louisiana territory, should feel commemoration of so important an historical event.

Wisconsin, as part of the Northwest territory, a legal heritage from the revolution, may claim to be original American soil. Thus if the Louisiana purchase had not been consummated, this state would have been a part of the United States; but nevertheless the acquirement of this new domain was of utmost importance to Wisconsin. It is a matter of history that the purchase of the Louisiana territory might easily have been frustrated either by the considerable opposition at home or by foreign complications. This leads to instructive speculation as to the economic and historical conditions which would have resulted had the United States, for any reason, failed to acquire Louisiana. If decaying Spain had not ceded Louisiana to France or if Napoleon had not been weakened by military losses or, if what was still more likely, England had secured by prowess of arms, the coveted territory from her hereditary enemy, France, the whole course of American history and development would have been changed.

For the moment let us suppose that some foreign country, strong enough to hold the territory, had continued in the possession of Louisiana. What important pages of American history would never have been written, what glorious deeds of compatriots would never have found record or remembrance. Indeed momentous affairs hinged on the consummation of th Louisiana purchase. There might have been lost to the United States, territory already gained at the price of the blood of the patriots of the revolution. Tennessee and Kentucky and perhaps other thriving communities in the Ohio valley, absolutely dependent, in those days before the railroads, on the use of the Mississippi outlet to market their products and secure supplies, might have forcibly separated from the original states under the pressure and necessity of making favorable terms with the country that controlled their sole artery of commerce. If this international transaction had not occurred would Spain in 1819 have ceded Florida to the United States? Would Texas have sought admission to the Union? The Mexican war, with its dark pages, would never have been fought, and golden California and the rich Southwest would have longer remained undeveloped under Mexican misrule or would have been seized by one of the land-hungry nations of Europe. The somewhat uncertain claims of the United States to the territory where "rolled the Oregon" might never have been established. Our country, now, continent wide, might have been confined between the Mississippi river and the Atlantic ocean, with, as now, British possessions on the north, but on the south a Spanish colony.

These speculations are not idle, but historic possibilities which serve now to point out better than plain statement of fact the enormous importance of President Jefferson's act which, though it "stretched the constitution until it cracked," insured a mighty nation of the American continent and extended freedom and a liberal and republican government to an area more than two thirds the size of all Europe.

Had Wisconsin been developed as a border state, with England checking trade and traffic to the north and some probably unfriendly foreign power to the immediate westward, blocking the natural course of commerce, it requires no great stretch of imagination to see its people cramped and discourngged by a narrowed political horizon and even to this day the magnificent resources of the state undeveloped. Think how stifling to the free spirits of men of Wisconsin to face, when looking across the Mississippi, from Prairie du Chien or La Crosse, the hostile muzzle of foreign cannon! There would have been no Milwaukee and there would have been no Chicago, for an international boundary at the Mississippi river would certainly have diverted, along the lines of least political resistance, the vast trade which has made the Wisconsin metropolis wealthy and its sister city on Lake Michigan great. The enormous commerce in wheat, corn and stock from the plain states of the upper Louisiana territory which now goes eastward, paying toll at Superior, Milwaukee and Chicago, would have been turned southward to the Gulf, where the metropolis of the Mississippi must have been created. Failing a neighboring market for its products, Wisconsin could not have developed manufacturing on a profitable scale, nor realized to advantage the really money which lay in its great pine forests.

A modified analogy of this hypothetical situation is to be found in the conditions which today confront the communities near the Canadian boundary. The international line entails an annual trade loss of millions of dollars to Wisconsin other states similarly situated with respect to it. In these days of cheap and easy transportation it is necessary for the successful business to draw its trade and materials of trade from all directions. The far northern wholesaler has only a half circle for his radius of influence. There are many products which actually lose their value from the impossibility of moving them across this trade dead line. For example it would be an advantage, both for the farmer and the miller, if the hard Manitoba wheat could be brought unrestricted to the mills of Minneapolis and Superior. So, too, if the great Mississippi, under the destiny which presides over nations, had marked the western limits of our country, the business lost to Wisconsin and the other border states woud have been incalculable.

Thus Wisconsin has a particular interest in the commemoration of the centennial of the Louisiana Purchase.

Aside from this particular interest, it is evident that Wisconsin shares in the general benefits accruing from this wholesale extension of the national domain. Viewing in a broader sense the supposition that the Louisiana territory had remained in foreign hands the tremendous import of the purchase it still more forcibly evident. Had the Great river marked the western boundary of the United States it is unlikely that the transcontinental railway systems which, as it were, created wealth along their courses, would ever have been built. The east and west traffic, diminished by more than half in volume, would have necessitated higher freight charges. The manufacturing of the eastern and central states, failing in both a sufficient supply of raw material and a wide home market, would have been seriously limited. The mutual loss of trade between the states on either side of the Mississippi, across which there is now, and we hope forever will be, the freest of interchange, would represent the business of an empire. It is this interest in the general results of the purchase which gives Wisconsin further occasion to share in its commemoration.

The Louisiana territory has afforded a vast field of opportunity for the men of Wisconsin, a field made available and attractive because under the same flag that sheltered them at home. Beginning with the migration of hundreds of sturdy men from this state to the California Eldorado in 1849, there has moved westward an increasing number of Wisconsin's sons, who found new homes, much prosperity and frequent honors in the Dakotas, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Colorado and Montana; all states carved from territory ceded by Napoleon. The wealth and honor which have come to these emigrants have reflected profit and pride to thousands of fathers and mothers and relatives at homes, so that the new kingdom at the very door of the state has thus been of great personal advantage to its people.

Thus we may conclude that, although Wisconsin is not represented by an arch and statute on the Terrace of States, it has a special call to join in this magnificent commemoration, because the state has a direct commercial advantage accruing from the Louisiana Purchase, because it participated in the general benefits and because this acquired domain is today the home of thousands of its sons and former citizens.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Striking Miners Shot By Guards at Atlantic Mine.

Houghton—Three Finnish strikers, who tried to prevent the strikebreakers from going to work at the Atlantic mine, were shot by the officers on guard. None of the men was fatally hurt.

Menominee—Leopold Loewenstein, a well-known merchant of Menominee, was robbed of $180 by pickpockets at Harlnette last Friday evening. The sacngerfest at Marinette had brought large crowds to the city and it is said the light-fingered gentry was well represented.

Munising—Just before time for the day's work to begin the C. H. Worcester shingle mill at Munising was discovered to be on fire. The flames had secured a fair start, but fortunately Manager Chapman keeps a line of hose attached to the hydrant near the mill, and the men soon had a stream on the blaze. The fire was out before the fire department arrived in response to the alarm which had been turned in. The mill probably would have been entirely destroyed if the line of hose had not been in readiness for immediate use. Everything was so dry that the flames would have been beyond control before the firemen could have reached the mill.

Norway—Recently it was brought to the notice of Deputy Game Warden R. M. Sampson, of Norway, that men were blasting fish in Pine creek. Sheric Cudlip and Deputy Sheriff Kendall were notified, went to the scene and arrested three men who had in their possession a sack with about 400 fish, some of which were not two inches long. The prisoners pleaded guilty as charged, and Justice A. Patenaude fined them $25 and costs, a total of $89.55 or about $20 each. The money was paid.

Ironwood—Mary Abraham, an Arabian peddler at Ironwood, was convicted by a jury in Justice Shea's court for obtaining $19 from Mary Joseph, one of the country people, by false pretenses, and was given the alternate of paying a fine of $20 and costs or serving a sentence of twenty-five days in jail. The case was appealed to the circuit court. According to the Ironwood Times, Mrs. Abraham swore at the trial that she was selling lace that cost 5 cents a yeard for as much as $1 and $1.50 per yard whenever she could find some housewife who happened to fancy her wares, and other articles in proportion.

Huron—W. G. Cadebread and H. F. Hubbard, two farmers, of Beadle county, S. D., quarreled and Hubbard shot and instantly killed Cadebread. Hubbard is in jail at Huron. Both were prominent and well to do.

Clinton Joy, a freight brakeman running out of this city, was killed by a way freight near Hetland. The engineer saw him lying on the track, but it was too late to stop the train. The brakeman had been sent to flag the way freight, but either fell asleep on the track or was stunned by the fall on the rails, as it was impossible for the engineer to arouse him. He leaves a father, two brothers and a sister in this city to mourn his loss.

Aberdeen—Francis Lee Shadduck was killed by being thrown from a buggy while turning a corner. His skull was crushed. Shadduck was 23 years old.

Pierre—A gang of fifty Italian, who were doing track work for the Northwestern road east of this city, struck for a raise of wages. The company has taken its construction train to Huron and left the Italians in camp here.

Pierre—John Johnson, a Sully county farmer living near Onida, died yesterday from the effects of a blow in his forehead from an axe.

The injury was caused by the axe, which he was using, catching a wire clothes line and glancing against his head.

Deadwood—It is stated that President Roosevelt has offered the position of United States marshal of Alaska to Capt. Seth Bullock of this city and that the proffer has been declined. Capt. Bullock is forest supervisor of the Black Hills timber districts and has valuable interests in this vicinity.

HORSE WAS WISER.

Young Man Makes Exhibition of Himself.

A young man riding what was evidently a finely bred and well cared for horse, created considerable interest yesterday afternoon at the corner of Twelfth avenue east and First street, by doing circus feats with the animal. An excavation has been made at the corner and there were some movable barriers to prevent teams from being driven into dangerous places.

The rider interested some boys in moving one of these into place so he could jump his horse over it. The horse balked every time and the rider vented his cruelty on the animal by beating it over the nose and forehead with the loose rein. The young man did not show any respect for the premises at the corner for he rode his horse over the sidewalk and turf at the northeast corner, dirtying the sidewalk and spoiling the grass. He told the boys the horse was Highball, with a record. He finaly started off eastward, with loose rein, swinging his arms cowboy fashion.

WEST DULUTH

SIDEWALK SCRAP

Some Property Asked to Pay Twice For Construction.

Contractor Claims Pay For Walks Built By Another.

Sidewalk construction is causing trouble in West Duluth. Because some of the property owners allowed a person other than the men who had been awarded the contract by the city to build their walks, they may have to pay twice for the work, for the regular contractor says that he intends taking the matter into the courts, in an attempt to gain possession of the money which he claims is his according to law.

Last April the city council awarded W. H. Kilten the contract for building all the walks to be laid by the city this year between the dates of April 1 and November 1. Under a city ordinance the property owner is given thirty days in which to have built the sidewalk ordered constructed by the city. At the expiration of the thirty days, if the owner has not let the contract for laying the walk, the matter is put into the hands of the man hired under contract by the city. Following the acceptance of the walks by the city, on their completion, the property is assessed and owners are allowed thirty days in which to make payment for the walks. If they fail to pay within the specified time, under a charter provision, ten per cent is added to the cost of the walks.

Walks were this year ordered laid on both sides of Fifty-sixth, Fifty seventh and Fifty-eighth avenues west, from Ellinor street to Grand, and along both sides of Cody street from Fifty-fifth to Fifty-ninth avenues west. The thirty days' time limit in which the owners might themselves see to laying the walks expired June 15, and since that date some of the owners of property along the streets affected have let contracts for sidewalk construction to J. Jorgenson.

R. L. Cochran, agent for Contractor Kilter, alleges that the contracts were let owing to a misunderstanding on the part of the propery otwners, on representations made by Jorgenson to the effect that if the sidewalks were not built within thirty days the 10 per cent would be added to the cost. Mr. Cochran stated this morning that the matter was already in the hands of Kilten's attorneys, and that every legal effort would be expended to compel the property owners in question to pay Kilten for the walks, whether he built them or not. It is claimed this can be done, according to the terms of the contract with the city. Mr. Cochran stated further that under the city contracts the walks were being laid at a cost of $8.28 a lot, while Jorgenson is charging $9 a lot.

THE NEWSIES' PICNIC.

West Duluth Boys to Be In the Fun.

Nearly 100 West Duluth newsboys, who regularly deliver The Herald to their customers, are awaiting in a fever of impatience and excitement the seventh annual Herald newsboys' picnic, to be given at Fond du Lac, on July 6, next Wednesday.

It is planned to make the picnic the best and most elaborate yet given by TheHerald. Manager H. D. Clow of the steamer Newsboy has donated the use of his boat for the day and will carry the boys to Fond du Lac in the morning, returning in the afternoon in time to allow them to attend to the distribution of papers.

The West Duluth boys will meet at the Spencer drug store corner at 7:20 a. m. picnic day, and will take the next car to Duluth, under the leadership of Donald Holmes. This announcement is given as a warning to people in general, so that they may steer clear of this particular car, if they value their peace of mind and safety. A more noisy or mischievous aggregation than a carload of 100 newsboys out for a good time it would be impossible to find, as conductors who have carried the bunch in the past can testify. The ingenuity of the average newsboy under these conditions is something diabolic, and conductors and passengers alike come under the evil influence. Although they appear to do so unwillingly they get as much enjoyment out of the pranks of the boys as the little merchants do themselves. The least of these pranks in the past have been pulling the bell and register cords, giving the conductor nothing but pennies as fare, etc.

The West Duluth boys will meet the Duluth and West End boys in the circulation room of The Herald, where they will receive orders and tickets from Circulation Manager A. C. Pearson, later marching to the dock at the foot of Fifth avenue west. The boat will leave at 8 a. m., and returning will arrive at 3:45 p. m.

The list of athletic events at the picnic grounds is a large one, with opportunity for any number of contestants to enter, and the prizes offered are numerous and valuable. Two barrels of lemonade will be served on the grounds instead of one barrel as formerly.

FIRST FOR TEN YEARS.

W. M. Holmes, of the Milwaukee firm of Holmes Bros., arrived in the city yesterday. He will remain here several days looking after his extensive real estate interests in West Duluth. Mr. Holmes has not visited Duluth before in ten years. He expresses surprise and pleasure at the great growth and advancement made by the Zenith City dunring the last decade. He was formerly a business man in West Duluth.

"Your city has certainly made great strides," he said this morning, "and there is no doubt in my mind that she has a brilliant future before her. I own a good deal of property here, and am very glad of it. It would be hard to find a safer investment than Duluth real estate, according to my notion. I am glad to see Central avenue paved, and believe that just the right kind of material was used for paving. This kind of material should be used extensively on Duluth's streets, for it exactly answers the purpose."

One of the Duluth societies will give a picnic at Zenith park next Sunday, and it is expected that the success of last Sunday will be repeated. WILL THERE BE TWO CONVENTIONS AT ST. PAUL?

cry of fraud rents the air. It has been their policy from the beginning to claim everything in the hope of influencing all close districts and creating what is known as a band wagon, with a struggle to be on the winning side, but the scheme failed miserably. In the Twin Cities, where the greatest effort was made, and where 180 delegates were at stake, the Collins supporters were victorious at every clash. While it begins to look more and more as though Collins would be nominated on the first ballot, the state convention on Thursday may be a warm one, as many of the Dunn leaders are thorough masters of all that is shrewd and tricky in politics and will bombard the convention with every known species of artful manipulation. It looks more and more, however, as though Collins had votes to spare."

The state convention promises to be the most exciting ever held in this state, and it is predicted that even the Democratic state convention recently held in Duluth will appear tame by comparison. Nine counties will have contesting delegations seeking recognition, and many prominent Republicans are making the prediction that there will be two state conventions as a result of the bitter feeling that will be engendered by the settlement of these contests.

THE HENNEPIN BOLT.

Dunn Supporters Objected to Contested Delegates Voting.

Minneapolis, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Like Ramsey, Hennepin county was the scene of two Republican county conventions yesterday. Dunn supporters bolted the meeting and adjourning to the outside agreed on a set of delegates of their own.

The convention met in the Fourth ward Republican hall in Minneapolis at 2 o'clock. The meeting opened peaceably enough, though there was plenty of cheering and rooting from each side, which kept the chairman busy trying to suppress. The break, however, came just before the temporary organization was made permanent. By a majority of thirteen, Gen. G. P. Wilson, a Collins man, was elected chairman over Charles H. Huhn, a Hennepin Dunn leader. Yells rent the air when Gen. Wilson's election was announced. Protests were filed immediately on the ground that delegates whose places in the convention had been contested had no right to vote, but they were ignored.

A break right here seemed imminent, but the Dunn adherents bided their time and waited until the committee on credentials had been appointed and had reported. No opportunity was lost, however, to enter a protest while their selection was being made.

The report of the committee on credentials practically seated all contested Collins delegates, and without further comment a majority of the Dunn delegates, headed by James A. Peterson, walked out of the hall, yelling lustily for Dunn as they streamed down the stairway.

Hisses followed them and pandemonium reigned for a while, but quiet was at length secured, and the work of the convention was quickly rushed to a finish.

United States Marshal Grimshaw, as the county chairman, presided over the convention, and he was active in the proceedings throughout. He presided until a temporary chairman, Gen. Wilson, was named. A full set of Collins delegates was named.

While there was a bolt, not all the Dunn delegates left the meeting. Many of them remained and participated in the business transacted, despite the fact that they were decidedly in the minority. The vote, after the bolt, was 351 to 57.

After the bolt the Dunn delegates gathered outside the hall and quickly organized by selecting James A. Peterson as chairman, and J. C. Sweet, as secretary. It was unanimously agreed that all Dunn delegates who had been thrown out in the Collins session be seated. After instructing the chairman to select 113 delegates favorable to the candidacy of Mr. Dunn, the meeting adjourned.

The list of delegates were selected by Mr. Peterson and the Hennepin Dunn managers last night.

THE RAMSEY COUNTY BOLT.

Dunn Men's Action Was a Prearranged Affair.

St. Paul, June 29.—The bolt of the Dunn men from the Ramsey county convention was sensational. When the convention was called to order, the aisles were crowded with spectators, and some trouble was experienced in forcing them to the rear of the hall. It took fully ten minutes to clear the aisles and get the delegates into their seats. Then the chair announced that the convention was ready for business.

Eli Warner placed Gen. H. W. Childs in nomination, the name being received with cheers by the Dunn cohorts. In his speech Mr. Warner declared his belief in Dunn's success, even "without Ramsey county," and this again set the convention in an uproar, it being impossible for the chair to secure order for several minutes.

As soon as quiet had been secured, Chairman F. G. Warner announced that the roll call would be taken, and it was here that the obstructive tactics of the Dunn faction developed.

Eli Warner interrupted W. H. Lightner to enter a protest against the roll call being proceeded with until the legal standing of the delegates had been ascertained.

Calls from all over the house for the chair to proceed. The chairman tried to explain. His gavel fell with force on the small table in front of him, but it was useless. Every Dunn man in the hall wanted to talk and the Collins delegates were equally as insistent.

Finally the chair announced that the roll call would proceed and here Eli Warner's announcement of a bolt came. He called to his followers and they fairly streamed down the narrow doorway into the street. Hisses from those who remained followed them.

"We can't get fair treatment here," Mr. Warner fairly screamed, and with this remark started for the rear of the hall, followed by others of the Dunn minority. "Come on, boys, we will have a convention of our own," he called, and started with the others for Raudenbush hall. Fred Schiffmann, Dar Reese and Gen. Childs, with others of the minority, remained, but left later. Dar Reese stood in front of the chair Dar Reese and Gen. Childs, with others were talking, but it was denied. The Raudenbush hall convention, from all accounts, was planned a week ago. The hall was rented for the occasion last Friday for the purpose of being prepared.

It was quite a while before the excitement attending the bolt subsided, but when it did the work of the convention proceeded quietly and with Pandemonium reigned as the call proceeded, but the retirement of the Dunn forces had made the result assured, and, although both Gen. Childs and Dar Reese sought to interrupt with motions, neither was recognized. The result was announced by the tellers was: Hallam, 192; Childs, 37. The convention then proceeded to elect sixty-seven delegates to the state convention and instruct them for Collins.

THE DUNN CONVENTION.

When partial quiet was secured Eli S. Warner got the floor and called the convention to order. He said that the tactics of the opposition had compelled the course that had been adopted, and had made the action taken the only thing possible under the circumstances. He was satisfied, he continued, that the state convention would ratify the course of those present.

Dar F. Reese then took the floor and placed Gen. H. W. Childs in nomination for temporary chairman.

His voice rang out above the din of the circus parade and was punctuated speed.

Then the roll call was announced. at intervals by furious cheering.

"We know we had a majority of the regularly elected delegates," he said. "For centuries our foretathers struggled that government by the people should be an established fact, and should we tamely see popular rights trampled under foot by an arrogant organization that recognized neither right nor justice?" Concluding, Mr. Reese said: "Our course is just, and we'll elect here today sixty-seven delegates who will be among the 500 that will cast their votes next Thursday for 'Honest Bob' Dunn."

Numerous seconds to Gen. Childs' nomination were made, and that gentleman was elected by a risfing vote. Gen. Childs walked to the platorm and was received with a bedlum of cheers, the delegates standing and waving their hats.

When quiet was restored Gen. Childs said:

"If anything is dear to the Republican heart it is justice. The only reason I take it that we are gathered here is that we feel an injustice was done us in the other convention. We are here as Republicans as we were there. We are here because a sense of justice, a regard for ourselves and for the principles of the party demand our presence here. I trust the justice of our cause will appeal so strongly to the state convention that there will be no question whatever but the delegates we select will be seated and have a voice in the state convention.

Resolutions were adopted indorsing Dunn for governor, Donahower for attorney-general and Jaggard for supreme court justice and 67 delegates to the state convention were elected.

COOK COUNTY FOR DUNN.

Cook county delegates to the state convention at St. Paul, five in number, arrived in Duluth this morning on the steamer Easton, and they will cast five votes for Dunn at the convention tomorrow.

The Cook county convention was held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, although it had been reported that it was held at 6 a. m., in order to give the delegates a chance to get through to St. Paul in time for the convention. But the primaries were held Saturday evening, and about twenty-five delegates to the county convention sat in that event yesterday afternoon at Grand Marais.

Charles J. Johnson presided at the meeting and the following were elected delegates: Charles J. Johnson, C. H. Carhart, John S. McKay, Andrew Larson and C. A. Nelson.

Although there were no instructions issued for the delegates, resolutions were adopted indorsing Dunn as a candidate, indorsing the services of J. Adam Bede as congressman, and indorsing Theodore Roosevelt as candidate for the presidency.

A new county comittee was elected, consisting of Charles J. Johnson, chairman; C. H. Carhart, secretary; John S. McKay, Martin Jacobson, August J. Johnson, Fred Jackson, Alexander Doian.

The five delegates left Grand Marais last evening at 5 o'clock. They will go on to St. Paul this evening.

HAS SHARP BULGE

Market Lower Early In Day But Later Advance Swiftly.

Alarming Reports From Southwestern Wheat Fields—Flax Steady.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 29.—The wheat market today opened slightly firmer because of the wet weather in the Southwest where the harvest is on but soon afterward weakened and sold lower. It then started on an advance that carried it better than 1c above yesterday's closing prices. A very alarming report from Crop Expert Snow had considerable to do with starting the buying. He reports the wet weather in Kansas as doing great damage.

The Liverpool market was weak, closing with a loss of 1½@⅝d. Reports from Argentine and Russia were favorable and this led to the decline in the English markets. Paris was unchanged to 1¾c higher.

The Duluth market was the strongest, advancing 1¼c for the July and 1c for the September, while Minneapolis advanced 1c for the July and ⅞-1c for the September; Chicago, ⅝c for the July and ⅝-¾c for the September, and New York ½c for July, and ¼-⅝c for September.

Primary receipts were 213,000 bus, last year 307,000 bus. Shipments, 195,000 bus last year 251,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 18,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼d higher to ¼d lower. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅛ higher. September oats closed ⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 645,000 bus, last year 770,000 bus. Shipments 226,000 bus, last year 240,000 bus. Clearances were 134,700 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was dull as ever today. The July option opened a little firmer, being quoted at 91½c asked, ⅛c above yesterday, and it then fell off to 91¼c at 9:48. From that point it rallied to 91⅝c at 10:45 and held there for about an hour, after which it went up with a rush to 92⅝c at 12:55 and closed there, an advance of 1¼c. The September option closed 1c higher at 82c.

Cash offerings were fairly liberal and prices were unchanged at July price for No. 1 northern and 2c under for No. 2.

Flax was dull and closed 1¢ higher for July, ½c higher for September and ⅛c higher for October.

Rye and oats were unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Additional Rains Caused Steady Tone In Wheat.

Chicago, June 29.—Additional rains in the Southwest nearly offset the effect of the lower Liverpool cables causing a fairly steady tone in the wheat market today. There was little animation in trading, the volume of business being extremely light. September opened a shade lower at 80⅝c, sold up to 80⅝@⅝c, and reacted to 80⅜c. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 208 cars, against 185 last week and 190 a year ago.

Later in the day, the market became strong, the principal factor being numerous bullish reports from the Southwest. Active buying of the deferred futures under the influence of which September advanced to 81⅝@⅞c. The close was at 81¼c, a net gain of ⅝@¾c.

Favorable crop prospects brought out considerable selling of corn by pit traders resulting in an easier tone in that cereal. Lower cables also had a depressing influence. September opened unchanged to a shade lower, at 48¼c to 48¼@⅜c, and sold off to 48⅜c. Local receipts were 172 cars with 21 of contract grade.

The strength of wheat caused an improved demand for corn resulting in a firm undertone. The market closed at the high point. September being up ⅝c, at 48⅝@¾c.

The action of wheat and corn was the chief factor governing the oats market. Trading was very light. September opened unchanged at 31¾c, and held at 31¾c. Local receipts were 62 cars.

Provisions were easier in sympathy with a lower hog market. September pork opened down 2½c at $12.87½, sold at $12.90 and then reacted to $12.82½; September lard was off 2½ at $7.05. Ribs opened unchanged at $7.32½, sold at $7.55 and then settled back to the opening figure.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

State crop reports:

North Dakota: Heavy rain fall in nearly all parts of the state during the fore part of the week, and while no injury was done to crops on high lands, those on low lands, especially in the southeastern portion, have suffered considerable damage; many acres of grain being under water and some of it has been drowned out. The fore part of the week was warm and favorable for growth, but the excessive rainfall, following with cool weather, has in many localities caused a setback to crops.

Early wheat is commencing to head out, but fields in low places are very weedy, and the weeds are making rapid headway along with the late sown grain. On the whole the reports indicate the crop doing well, except that which has been seeded to so much moisture, in some places causing it to turn yellow. Oats, rye and barley are heading and are making good progress. Flax is making slow growth, owing to the heavy rains and cool weather, and some on low land is turning yellow. Some millet is being sown yet; that which is up is doing well. Corn has been backward on account of cool, wet weather, and will not advance much without warm weather from now on. Potatoes have been backward, but with warm weather will make rapid growth, having received ample moisture.

Minnesota: The temperatures were higher in the middle of the week than at ers in some parts of the state on every day of the week, the most general rains being on the 22nd, 24th and 25th, with rain in northwestern portions on the 23rd. there were heavy local rains on the 22nd and 23rd, and some hail in Ottertail county on the 23rd. Generally the rains were very beneficial, though wild hay meadows are so flooded that wild grass cutting will be delayed. Wheat, oats, barley and flax are growing splendidly in all parts of the state, though in a few places there is a tendency to lodging of wheat and oats. A little wheat in central and southern portions is beginning to head; some oats and the early barley are heading, while late barley and late flax are coming up nicely. Rye will soon be ready for to harvest. Weeds are growing rapidly in a few fields where the soil was not in good condition for the seed. Corn and potatoes are growing rapidly, but cultivation has been retarded by the wet condition of the soil. The hay crop promises to be very large; timothy will hardly be ready to cut before July 1, but a little clover has already been cut.

* * *

A message from Crop Expert B. W. Snow at Emporia, Kas., this morning reads as follows: "Continued heavy rains in Missouri valley have damaged wheat and corn prospects. Rivers are out of banks in Eastern Kansas, the third flood of the season. Corn is only a few inches high and lost in weeds where it should be ready to lay by. Bottoms are under water and damaged beyond repair. Missouri and Illinois corn is backward and late. The position of the crop is serious. If hot, dry weather should attend tasseling in August. Wheat in the Missouri valley is overripe and fields too wet to harvest. Much is down and tangled. A fair yield should be had is it could be secured, Kansas' estimate must be lowered. Oats crop heading snort, and yield disappointing.

Chicago Record-Herald: As to crop conditions in Missouri, a traveling man reports that the wheat is ripe for harvesting, but continued heavy rains prevent farmers from getting into the fields. If he weather will only turn clear and warm at once the crop will be a fine one. There was some damage, however, done by rain during the blooming period. Oats are looking fine and promise a big yield. Corn is backward and spotted—the best of it will not make corn unless we have some good hot weather.

B. E. Baker's Chicago Grain Letter: Wheat—Less was heard today about the new wheat being offered at sacrifice prices and good deal more about the huge deficiency in the volume of the year's productions. The V. Jones' report making the winter wheat production for the year, 344,000,000 bushels or 57,000,000 short of the sufficient yield of the year before brought the trade back to a recognition of what "they are up against" this year should there be any demand for America wheat abroad. With Russia and Roumania still sending bad accounts of their wheat crop prospects who can doubt the certainty of an European demand here sooner or later? Jones was substantially corroborated by another well known crop expert now in Kansas who wired this morning of Kansas now suffering from the third flood of the season. Receipts continue light the total at the western primary markets being about 100,000 bushels short of what they were last year. It looks to us like a 600,000,000 bushels crop of wheat and we believe that would mean dollar wheat for a great many months out of the next twelve in the country.

Corn—Liquidation in July holdings was the principal feature in the corn market. Outside of changing July holdings over to September, very little business was done in the pit. September held firm while the other was declining slightly. Cleaners turned out about 155,000 bus contract grade, which for the most part will be tendered on open July trades. Estimates of tomorrow's local receipts, 253 cars. Jones' remark about the critical condition of the corn crop as it now stands will bear careful consideration.

Oats—Trade in oats was of small proportions and without significance otherwise. Estimated receipts for tomorrow 119 cars.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—It was a more active market with a broadening tendency. Cables were rather weak and this gave a little weakness to the early prices here, but the reaction was sharp and the closing strong. Broomhall cabled that the weakness in Liverpool was largely due to rains in Russian and Argentine. There are complaints of rust and the results of the recent rains. These are confirmed by both Jones and Snow. With existing conditions declines are hardly likely and a sharp advance may easily take place. With current estimates on European crop at something like 260,000 bus less than last year's yield. European markets are not likely to be indifferent to any material impairment of the crop outlook in this country.

Corn—The whole market was weak early, but closed up stronger on rather unfavorable crop advices in the Jones and Snow reports. There was a moderate business done for shipment, but the demand is not very sharp.

Oats—It is not an active market, but fairly strong. It was influenced somewhat by the strength in corn and wheat at the close. We can only reiterate our previous views that September and December oats are cheap and are not likely to lose the buyer much money in any event, and with unfavorable crop developments would likely yield handsome profits.

Provisions—It was a rather steadier market on a rather smaller volume of business. Receipts a little in excess of last year. Most of the trading was of changing over the July stuffs to future months. Shipments of products about the same as a year ago.

* * *

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: There is a noticeable change in the character of the crop advices from the Southwest. Complaints are increasing and we are sorry to say that some of them are from very good sources. Kansas City says: "Good many reports coming in this morning of rust. The weather in that section is still unsettled, although recent rains have not been heavy." We hardly think that the July or September will hurt the buyer much at present prices.

SECOND WOMAN IN CASE.

Butte, Mont., June 29.—Investigation into the murder of Robert Finnegan, who was shot by Mrs. Morrison, Friday morning, disclosed the fact that an unidentified woman played a part in the tragedy in the lonely cabin near Mount Moriah cemetery.

Finnegan was found in a nude condition, breathing his last, upon the floor of Mrs. Morrison's cottage, and in a statement charged Mrs. Morrison with shooting him as he lay sleeping in bed. According to the police, Mrs. Morrison surprised her lover in bed with a mysterious woman, whose name Finnegan shielded to the last. In a jealous rage Mrs. Morrison attempted to slay both, but Finnegan, grappling with the frenzied woman, received four bullets in his body. The clothing of the strange woman was found in Finnegan's room.

Mrs. Morrison acknowledges the shooting, but claims self-defense. She refuses to discuss the tragedy. She had boasted of her power over Finnegan's affections.

FIRMNESS SHOWN

By the Stock Market, But It Was Very Dull.

Advances Were Generally Fractional and Closing Was Steady.

New York, June 29.—Gains of a half in Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Locomotive were the only incidents in the opening stock market today. But few stocks were quoted and the general list scarcely stirred from last night's level.

The drift of prices between 10 and 11 o'clock was bereft of significance owing to the listless character of the trading. Quotations were shaded slightly in spots and bettered at other points. Pennsylvania sold ⅜ above yesterday's closing and Metropolitan Street Railway as much below, reflecting the extremes. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo and Locomotive advanced a point each.

The narrow movement of prices was entirely irregular and frequently changing directions. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred and Pullman rose a point. St. Paul advanced ½. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Only a few transactions were made after midday, but these were at a higher level, particularly in St. Paul, Pennsylvania and Reading. Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred lost nearly a point.

Prices showed an appreciable change, but the surface of the market was hard and unyielding. Hide and Leather preferred lost 1½. Sciss-Sheffield fell 1¼. Northern Central 2 and Wheeling & Lake Erie second preferred 3%.

Gains of 1¾@2 in the Metropolitan Traction stocks hardened the market slightly in sympathy. New Haven, Atchison preferred and Paper preferred rose about a point. Kansas City Southern preferred fell 1 and Snuff 4¾. The closing was steady but very dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is still awaiting the holidays and convention. Operations are at a minimum. Current reports of railroad earnings do not continue very satisfactory, but are disregarded almost wholly by holders of stocks. There is a good deal of bearish sentiment among professional traders, but their lack of success in that line discourages any very confident operations on their part. Crop advices today are on the whole a little less favorable as to stock grain crops. The stock market is, however, less quick to act upon such advices in the absence of confirmation than the grain markets are. We see no change in the general situation and no reason to expect lower prices.

* * *

F. M. Dick to B. E. Baker: The lifeless tone of the weeks ago has returned. With the exception of three good recovery in Metropolitan, fluctuations have been insignificant. This stock is thoroughly discredited. Its former backers who put it to 260 are dead or out of the market. Every one is short of it and prices are predicted which would look high for a second class railroad stock. Notwithstanding this the earnings are showing enormous increases and we believe the property will be put out.

* * *

Sweet to B. E. Baker: With a three days holiday in front of us and with the uncertainty that existing regard to the action of the democratic convention to be held next week anything like activity in the stock market cannot be looked for.

* * *

Dick to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market has been very dull again today but was somewhat firmer than during past two days. A sharp rally of nearly 3 points in Metropolitan helped the market. None of the other advances, however, were more than fractionally. Railroad earnings were discouraging. Erie, Southern Railway and other lines reporting no decreases. There was not much news. Market closed dull but steady. Very little activity is looked for until after the holidays.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 29.—The cotton market opened barely steady at a decline of 2@5 points under liquidation presure in response to lower cables than expected and continued favorable weather and crop accounts. At first, trading was quiet, but after the first few minutes, there was a bear raid in the old crop and the market becoming more active and weaker wes depressed to a net loss of 17 points on the near months, and of about 8 points on the later positions, from which it was rallied later by local covering. At the end of the first hour prices were back to about the opening figures. The south was a good seller all the morning and seemed to be filling up the demand from local shorts.

Cotton spot closed steady; middling uplands, 10.85; middling gulf, 11.10. Sales, 874 bales. Futures closed quiet and steady; June, 10.25; July, 10.28; August, 10.27; September, 9.67; October, 9.53; November, 9.48; December, 9.52; January, 9.56; February, 9.57; March, 9.59.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: What little trading there was today, was in a few of the coppers. The extreme dullness of New York is encouraging traders to give more attention to coppers and it will not be surprising if considerable activity comes later. The general New York list was firmer, but nothing in the nature of activity developed. The coming triple holiday is responsible for providing we have little hope for a return of activity before next week.

* * *

New York to Paine, Webber & Co.: It is learned that the recent activity in Phoenix Mining stock is based upon a plan for the consolidation with the Mount Shasta Gold Mines corporation. The consolidation includes plans for providing a considerable amount of working capital and it is understood there will be a readjustment of the capitalization for the purpose of placing the stock traded in on a basis of dollars instead of cents. Par value of new stock will probably be $10 a share. Parties in Chicago and Philadelphia have been principal factors in bringing about the consolidation.

THE BALANCE OF POWER

May Be Held By Eddy In the State Convention.

St. Paul, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—It seems possible that Frank M. Eddy may walk off with the gubernatorial plum, if there is no split in tomorrow's convention. He has about fifty delegates instructed for him, and with the contests all decided in favor of Collins' delegates, Eddy, apparently, will hold the balance of power and be able to dictate terms to both of the principal contenders. It is said the Eddy delegates will vote with the Collins men in effecting organization of the convention. Even if there is a bolt, Eddy may be able to follow the precedent established in Wisconsin and swing the pendulum his way.

NAVAL RESERVE BALL.

Fine Event at the Park Point Auditorium.

Everything is now practically in readiness for the Naval Reserves' ball at the Park Point pavilion tomorrow night. The arrangement committees have spared no pains to make the event the social success of the season, and it is now up to the reception committee to do the rest. This committee is a capable one, as witnessed by the names of those who compose it: Mayor Cullum, Hon. T. W. Hugo, Col. M. M. Gasser, Capt. Alexander McDougall, Capt. J. Monaghan, M. H. Alworth, W. A. McGonagle and Edward Mendenhall.

Music will be furnished by Flaaten's orchestra. There will be special car and ferry service to Duluth and Superior until the last guests have taken their departure, so those attending the dance will not have to leave until they get good and ready to do so.

TATTOOING BY SAMOAN

Nearly Kills Husband of Lily Langtry.

San Francisco, June 29.—Capt. Hugo De Bathe of the British army, husband of Lilly Langtry, came near losing his life as a result of being tattooed by a Samoan native during his visit at the South Sea islands. The captain arrived today from Pago Pago. For several weeks he was under the care of a physician, and despite the fact that he is nearly cured, it is probable that he will be crippled for some time, if not for life.

It is a hobby of the captain to have tattoo marks of each country that he visits pricked on his body. At the Samoan islands he engaged a tattocer there to work a small design on his left leg. About a week later the leg pained, and in a few hours later had swelled to an abnormal size. Blood poisoning set in, and for a time it was feared that he would lose his life. A young American surgeon on board of a war vessel was called. He applied heroic treatment with god results. The needle with which the tattooing was done was preserved by Capt. De Bathe, and he will send it to a laboratory to be examined.

BIG BOATS ARRIVE

Sahara and Mullen Are Here on Their Maiden Trips.

Grain Rate Is Cent and Quarter—North West Arrives.

Two new steel lake steamers, the Martin Mullen and the Sarah, arrived in the local harbor last night and today on their maiden trips. Both boats were launched this year, the first at the Cleveland ship yards and the second at Loraine. The Mullen is owned by C. L. Hutchinson, of Cleveland and the Sarah is one of the new Tomlinson boats, and is the second largest boat on the lakes.

The Sarah, Capt. W. D. Ames, steamed into the local harbor sharp at 12 o'clock today. She brings a cargo of 8608 tons of bituminous coal for the Northwestern Fuel company, and is now unloading at Dock No. 1, where the Augustus B. Wolvin discharged her first cargo. This is the second largest cargo of coal ever carried on the great lakes. The Wolvin holds the coal carrying record with 10,300 tons. The Sarah is 474 feet long, 52 feet beam and 29 feet deep.

The Mullen is unloading her cargo of bituminous coal at Y. & L. dock No. 5, East Superior. The mullen measures 416 feet in length, 50 feet beam, and 28 feet in depth.

THE GRAIN RATE.

One and Quarter Cents Asked For Wheat.

The grain rate from Duluth to Buffalo on wheat is now down to 1¼c, the line boats having put it to that figure in their anxiety to get tonnage to fill cargoes. At that figure they have secured something like 250,000 bushels and are getting small lots since the larger amount was placed. There is a rumor afloat, however, that the rate may see 1 cent.

NORTH WEST ARRIVES.

Big White Boat In Ahead of Time.

The North West, the Northern Steamship company's large passenger steamer, arrived at the port of Duluth at 7:20 last evening, forty minutes ahead of schedule time, and cleared on her return trip at 11:30 last night. She was in command of Capt. G. A. Minar.

The steamer brought 100 passengers to Duluth and unloaded 180 passengers at Mackinac Island. A number of the passengers put up for the night at the Duluth hotels. Many are tourists bound for Western poins. President Howard James, of the Northern Steamship company, and F. I. Whitney, general ticket and passenger agent for the Great Northern road, were in the city in honor of the arrival of the North West.

Charles G. Sutherland is purser on the boat this season, while his old position of clerk is filled by Thomas Morrison, who was assistant clerk last year. The boat will make eleven round trips to Duluth this year, one each week. Sept. 6 will mark her last trip of the season.

The ship canal piers were not illuminated last night in honor of the arrival of the North West, as was expected would be the case. They bought the lights will be in condition for ust within a day or two.

The freight and passenger steamer Tionesta, of the Anchor line, also cleared for Buffalo last night, at 11 o'clock. She had a number of passengers on board.

DOUBLE DROWNING IN LIME KILN SLIP

Two Italian Lads Lose Lives Trying to Frighten Another.

Small Skiff Capsizes—Young Lad They Were Teasing Escapes.

As the result of an attempt to frighten a younger lad by rocking a crazy skiff of home construction, John Dandrea and Joe Runk, two young Italian newsboys, were drowned in the limekiln slip at 11 o'clock this morning.

The two boys were paddling about in the slip in the old punt which they had constructed themselves out of some pine boards. Wellington Evans, of 1131½ West Superior street, younger than either, happened along on the city dumping ground at the foot of Eleventh avenue and asked to be paddled across to the salt dock of Cutler & Gilbert.

The two boys took him aboard, and just before reaching the salt dock, attempted to frighten him by rocking the boat. The crazy punt yielded only too well to their efforts, and in an instant all three lads were struggling in the water.

None of them could swim a stroke, but young Evans, by a desperate effort, succeeded in catching hold of the corner of a scow, which was standing by the dock, and held his head above water until assistance arrived.

The other boys sank almost immediately from sight and were drowned.

The screams of the lad clinging to the scow attracted the workmen on the dock and he was speedily rescued. Detectives Terry and Fritz were not long in arriving on the scene, and with the assistance of the men on the dock, they succeeded in recovering the bodies of the two boys, with pike poles. The lads had been in the water for nearly half an hour, however, and although the rescuers worked over them for about forty minutes they could not restore respiration.

John Dandrea was 13 years of age and the Runk lad was 12. Dandrea is the brother of the young Italian girl who has gained considerable notoriety by her attempts to secure a marriage license. His father is in Alaska and he has been living with an aunt at 1121 West Michigan street. The Runk boy lived at 725 West Michigan street.

After all attempts to restore life proved to be in vain, the bodies were removed to the undertaking establishment of Durkan & Crawford, where they await the verdict of the coroner.

The two boys were well known among the "newsies" of the city. They have sold papers and blacked shoes for several years past, on the streets of the city. The father of the Dandrea boy is said to have made considerable money in Alaska, where he went six years ago during the gold rush, leaving his children in charge of an aunt. When his 14-year-old daughter desired a marriage certificate and had a guardian apointed in order to secure it, he wrote that he was able and willing to support the children.

Had Humane Officer Withrow received the certificate of medical inspection of John Dandrea twelve hours earlier the lad would now have been in the state school for orphan and neglected children at Owatonna, instead of Durkan & Crawford's morgue.

Application had been made by the humane officer to place the lad in the Owatonna school, and all of the necessary papers had been filled out, with the exception of the medical certificate. The humane officer intended to leave with the boy yesterday, but since the medical certificate had not yet been received, he went to Grand Rapids instead, to investigate another case, and intended to take Dandrea to Owatonna this afternoon.

The officer returned from Grand Rapids this morning, secured the medical certificate, which had been made out during his absence, and was just starting for the home of Dandrea's aunt, when he heard of the drowning accident.

FOR SHORT STAY

Lieut. Gen. Chaffee to Be Here For One Hour Friday.

Tour of Inspection of Army Posts Comes By Lake.

Lieutenant Chaffee, commander in chief of the United States armies, now on a tour of inspection of western posts, will leave Sault Ste Marie for Duluth tonight at 11 o'clock on the United States lighthouse cutter Amaranth. He will arrive in this city at 8 a. m. Friday and leave an hour later over the Northern Pacific for St. Paul.

These are the arrangements announced in the Army and Navy Register and unless his itinerary has been disturbed since he left Washington a few days ago he will arrive according to schedule.

General Chaffee is at Fort Brady inspecting the troops stationed there today, and he passes through Duluth on his way from the Sault to Fort Snelling, near St. Paul, his next objective point.

His stay in Duluth will be one hour allowing him just time to make a transfer from the boat to a special car on the Northern Pacific train which leaves here at 9 a. m. for St. Paul.

Owing to the short stop that will be made in Duluth there are no preparations for the entertainment of the party here. It will arrive in St. Paul at 2:50 o'clock, Friday afternoon and after the inspection there has been completed will proceed to Bismark, N. D.

The party incudes besides General Chaffee, Mrs. Chaffee, Miss Chaffee, Cadet Chaffee, Quartermaster General Charles F. Humphrey, Captain Grote Hutchinson, Sixth cavalry, military aid, stenographer, clerk and messengers.

While in St. Paul the party will be the guests of Gen. C. C. Carr, at the Aberdeen, where a small informal reception will be held Friday afternoon. Saturday will be spent inspecting Fort Snelling, especially the new construction work now in progress there. In the evening the party will leave via the North Coast limited for the West.

Mrs. Chaffee, Miss Chaffee and Cadet Chaffee will accompany the general on the tour of inspection as far as Yellowstone Park. After a few days touring there they will go to San Francisco for a short visit joining the general in St. Louis, where they will spend a week at the exposition.

WANTED AT HIBBING.

Mike Kinney of Shady Past Is Under Arrest.

Mike Kinney, whom the local police claim has a long and notorious criminal record, is locked up at headquarters awaiting the arrival of Chief Wring of Hibbing, who has a warrant for his arrest on a forgery charge.

Chief Troyer received a telephone message from Hibbing yesterday morning, notifying him that Kinney had fled to the head of the lakes. Detectives Schulte and Irving made a thorough search of the different resorts and lodging houses in Duluth, and then started for Superior to look for Kinney there. Meanwhile Chief McKinnon of Superior had been on the look-out, and one of his men located Kinney while the local detectives were on their way across the bay.

A man named Arthur Grant was arrested with Kinney, but later released.

Kinney was brought to Duluth, and will be sent back to Hibbing this afternoon.

The prisoner is claimed by the local police to have served a term in Stillwater for counterfeting in Hibbing in 1898. His companion at that time is said to have been William King, who is now serving a life sentence for the killing of Bill Carson, at Hibbing, in 1901.

LIVES HELD CHEAPLY.

Aged Fisherman Is Tendered Dollar For Saving Two.

Chicago, June 29.—There are two men somewhere in Chicago who place a low value upon their lives, for they offered Oscar Bruser, fisherman, 50 cents each when he saved them from a watery grave. They sailed a yacht, and her name was the San Merita.

The fisherman is old and lives in a modest cottage at 45 Ninety-first street.

He was out in a rowboat shortly after dark, when he heard a cry for help.

"Help! We're drowning!" came the cry. The fisherman is more than 60 years old, but in all the years that he has spent on the water he has never let a cry of that sort go unanswered.

The old fisherman bent over the oars, the sound alone directing him, for it was dark and he could see nothing.

"Help! Help! We're drowning!" came the cry once more, and the old man veered to the right. He rowed with all his might, for it seemed to him that the voice was feebler the third time.

The old man thought that he detected a floating yacht, and he rowed for it. He was not mistaken, and two men were clinging to the bark.

The old man lifted them into his boat. They became unconscious, and the old man might have been alone as he rowed to the shore. He knew all the arts of the life-savers, and the men opened their eyes soon after they landed.

Then one of them reached into his water-soaked trousers and took out a dollar.

"Here, my good man," he said, and gave the money to the old fisherman. The latter looked at the money and the man.

"No, I guess you need it worse than I do," he answered, and walked away. The names of the men rescued are not known.

PARDON FOR HINSHAW.

Prominent Hoosiers Ask For Preacher's Release.

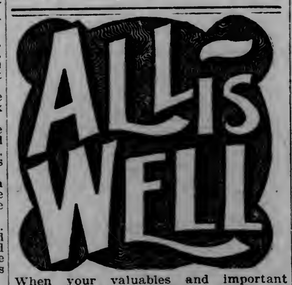

La Porte, Ind., June 29.—The case of Rev. William E. Hinshaw, the noted preacher convict in the penitentiary at Michigan City, will be considered by the board of pardons. No criminal case in the history of Indiana has attracted wider attention or elicited keener interest than that of Hinshaw, who is alleged to have murdered his wife, and who since his confinement has enjoyed privileges never before accorded a life convict. Mr. Hinshaw has always protested his innocence and the fight in his behalf has been waged by men prominent in the politics of the state. A small fortune has been expended in tracing evidence and in following clews, all of which, however, failed to furnish a solution for the mystery.

Several years ago two convicts confessed to complicity in the crime, declaring that Hinshaw was innocent, but their purported confessions were given but little credence by the officers, though their account was correct.

Several months ago Governor Durbin permitted Hinshaw to leave prison on a parole of sixty days. He went to the bedside of his mother, who was supposed to be dying, without guard, and at the termination of the leave of absence returned to prison, donned the garb of a prisoner and went about his duties. His mother is on the way to recovery and is buoyed with the hope that her son would be given his liberty before her death.

Mr. Hinshaw labors zealously in the prison for the betterment of unfortunates who are his companions.

Hinshaw declares that his wife was shot by robbers. The prisoner was shot, but the state set forth that the shots were self-inflicted.

OLD MAN PLEADS

To Be Allowed to Stay In Jail.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 29.—Leon Kovokowski, an old man who lives near Foley, Benton county, was recently brought to the Stearns county jail in this city to serve a term of sirty days for stealing wood. The old man lived alone and was very poor, and the accommodations at the jail were better than he had enjoyed for a number of years. When his term expired last Saturday, he pleaded to be allowed to remain in jail, saying: "This is the only time in years that I have had enough to eat and a comfortable, clean place to sleep. What more do I want at my age? Please let me stay here and I will work as hard as I can." As Saturday was a rainy day the old man was kept over until Sunday and then turned loose, protesting. He started to tramp to his hut near Foley, but declared to the sheriff that he would do something that would bring him back to the jail within a month for a longer term than sixty days. Representations will be made to the Benton county authorities which may result in providing some place where the old man can be cared for.

Torpedo Boat Destroyers Fire 180 Shells Into the Town.

All the Russian Ships at Port Arthur Are Safe.

Tokio, June 30.—Reports from Gensan, Korea, says that the Russian Vladivostok squadron appeared there today and attacked that place. The firing was done by destroyers.

Seoul, June 30.—It is announced from official sources that the Russian Vladivostok squadron, consisting of three cruisers and ten torpedo boats and destroyers, appeared off Gensan today and threw 180 shells into the Japanese settlement.

JAPS ADVANCING

On Liao Yang By the Eastern Road.

Liao Yang, June 30.—The Japanese column which forced the passage of Mo Tien pass is advancing on Liao Yang by the eastern road. A Russian force, commanded by Gen. Count Keller, is holding a fortified position commanding the road on this side of the pass. The object of the Japanese is to cut the Russian communications northward of Liao Yang, while Gen. Kuropatkin is operating in the vicinity of Hai Cheng with practically the whole of the Russian forces.

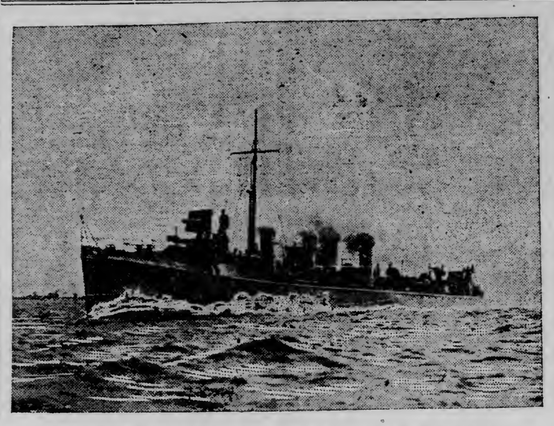

SIGN OF COMING STORM.

No News From Front Received at St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—No word has come from Gen. Kuropatkin later than June 27, and not a single newspaper disatch has been received from the front during the last twenty-four hours. This silence in the theater of war is regarded as a sign of coming storm.

The Bourse Gazette this morning says:

"We are on the eve of a battle which may settle the fate of Manchuria and Korea. Both must become Russian—the former because Russian blood was shed there, the latter because it is essential to the safety of our communi-

RUSSIAN TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYER BURUKOFF, Which got out of Port Arthur harbor Tuesday night and arrived safely at Newchwang, without seeing any Japanese.

cations between Vladivostok and Port Arthur."

RUSSIAN FLEET SAFE.

Not a Ship Was Sunk By the Japs.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—A Russian torpedo boat has arrived at Newchwang from Port Arthur. Her commander denies that any Russian ships were sunk or damaged in the fight off Port Arthur, June 23. He declares that after clearing away the Japanese mines the whole Russian fleet returned safely to the harbor.

FROM PORT ARTHUR.

Russian Torpedo Boat Destroyer Arrives at Newchwang.

Newchwang, June 30.—The Russian torpedo boat destroyer, Lieutenant Burukoff, arrived here from Port Arthur yesterday evening and is berthed alongside the gunboat Sivouch. The river bank was soon crowded with excited natives, who were told by the Russians that the Japanese fleet had been completely destroyed. The officers of the Lieutenant Burukoff tells several stories. One is that Admiral Togo's report of the fighting was exaggerated and that the Russians have made two cruises in the gulf of Pe Chi Li in five days.

Another story is that the Port Arthur fleet has joined the Vladivostok squadron.

The correspondent of the Associated Press sent a messenger who speaks Russian to the side of the destroyer, but the Rusian sailors would not talk, except to say that they left Port Arthur Tuesday night.

Every inch of the boat was crowded with men. She had the appearance of having been in a general engagement, her bow gun having been shot away and it looked as if she had rescued many men. The Lieut. Burukoff is one of the torpedo boat destroyers taken from the Chinese at Taku in 1900.

All the efforts made to obtain information regarding Gen. Kuroki's movement have been futile. An unconfirmed report is circulated that he has reached Hai Cheng and cut off communication with Liao Yang. The Russians have a large force at Ta Tche Kiao.

A Russian officer informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that Gen. Kuropatkin's plan is to place 150,000 men in that vicinity.

Heavy rains continue. The roads throughout Manchuria are quagmires and it is all but impossible to move artillery.

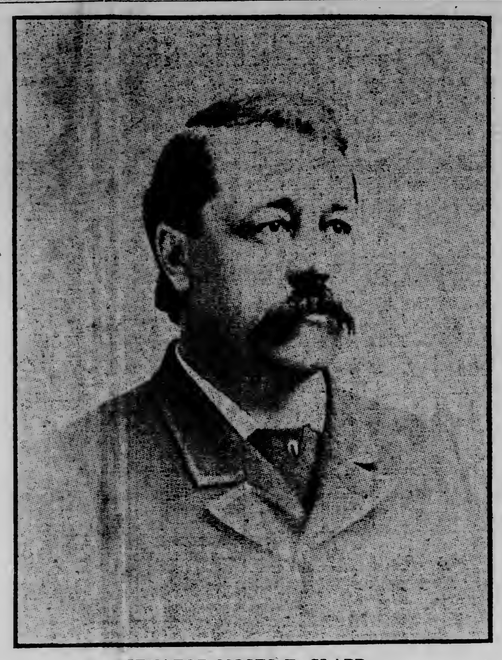

DEMONSTRATIVE MENACE

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The Russky Invalid, the army organ, is the notable, significant exception to the popular belief that a great battle is imminent. It gives no intimation that it is Gen. Kuropatkin's purpose to fall back and not try conclusions, but sees in the developments of June 26 and 27 evidence that the Japanese themselves do not contemplate a decisive engagement.

The paper also expresses the opinion that the massing of armies in the direction of Hai Cheng and Siu Yen is for the purpose of assuring the Japanese occupation of the whole of the Liao Tung peninsula and control of the railroad for an advance on Liao Yang at the end of the rainy season, which, together with the siege of Port Arthur, it regards as the first stage of the Japanese campaign.

The Russky Invalid therefore considers that the movement from Feng Wang Cheng toward Liao Yang is merely a demonstrative menace against the Russian line of communications north of Liao Yang.

STRENUOUS FIGHT BEGUN IN THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION AT ST. PAUL

Dunn and Collins Forces Are Making Great Struggle For Control.

Temporary Chairman Clapp Spoke and Received With Great Applause.

Committees Were Named and Convention Adjourned Until Morning.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Republican state convention which met at 11 o'clock this morning at the Metropolitan opera house, was the culmination of the fiercest contest for the gubernatorial nomination since W. R. Merriam in 1888 wrested the nomination from Governor A. R. McGill and Hon. Albert Scheffer.

The campaign for the nomination practically has been on for a year and has grown in intensity with the passage of time, until today the partisans of the two principal candidates were wrought up to fever heat in their efforts to gain their ends.

Judge Loren W. Collins, who resigned a seat on the bench of the state supreme court in order to become a candidate, is recognized as the candidate of the present state administration. Governor Van Sant has pronounced in his favor and has used all the machinery in his power to secure for him the nomination.

Robert C. Dunn, for eight years state auditor of Minnesota, a newspaper man of great personal popularity, is the other leading candidate, and has had directing his campaign ex-Congressman Joel Heatwole, recognized as one of the ablest political leaders in the state.

Former Congressman Frank M. Eddy is a third factor in the contest, and has depended for his strength largely upon a personal canvas of the several congressional districts.

As between the two principal contestants there has been a contest of bitter personality. An attempt, though not a very successful one, has been made to inject the so-called merger question into the campaign, but both candidates have declared their intention to follow the precedent established by Governor Van Sant, and see that the anti-consolidation laws of the state are carried out to the letter. An effort has been made, through the public examiner's office, to cast discredit upon the administration of Mr. Dunn, while serving as auditor, by showing that he had not punished timber trespassers as severely as the law required.

Mr. Dunn and his friends have controverted these statements and have replied in kind. An effort also was made to involve the United States senatorship in the present contest, it being averred that Heatwole was attempting to succeed Senator Moses E. Clapp. This Mr. Heatwole has denied and upon the state central committee choosing Senator Clapp to act as temporary chairman of the convention, the Dunn people were quick to accept the choice.

In the battle for the head of the ticket, contests for minor offices have been lost sight of, but there were two or more candidates for nearly every nomination to be made. The contest for two positions on the state railroad and warehouse commission brought forth a half dozen candidates and there were equally as many for justices of the supreme court.

The delegates were slow in assembling and there was a marked absence of the usual "rooting." Much complaint was heard regarding the arrangements for seating the delegates. Hennepin and Ramsey county Collins delegations were given the front seats directly in front of the stage, while the big Dunn delegation from St. Louis county was given an obscure corner of the stage itself.

There were many remarks made in a most determined manner that Hennepin would never leave the hall. It was rumored that if unseated the Hennepin delegates would hold their places by force.

The rumor today fixed the responsibility for the situation on Dick O'Connor, who is alleged to have cooked up the Twin City bolts in the interest of the Democrats.

At 10:30 a. m., Senator Clapp appeared on the platform and received an ovation.

The delay in calling to order was unaccountable and the delegates were becoming restive.

The delay was caused by a conference between leaders of the two factions and Senator Clapp in regard to the appointment of a credentials committee. The conference was without result.

At 11:07 Chairman Jamison rapped for order and introduced the Rev. B. F. Langley, who invoked a divine blessing.

The reading of the call was dispensed with and Jamison announced that no temporary roll of the convention had been prepared.

He then introduced Senator Clapp as the choice of the state central committee, as temporary presiding officer.

Senator Clapp was received with an outburst of applause and was frequently cheered during the delivery of an eloquent speech, in which he touched but slightly upon state affairs and dwelt at considerable length upon national affairs, his reference to President Roosevelt bringing forth an especially marked outburst of enthusiasm.

Senator Clapp spoke for over an hour and at the conclusion of his address announced that no list of delegates had been furnished him and that it was therefore impossible for him to announce the various committees. He suggested that a recess be taken so that the credentials of delegates might be turned in and the committees selected. This suggestion was received with favor by the delegates, and a recess was taken until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The conference regarding the composition of the credentials committee resulted in a decision to allow Dunn and Collins seven members each and Eddy one member.

A conference of the leaders resulted in an agreement to adjourn until tomorrow morning after the committees were appointed.

With Regular Credentials For Temporary Organization.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state central committee, at its meeting last night, took action on the contesting delegations, seating all regularly credentialed delegations for the temporary organization, and leaving the final disposition of their fate to the convention. This seats the Collins delegations from Ramsey, Hennepin, Benton and Roseau and the Dunn delegations from Beltrami, Cass, Sherburne and Traverse. Both delegations from Beltrami are thus seated, because both delegations were elected at the time and place fixed by the county committee. Under the resolution passed by the committee, each contesting delegation placed on the temporary roll call will have a voice in the proceedings, except on its own regularity. As to this latter point there is some doubt, some of the Collins men saying that they propose to push it to the extent of having Ramsey, for instance, vote on the question of which Ramsey county delegation shall be seated. This will lead to trouble if it is attempted.

The Dunn men claim that the state central committee meeting was called without their knowledge, and that no Dunn members were invited, though they attended just the same. They also charge Chairman Jamison with giving out all the spectators' tickets to Collins' men, St. Louis county did not get a single spectators' ticket.

Talk of bolting was rife yesterday, but it quieted down last night, and there was little or none this morning. A pretty fight was due, however.

At a meeting this morning, before the convention, the St. Louis county delegation decided to cast its vote for Joseph G. Miller, of Two Harbors, for railroad and warehouse commissioner.

ACTION OF COMMITTEE

Taken In Regard to Disputed Delegations.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—St. Paul was a busy place last night. Practically all of the delegates were present, and there were numbers of every county delegation in the state in the city.

The situation was not a great deal clearer than it was earlier in the day. The only clear thing was that Bob Dunn had a large majority of the delegates, outside of the Twin Cities. The Dunn men claimed he had enough to nominate him without the contested delegations. The Collins men denied this, and claimed the state for their candidate. The chances seemed to be that Dunn did not have enough instructed delegates, and that he would have to get something from Hennepin and Ramsey, or from the doubtful counties, to carry the day.

The state central committee, which is strongly for Collins, was meeting, and it was expected to attempt to pass on the disputed delegations.

The Dunn men denied its right to do this, and said that there was no precedent for it. They said that it should be left to the convention. This, of course, if the contesting delegations were not allowed to vote on their own qualifications, would have meant that the Dunn delegates would be seated, as their was no doubt about the balance of the convention being for Dunn. The committee finally adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the officers of this committee be authorized and directed to prepare a roll of delegates elected from the counties to this convention at the time and place fixed on the call of the committee, and having credentials of such election, and in the case of two delegations so elected and bearing such credentials, that both such delegations be seated, provided that the officers of this committee shall have authority to investigate any alleged fraud in the wording of the credentials, and to determine the same and report thereon to the committee."

The Dunn delegates held an enthusiastic meeting in Mozart hall, addressed by Dar F. Reese, formerly clerk of district court, and James A. Peterson, a Dunn leader in Hennepin county. The sentiments expressed were "No bolt," and "Stand pat."

In the hotel lobbies, if badges were to be considered, it was strongly Dunn. So was the talk. The Dunn men were very confident, and the Collins men, while apparently not so numerous, were equally so.

The sentiment seemed to be that Senator Clapp, temporary chairman of the convention, would make the best of his ticklish position, and try to be as near impartial as possible. His friends, however, expressed great regret that he should have been placed in such a trying position.

THE "PROPHET" DOWIE BACK AT ZION CITY

Chicago, June 30.—After a trip which circled the earth, John Alexander Dowie arrived in Chicago today. When the train pulled in at the La Salle street station, however, there were no cheering followers to meet him. He had sent word ahead that he would not soil his feet with the dust of Chicago. He remained in his private car while it was switched to the Chicago & Northwestern railroad depot, where it was attached to a train scheduled to leave for the Dowieites settlement, Zion City, Ill.

Dowie was eating breakfast when the train pulled in. He was garbed in a white suit and wore a white cap. Beside him sat his son, Gladstone Dowie and a young woman. Mrs. Dowie was not visible.

It was said to be the original plan of Dowie and his party to use cabs in transferring between railroad stations in Chicago. Rumors of possible action in connection with the court proceedings still pending may have changed the program, though no one could be found to confirm this report.

"Dr." Dowie has not yet been discharged from the federal court, being still known on the records as an "alleged bankrupt." Just before Dowie left Chicago for Australia, Attorney Frank H. Scott, representing Marshall Field and company, went into the bankruptcy court and petitioned Judge Kohlsaat to order Dowie to appear for examination. Judge Kohlsaat said at that time that he would not be justified in interfering with Dowie's trip and that the examination could go over until after his return.

Attorney Scott today declined to say whether he would now insist on the examination of Dowie. Attorney Samuel Ettleson, who represents the petitioning creditors in the Dowie case, said today that unless Dowie failed to live up to agreements with the creditors, it was not probable there would be a clash in the case. Attorney Ettleson said:

"Dowie has promised to pay his debts dollar for dollar. He has made two 10 per cent payments. There is always a chance for reverses, but unless some dissatisfied creditor gets busy, I think he will pull through all right."

Though many residents of Zion City were busy all night making the finishing touches in the preparations for the arrival of "Dr." Dowie, the entire place was astir early today. The streets were decorated with flags and bunting. The streets had been rolled and sprinkled and all the stores were closed. Aside from a triumphal arch, the tabernacle was the chief object of decoration. Here Zion flags, blue and gold, with a cross in the center, flourished in the breeze in large numbers. Higher up was the union jack of England and surmounting all was a huge American flag.

The "Arch of Triumph," situated near Elijah avenue, was made of imitation blocks of stone. Each block bore the name of a city which Dowie had visited in his travels. Black letters denoted the cities where Dowie had been received, while the names of the cities that had shunned him stood out in glaring red. The red-lettered cities were:

San Francisco, Sidney, Melbourne, Adelaide, London.

At the sound of a whistle the entire population spent two minutes in silent devotion, and were then given six minutes in which to assemble for a procession, which was to greet Dowie. Ten companies of the Zion City guards, seventy men each, formed in line, while the so-called "Restoration host," 3500 strong, lined up at the tabernacle. The guards met at the arch, the Dowelte senior and junior choirs, robed in surplices. The march to the depot was taken up, the other residents falling in behind.

YALE WINS FRESHMAN RACE FROM HARVARD IN ANNUAL REGATTA

It Was a Pretty Contest and the Result Was In Doubt Until the Last Stroke Had Been Pulled.

New London, June 30.—To Yale went the first honors of the day when the New Haven freshmen eight crossed the line half a length ahead of the Harvard youngsters. The race was rowed in good water up stream, two miles from the railroad bridge to the navy yard. It was a pretty contest, and was in doubt until the last stroke was pulled.

The official time was: Yale, 10:20; Harvard, 10:20½.

New London, Conn., June 30.—For the twenty-sixth time since 1876, the oarsmen of Harvard and Yale universities are contesting today on the Thames river course in the annual regatta.

During all these years the crews of the two institutions have met regularly on this course, except in 1896 and the year following. In 1896 the famous athletic imbroglio kept the two colleges apart in all branches of sport. In 1897 the two crews met at Poughkeepsie in a triangular race with Cornell and both went down to defeat. In 1898 the old rivals again met on the Thames with the Ithacans again a contestant and again the two New England colleges went down to defeat before Courtney's men. In the twenty-five races rowed between Harvard and Yale on this course, victory has gone to Yale in 17 contests and the Yale crew of 1888 holds the course record of 20:16.

Accordingly today's battle found Harvard men determined to break down Yale's long line of successes and the New Haven collegians stubborn in a purpose to prevent this.

The night was one of some wildness in the way of undergraduate enthusiasm but all told, it proved to be somewhat more quiet than in certain former years. The great crowds which had arrived in New London yesterday and last night were augmented upon the arrival of the earlier morning trains, to be still further increased when excursion trains from Boston and New Haven and other points arrived.

Daybreak brought with it weather conditions of a character disheartening to those unfamiliar with the antics of New London weather. All night long there hung over the harbor and river, a dense fog and at 7 o'clock it had not lifted appreciatelvely. To render the enthusiasts more apprehensive 7 o'clock brought with it a generous downpour of rain. Half an hour later, however, the fog lifted and the rain ceased and the sun began to give signs of life. At that hour it looked as if the day would prove clear and hot.

At the mouth of the harbor the wind was out of the southeast. Eight miles up the river off the quarters of the crew, there was a litle westing in the southerly breeze and things looked auspicious. The water was beautifuly smooth and there seemed to be every prospect of fine racing conditions. Long before 8 o'clock there began a procession of yachts up the harbor to the finish line. The hotels were thronged with early risers, who made their way downtown and up the river to be ready for the first race, that between the freshmen, scheduled for 10:30 a. m.

There was almost no betting. The odds on the big race remained at 2 to 1, with Yale the favorite. William Meikleam of New York is the referee.

The contesting oarsmen were astir early and although the Harvard-Yale varsity rowing races during the last four years have ended in victory for Yale, the two old-time athletic rivals prepared for today's events with the same confidence and determination to win that has characterized their attitude ever since college racing was inaugurated. Neither of the varsity crews was over-confident this morning, but the sentiment at the Yale quarters certainly had more of expectancy of success than that at Harvard's.

At 10 o'clock the fog banks had settled back of the hills, but the weather over the upper end of the course was still thick, making it difficult to see the half-mile flags at any distance.

The wind, which was very light, was blowing straight up the course. The tide was running strong and full up stream so that there was a prospect that the freshman and four-oared crews would be able to make fast time.

In the freshman race the first event scheduled, which was to be rowed from the New London drawbridge to the navy yard, Harvard selected the east course, having won the toss. In the four-oared race, from the navy yard to Gales Ferry, Harvard picked the west course, and the west also in the 'varsity race.

The freshmen race was started at 11:30 o'clock. Both crews took the water at the same time, making a remarkably pretty start. They pulled the same stroke for the first eighth of a mile, when Harvard seemed to gain a slight advantage. At the quarter-mile both crews apparently slowed their stroke a trifle, but their blade work was beautiful. At the half-mile the crews were on even terms.

The boats passed the mile mark in 4:40, and through the mist seemed to be on about even terms.

Approaching the mile and a half mark, Yale seemed to have a slight lead. Yale was pulling thirty-four strokes to the minute, Harvard thirty-six, with Harvard crew splashing.

Yale won. Time, unofficial, 10:29 1-5. Yale won by a half length.

The regatta committee has announced that the four-oared race will be rowed at 4:15 p. m.

FORTY MILES OF LOGS

On the Red River For the Sprague's.

Winnipeg, June 30.—The largest log drive in the history of lumbering in the Winnipeg district reached the outskirts of the city Tuesday evening, when the van of the Sprague Lumber company's winter output on the Rosseau limits was safely corralled in the booms on the Red river from Fort Rouge southward. The drive, which now extends for forty miles up the river, contains 300,000 pieces and is the most extensive ever run at one time on the Red river. Two days ago the logs were cut loose on the Rosseau river above Letellier, 160 miles from Winnipeg, and thus makes a record run.

GO UP THE RIVER

Duluth Yacht Club Boats to Visit Gitchmadji Club.

Will Be Entertained By Superior Organization Next Saturday.

H. Johnson, commodore of the Duluth Yacht club, has issued Circular No. 3, to members which announces the intention of the club to proceed up the river next Saturday afternoon to the Gitchinadji club, on the Superior side of St. Louis bay. For the last three years the club has been trying to accomplish this result and each year something happened to prevent the successful accomplishment of the idea.

The commodore has asked the members of the club personally if they will not one and all come up and make the occasion an overwhelming success at least as far as numbers are concerned.

It is contemplated to take up the five one-design boats and three sloops, namely, the Sea Gull, Golden Rod and Stranger. This of course, does not preclude any other boat going up that belongs to the fleet. It has been arranged for four launches, the Minneopa, Jessie B., Trianon, and the Martha W. or the Skibo, to be at the Duluth boat club boathouse not later than 2:30 p. m. and the members are expected to be there with their friends and get the boats ready, with sails nicely furled and the pennant of the Duluth Yacht club hoisted, so that about 2:30 the launches can get their lines ready for towing. It will be necessary for boat owners to provide themselves with strong 50 foot lines.

Two guns will be fired as a warning at 2:50 and one gun at 3 p. m.

The Minneopa, towing the three sloops, displaying the Duluth Yacht club pennant at the fore and a blue peter aft will lead the way; while the other launches will take the one design boats.

Boat owners are warned to provide themselves with life preservers in case of emergency, and are urgently requested to be equipped with the official caps of the club, bearing the club monogram.

The Gitchinadji club members will act as hosts on the occasion and furnish entertainment for the members of the Duluth Yacht club and their guests. Any visitors who may want to leave the Gitchinadji club before the Duluth people do can take the street cars. Some small pennants bearing the colors of the club have been prepared and will be sent to the boat owners who are going.

In a general way the club will be able to take along about 40 guests.

It is proposed to sail three races of which particulars are to be announced when the members get together. The regular pennant races will be sailed on next Monday, July 4.

SOME PEOPLE ARE CROSS AND UGLY,

"Do you know that thousands of men become irritable, cross and mean on account of their liver?" Nothing irritates a man so much as the general rundown feeling produced by disorder of the bowels. He can enjoy none of those things which tend to make life pleasant. He becomes isolated from his friends because their good humor grates on his nerves. He looks upon life through blue glasses. He feels miserable all over. If he only took a good dose of Rea Bros.' Cascarin he would soon feel considerable better. This remedy is prescribed by physicians for all stomach troubles, and is a great family laxative, having stood the test for years. If your bowels are not in good order, get a bottle of Cascarin at once. Do not let your complaint drag on until some awful disease like Appendicitis sets in. Take Cascarin. It is the only laxative that deserves a place in every home, being made from roots, barks, herbs, plants and berries, nature's remedies. The manufacturers guarantee it to be satisfactory or they refund the money paid for it. A bottle, fifty cents. At all leading druggists.

GEN. MILES IS OPPOSED

To Having His Name Presented To Prohibition Convention.

Indianapolis, June 30.—Oliver W. Stewart, national chairman, opened the Prohibition national convention with prayer today. It was announced that at an early morning caucus, the opposition to Gen. Miles' nomination had combined on National Chairman Stewart for the presidential nomination and ex-National Chairman Samuel Dickie, of Albion, Mich., was selected to make the nominating speech. Under the arrangement, if Mr. Stewart is nominated, Vice Chairman A. W. Wolfenbarger will conduct the national campaign.

Mr. Stewart addressed the convention on behalf of the national committee.

After the convention had waited thirty minutes for the resolutions committee to report a modified report was submitted which it was announced had been agreed upon by the entire committee. It made a slight change in the verbiage of the majority report.

John G. Woolley has announced that he is in receipt of a telegram from Gen. Miles, asking that his name not be presented to the convention for the presidential nomination. Mr. Woolley said he would not present Gen. Miles' name though he did not know what others would do.

BUYS PART OF BIG ISLAND

Robert Whiteside Purchases South Half From Judge Clough.

Robert Whiteside, of this city, has closed the purchase of the south half of Clough or Big Island, in the St. Louis river, off West Duluth, from Judge S. P. Clough, of Superior. The tract contains about 250 acres and the consideration named in the deed is $15,000. Judge Clough retains the ownership of the north half of the island, which contains just about as much land. The property is situated within the city limits of Superior.

Mr. Whiteside has had men working on the property for some time clearing and improving it, and is about to build a summer home upon it for his own use, according to reports. It was some time ago reported that he was to put up a summer hotel of some kind, but he disclaimed any intention of filling Duluth's long-felt want in that respect.

FOXY TOADS.

They Hang Around Electric Lights and Catch Flys.

Every New England city and village where electric lights send out their rays to dissolve the darkness above the shrubberied lawns and tree-clad parks, beholds its many toads squatting below the posts with the shining tops, and waiting for the bewildered insects to drop to earth.

The toad affords an instance of how animals adapt themselves so as to take best advantage of their environment that would have greatly pleased the late Charles Darwin, says the Boston Herald.

There were toads in all parts of New England centuries before the man who invented electric lights was born. For ages the parental toads managed to get a good living by the methods which had come down to them from their parents, but so soon as the electric lamps were put up and the night insects begun to fly against the glowing bulbs and fall down from violent thumps inflicted from their great speed, the dullest toad in the reptile family saw an opening for increased business, and immediately took advantage of the new order of things, thus securing more beetles and moths in an hour than could be had from an all-night hunt in the old days.

In the lumber regions of Maine the owners of wild lands are looking with much favor upon the humble toad, believing that if there were more of them abroad the spruce tree borer, which is now ravaging the forests and killing enough trees to make 10,000 tons of paper every year, would find a most deadly enemy in this plain-featured reptile.

The beetle which is causing so much loss of timber is a comparatively new comer to Maine. It is very small, the worm being no larger than a brass pin, and about one-third as long, while the perfect insect with wings is about half the size of a Canada pea.

The beetle lays its eggs on the base of the trees, and when these hatch, the tiny worms begins to burrow under the bark, making winding galleries between the cambium layer and the wood, and eventually girdling the biggest trees, causing death within two years from the date of the attack. So far as experts know, there are only two creatures in the whole animal kingdom that prey upon this foe to the woodsman—woodpeckers, which dig the grubs from under the bark and eat them, and toads, which are fond of the beetles.

As the perfect bugs can fly, while the toad can do no more than hop, the advantage in the contest has been with the bugs until electric lights were introduced into inland villages near the timber belt. Now, when the beetles fly out to do some wooing on the summer evenings, they are dazed by the shining lights and drop down to the waiting toads, which find them very palatable.

One evening in June this year a drug clerk employed in a store in Moulton, attempted to learn how many beetles of the spruce borers were disabled under an electric light in front of his place of business. He counted up to 4000 and was forced to stop when he was about half done by a customer who wanted a glass of soda. While he was counting the victims to too much light, he saw six fat toads lurking close by and ready to resume their unfinished meal as soon as he went away.

The toad is a hardy and unostentatious resident of this continent. No one has ever called it pretty to look at, and its singing has never caused it to be caged as a pet for the boudoirs of young women, but those who are familiar with its ways admire the creature and speak highly of its steady habits and close application to business.

The toad's bill-of-fare includes most everything of an animal nature, though it prefers moving creatures to those which are stationary or deceased. When its clothes get old and its trousers bag at the knee, a toad will strip off to the "buff" and proceed to swallow a whole suit, knowing there is another which fits better and of larger style underneath. Scientific men who have studied the habits of toads say they are the most gluttonous animals living.

As many as sixty-seven cutworm larvae have been taken from the stomach of a single specimen, which is equivalent to a man's eating sixty-seven full-grown chickens at one meal.

In spite of the great capacity of a toad's stomach, A. H. Kirkland, a specialist employed by the department of agriculture to look into the habit of these animals, says that an average toad, in the course of one night's foraging, will eat enough to fill its stomach to full capacity four times.

While a toad has a very slow and ungainly walk and is not at all gifted in powers of leaping, the animal's tongue is so constructed that every epicure in the world should envy the reptile. Most of the creatures that are fortunate enough to have any tongue at all find the organ works best by having it hung at the end next the throat, leaving the outside part free for use.

The toad's tongue reverses the general rule, and is attached to the extreme outer edge of the lower jaw, in the place where the under front teeth should be. The top of the tolgue is smeared over with a sticky, gelatinous fluid, which is exuded from a gland in the roof of the mouth, and when a toad sees a bug or a moth lying on the ground within reach, all it has to do is to unfold that mucilaged tongue, like the long lash of a coach whip, and flap it down on the top of the prey.

After this the bight of the tongue is folded back upon the insect and withdrawn inside of the mouth.

Last summer Mr. Kirkland examined the stomachs of more than 150 toads and found the contents to be mainly of noxious insects, though there were a good number of ants and a few earthworms mixed in among the pests to agriculture.

The same authority says that toads do not reach full maturity until 4 years of age, and that they survive for a long time, possibly twenty years or more, always remaining close by their birthplaces and feeling so homesick when carried away that they will often travel miles to seek out familiar surroundings.

JAPAN'S "HUMAN HORSES."

The feats of which the Japanese rickshawmen are capable are almost incredible, says London Mail. I remember some years ago being driven ashore in a yacht in the Inland Sea during a typhoon. It was far beyond the treaty limits which then existed, and foreigners were not allowed to travel outside those limits without special passports. But the mayor of the nearest fishing village was kindness itself. He promised to supply the best rickshawmen which the nighborhood could produce, so as to take us to a railway station some forty miles away. And he kept his word, for the distance was covered in less than six hours, including a halt for refreshments. Each rickshaw was drawn by two men, tandem wise, the usual fashion when long distances have to be covered. The leaders in each went through the whole distance, while the wheelers, so to speak, were changed half way. The road was over a great part of the distance little better than a mountain track, and it was raining most of the time, but there was never a break in our progress except to allow the coolies to take off or put on their clothes. They prefer running in nothing but a loincloth, and do so whenever they get safely beyond the eye of the police, who have orders strictly to administer the law against nudity.

The fare paid for this prolonged journey was, if I remember rightly, about three shillings for each rickshaw, the extra shillings being a gratuity thrown in for good service. I know that it purchased so many blessings on my honorable head as cannot yet be quite exhausted. And having made our farewells at the railway station the coolies started back at once for their own village.

A SWEDISH WOMAN'S REBUKE.

Some pathetic incidents occurred in the lobby at Carnegie Hall Sunday afternoon, where the Swedish students were giving a concert, writes Velma Swanston to the New York Sun.

There were hundreds of Swedes who came and were turned away for lack of seats. Many lingered, hoping for returned tickets which they could perhaps purchase at the last moment. One woman with tears in her eyes told the gateman that she had come seventy-five miles to hear the national hymn, and offered to pay a fabulous price to be allowed to stand inside; but her pitiful plea was of no avail. A big hearted policeman said to me: "I'd like to pass that poor woman in." There was a sob in his sympathetic Irish voice as he said it.

Many persons remained outside the closed doors, hungrily drinking in every sound that could penetrate these heavy glass barriers. Only the ortissimo strains could be heard. One fair haired, blue eyed Swedish girl stood with her pale face glued to the glass door for over two hours. Finally I said to her:

"Come down here by the open center door and you will hear better."

She replied in her soft voice and broken accent: "No, thank you, I can see the flag here."

She had stood there all that time gazing lovingly on the blue and yellow emblem, with its touch of white and red, and she was happy. Toward the end of the program came Sweden's national hymn—"Du gamla, du friska."

Every woman's head in that lobby was bowed in reverence, and every man's hat came off. The singers inside had to repeat the anthem again and again. I ventured to say to a girl with a cold gray eye and a warm sensitive mouth:

"I don't think that tune is very wonderful."

Instantly the cold gray eyes flashed sparks of molten fire, and from the warm sensitive mouth came this quick retort, uttered in a voice as plaintive as the music:

"Every one loves his own country the best, and its own dear song is, to him, the most beautiful in all the world!"

I, a Swede, stood rebuked. I was proud of my countrywoman, and I was glad that I could apologize to her in our mother tongue.

Father Asks Return of Property Transferred to Son.

Claims He Has Been Turned Out and Shamefully Abused.

Charging his son and daughter-in-law with having secured possession of his property with false promises and then turned him out of home to live in a miserable little shanty, John Mell has started suit in district court against Gustav Walfred Mell and Alexina Mell, his wife, to have cancelled and set aside a conveyance giving them title and possession of a farm, described as the northeast quarter of section 24-52-18, consisting of acreage valued at $1500, a home and personal property valued at over $250.

In case the court cannot set the deed aside, the parent asks that his rights to the land be fixed and determined, also the son's obligations, and a decree issued that the father's claims shall be a lien on the property prior to all other liens. He also asks that the son be required to pay him, at stated periods, sums of money that the court may decide as equitable and sufficient for his support and comfort.

The papers in the action were filed this morning by John Jenswold, Jr., attorney for the senior Mell.

In his complaint, Mr. Mell states that he is 60 years old, and his son is 30 years old. He claims that he is uneducated, has never been taught any trade or profession, is unfamiliar with the English language, and is old and infirm, so that he can do very light work, not being able to do heavy work for several years past.

Mr. Mell alleges that prior to July 23 his son Gustav lived with him as his adviser, and had control and management of the farm, exercising thereby a great influence over him. Gustav is alleged to have made the claim that his parent was too old to have the care of the farm, and urged him to convey the property over into the son's name.

The senior Mell says that he feared to lose his real estate, and, being desirous of securing to himself and wife a subsistence during the rest of their natural days, an agreement was finally entered into and the property was deeded over to the son and his wife.

The father claims that by the terms of the agreement he and his wife were to occupy the old home, were to raise their potatoes and vegetables, and were to have the ground that they wanted to raise a few crops, the son and his wife to take care of and support the old folks and give them a proper funeral when they died. The deed, it is claimed, was filed Aug. 10, 1901.

The father claims that by reason of his incapacity to understand and attend to business details, the son drew up a deed in which the consideration was not given and in which no memorandum was made of the promises to take care of the old folks after they had given up their property. He alleges that he placed implicit trust and faith in the son to carry out the promises made, but that such agreement was fraudulently made, the son having no intention of carrying out his promises.

The father further claims that at his own expense and labor he has improved the homestead and enhanced its value.

He claims that in the main the son observed his promises until the mother died, when he began a system of nagging and annoyance, being unreasonable in his fault finding and abuse and that finally, May 6, 1904, he ordered and compelled his father to occupy a shanty on the property that had no door and was ill-fitted for habitation, refusing him possession or occupancy of the old home.

Further charges are made by the old gentleman that his son has not only denied him possession of the home, but also of his personal property and has neglected to carry out his promises about giving his parent land to cultivate for his subsistence.

The senior Mell claims that his son and daughter-in-law are insolvent and have no property except that exempt by law, so he is without adequate remedy in an action at law. He says that equity alone can furnish him relief.

BALL PLAYING IN STREETS

More Prosecutions Are Needed to Stop the Practice.

The arrest of several youths recently for playing baseball in the streets, did not seem to have the effect that the police hoped for, and complaints continue to be heard from indignant citizens whose windows have been broken by the games of ball played in all parts of the city on the public highways.

The majority of the complaints come from the West End, between Eighteenth and Twenty-third avenues and from the central part of the city on Second and Third streets.

In the district between First street and Fifth street and Fifth avenue west and Lake avenue, a score or more of games can be found every fine evening, and the citizens living in the vicinity are constantly complaining of broken windows, trampled flower beds and the noise and disturbance that result from these exhibitions of the national game.

Those who complain of the condition of affairs claim it is time the police took further action, since the one arrest failed to have any effect in putting a stop to the use of the streets as ball grounds.

RETURN FROM THE RANGES

Steel Corporation Officials Spend the Day In Duluth.

Yesterday afternoon the inspection party of the United States Steel corporation interests, including First Vice President James Gayley, returned from a tour of inspection of the company's railway and ore properties. No details of the trip could be learned, save that the trip was the customary inspection by the officials, which takes place two or three times a year to note progress made and get ideas for future use.

Mr. Gayley went to the North Land golf links today and was expected to leave for some of the other ranges via the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road this evening, accompanied by D. G. Kerr, ore agent of the company, and D. M. Clemson, both of Pittsburg.

JULY WEATHER.

Statistics From the Duluth Weather Bureau Records.

As a rule Duluth offers an ideal summer climate during the month of July. The average temperature for the month during the past thirty-three years has been 66 degrees, according to data compiled by Forecaster Richardson from Duluth United States weather bureau records.

The warmest July on record was in 1878 with an average of 71 degrees, and the coldest in 1871, with an average of 61 degrees. The highest temperature registered locally on a July day was 99 degrees on the first, in 1883, and the lowest temperature was 45 degrees on the second day of the month in 1895.

The average precipitation for the month is shown to be 3.72 inches, but ranges all the way from .47 inches in 1875 to 10.42 inches in 1879. The prevailing winds in the past have been from the northeast.

SIGNS STRONG PLAYER.

Winnipeg Said to Have Secured "Bill" Wilson.

The Winnipeg club is reported to have signed "Bill" Wilson, the veteran St. Paul backstop, to act as player-manager of the Maroons. The Winnipeg team has been disorganized by its long run of hard luck, and needs just such a man as Wilson to whip it into shape. Wilson is a veteran at the game, and knows it from start to finish. He is a steady batter, a sure backstop, and above all a cool player who can get the best work out of his men.

If the report is true, the Winnipeg club should be heard from, as it contains a number of good individual players, lacking only a head.

MILWAUKEE SUBURB IS QUARANTINED.

Milwaukee, June 30.—A quarantine has been issued against the town of Lake, a suburb south of the city limits, on account of many cases of smallpox being reported there. Residents are not allowed to leave their homes, and street cars are not allowed to stop while passing through the town. It is feared several large manufacturing concerns in the town of Lake and also in Milwaukee will be affected by the quarantine.

A VETERAN OF THREE WARS CURED BY PE-RU-NA OF STOMACH CATARRH.

Captain W. W. Jackson.

"Pe-ru-na is infallible for Catarrh of the Stomach." W. W. Jackson.

Captain W. W. Jackson, 705 G street, N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I am eighty-three years old, a veteran of the Black Hawk, Mexican and the Civil wars. I am by profession a physician, but long since abandoned the same.

"Some years ago I was seriously afflicted with catarrh of the stomach. My sufferings were protracted and severe. I tried every known remedy without obtaining relief. In desperation I began the use of your Peruna. I began to realize immediate but gradual improvement. After the use of three bottles every appearance of my complaint was removed and I have no hesitation in recommending it as an infallible remedy for that disorder. I have recommended the same to many of my friends, who, after moderate use have realized the same result. I cannot speak too highly of its great remedial excellence."—W. W. Jackson.

More Than One-Half Our Ills Are Due to Catarrh.

It is rare indeed that one bottle of Peruna is not sufficient to convince any one that Peruna is a good remedy. Once in the household, Peruna generally stays. More than one-half of our ills are due to catarrh.

By catarrh is not meant simply catarrh of the nose or head, but catarrh of the lungs, stomach, in fact every organ of the body.

Peruna acts as a tonic because it produces healthy mucous membranes in the stomach and digestive organs.

It immediately begins to brace a person up because it enables the digestive organs to do their duty properly.

This is why so many people have found it a substantial tonic.

Almost every disease begins at first with a catarrhal condition of some mucous membrane. A few doses of Peruna in the beginning is sure to prevent much sickness.

MAXWELL IS ELECTED PRESIDENT OF N. E. A.

on investigations and appropriations, refused the request of the department of superintendence for the appointment of a large commission and the appropriation of $10,000 for the purpose of reforming the spelling of the English language.

Among the speakers who addressed the convention today was Booker T. Washington, the negro educator of Tuskogee, Ala. He said:

Booker T. Washington spoke of "The Education of the Southern Negro." He said in part:

"Judged purely from an economic and industrial point of view the education of the negro is paying and will pay more ...gely in the future in proportion as educational opportunities are increased.

"A careful examination shows that of the men and women trained at Hampton and Tuskegee, not ten per cent can be found in idleness at any season in the year. They have learned the beauty of work, the disgrace of idleness.

"But it has been repeated with emphasis that no matter how much strength of mind or skill of hand the black man may acquire, after all, the weak point in that education does not help but retards his moral growth and that educated negro youths are more given to crime than was true in the older generations. A study of the criminal statistics of the whole world shows that it is the young people who are most given to crime. But what are the facts as to the effect of education? Within the last month I have asked and secured direct information as to the criminal records of the graduates of fifteen of the largest and oldest negro colleges and industrial schools, and the facts are, that only two graduates out of the whole number have ever been sentenced to prison, and that at the present time not a single man or woman bearing the diploma of one of these fifteen institutions wears the prison garb.

The records of the South show that 90 per cent of the colored persons in prison are without knowledge of trade and 61 per cent are illiterate. This statement alone disproves the assertion that the negro grows in crime as he secures education. If the negro at the North is more criminal than his brother at the South it is largely because the North withholds from him the opportunity for employment that the South gives. It is as a rule, the one who has a mere smattering of education or who is in total ignorance.

"From the point of view of intellectual growth and self help the education of the negro has been a success. Few white Americans realize what sacrifices on account of his poverty, the negro has made to secure education and that practically no school has been opened that has not been filled. View the picture of a black woman teacher from the Tuskegee Institute, teaching a school for weeks under an oak tree, then with hatchet and saw leading the way in the building of a school house and receiving for her services a pittance of $10 a month. Later, see her closing her school at 2 o'clock that she and the older children may cultivate the acre of land about the school building, from which three bales of cotton are raised towards the support of the school so that the term is finally legnthened from three to seven months.

"In one Southern state year before last, each negro child of school age had spent on him for his entire education $1.89, while each child in New York state had spent upon him $30.85. But in spite of the poverty of the Southern states and other obstacles, the negro is not ashamed of his record of forty years of freedom.

"After years of civilization and opportunity in Italy, 30 per cent of the population are illiterate. In Spain 68 per cent, in Russia 78 per cent, in the average South American country 80 per cent, while after forty years of freedom and opportunity, the negro has only 44 per cent of illiteracy to his debit.

"There should be no disguising the fact that there are anxious days for my race and serious effort is ahead, but never for a moment do I doubt our ultimate triumph. Freedom can never be given. It must be purchased. Our success will finally come by our learning to exercise that patience, self-control and courage which will make us begin at the bottom and lay the foundation of our growth in the ownership and skilful cultivation of the soil, the possession of a bank account, the exercise of thrift and skill, and the application of the highest culture of hand, head and heart to the thing which the times need have done. In proportion as the negro can convince the Southern white man that by reason of education, he can perform in the best manner the services of head and hand that the community desires, in the same proportion will that lasting friendship between the races which is so vital, be strengthened. The race, like the individual, that makes itself indispensable, has solved most of its problems.

"I have so far freed myself from the domination of racial and sectional prejudice, till I can say that I have no ambition that is higher than the doing of that which will serve the highest interests of all the people of our hallowed Southland, regardless of race, color or creed.

"In this connection let me free your minds, if I can, from possible fear and apprehension in two directions. The negro in this country does not seek as a race to exercise political supremacy over the white man, nor is social intermingling with any race considered by the negro to be one of the essentials to his progress. You may not know it, but my people are as proud of their racial identity as you are of yours, and in the degree that they become intelligent, social pride increases. I was never prouder of the fact that I am classed as a negro than I am today.

"You of the white race do not know of the best that is occurring among my people. Many of you know more of the best in Japanese, Italian and French life than of that of the negro right at your door. A people should be judged by their best, not by their worst. One should see the negro in his industrial and business occupations and especially in his progress in church, school and home life, before judgment be passed. There are two classes among us as in all races, and the vicious and the virtuous. I can point you to groups of my people in nearly every part of our country, that in intelligence and high and unselfish purpose of their school and church life and in the sweetness and purity of their home life and social intercourse, will compare favorably with the races of the earth. You can never lift any large section of people by continually calling attention to their weak points. A race, like the child in school, needs encouragement as well as chastisement.

"My fellow teachers, let us go out from this great gathering, teach the children of the land that in proportion as they lift their hands to oppress and harm another race, in that degree will their souls be degraded and weakned, but that in so much as they try by word or action to lift up the humblest and meanest and most unprotected of the human family, they themselves will be strengthened and broadened and made after the fashion of the Teacher of Teachers, who when on earth, became the servant of all, that in the end he might be the Master."

The first speaker was Samuel M. Lindsay, commissioner of education, San Juan, P. R. Commissioner Lindsay talked on education in Porto Rico, telling of the advancement of educational methods in that island in accordance with American standards, notwithstanding the many intervening obstacles.

"The New Departure in Secondary Education" was the subject of the next address delivered by J. J. Shephard, principal of the high school of commerce of New York city.

PREVENTS WORK

Rain Interferes With the East Superior Street Job.

Portion of It Is Now Ready For the Top Covering.

Wet weather has interfered with the work on East Superior street during the past three or four days. Several blocks are ready for the top covering of fine stone and tar, but the rain has delayed the laying of this.

The curb has been reset in concrete from Sixteenth to Twenty-first avenues east and the bottom layer of the pavement has been laid from Sixteenth to a point between Eighteenth and Nineteenth avenues east. The bottom layer consists of six inches of broken stone, which is rolled down to four inches.

Over the bottom layer of stone a coating of hot tar is laid and on this is placed 2½ inches of fine crushed rock mixed with tar in the mixing plant. Dry weather is required for the laying of the coating of tar and the upper surface of the pavement, as when the ground is wet steam forms and the tar does not hold.

The street between Sixteenth and Nineteenth avenues will be ready for the upper coating by Saturday, and just as soon as the weather becomes settled the work of laying it will be commenced.

AN ELOPING WIFE

Feared That Her Partner Had Deserted Her.

The aid of the police was invoked yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Anna Leslie, of Winnipeg, who sought to return to her husband in Winnipeg, believing that the man with whom she had fled from that city had forsaken her.

She appeared at police headquarters and stated that she had arrived in Duluth Sunday with a man named Joseph McMahon.

The couple took rooms at a Bowery lodging house and the following day the man disappeared.

The woman despaired of seeing him again, and penniless and alone in a strange city she sought the aid of the police.

The police referred her to the Bethel authorities, who took her in charge, and last night McMahon returned to the city from Two Harbors, where he had gone to look for work. He stated that he had secured a position there and the couple left last night for the north shore city.

The woman stated to the police that her husband did not support her, but spent all of his earnings for liquor. McMahon is a man of about 40 years of age, while the woman is about 25.

ELOQUENT PLEA

By Steenerson Failed to Save His Client.

Crookston, Minn., June 30.—Congressman Steenerson appeared in district court and argued a motion for a new trial of the Wold incest case. He maintained that County Attorney Rowe was in error in calling attention to the fact that Mrs. Wold was not allowed by the defense to appear on the stand, and asserted that Wold was either drugged or unusually affected by the liquor he drank that afternoon and was not responsible for his acts. He hinted at a conspiracy between the mother, daughters and others to get the father out of the way. Judge Watts overruled the motion and sentenced the prisoner to four years at Stillwater. The case will go to the supreme court.

STERNBURG TALKS

At Commencement Exercises of University of the South.

Ambassador Received Degree of Doctor of Civil Law.

Sewanee, Tenn., June 30.—International interest attached to the commencement exercises of the University of the South today by reason of the presence of Baron Speck Von Sternburg, the German ambassador to the United States. The ambassador made the commencement address and received the honorary degree of doctor of civil law. Col. E. C. Gorgas, U. S. A., now in charge of the sanitation of the Panama canal strip and an alumnus of the university, received the degree of doctor of science.

The commencement procession was formed in the open, the faculty and students in cap and gown marching to the chapel, where Baron Von Sternburg was given an enthusiastic welcome. He said in part:

"The efficiency of the American educational system which I have been able to closely follow during the last twenty years must strike any student interested in the problems of education and of national economy most forcibly. One of Germany's leading scientists and university professors, greatly interested in the scientific development of the United States, recently pointed out the marked progress of her universities.

"In some field the Americans, he stated, were leading Germany, for instance in chemistry, physics and astronomy, for which they possess excellent institutions and teachers. Also in spiritual sciences they are showing marked progress. In announcing his intention to visit America, the professor stated that he did not come to teach the American people but to learn from them. What has especially impressed me during my visits to the American centers of learning is the large amount of money devoted to educational purposes. Some of their buildings are truly magnificent. All are equipped with the most approved lighting, ventilating and sanitary arrangements. The professors and teachers are inspired with the keenest enthusiasm, and among the students I noticed everywhere a deep, sincere longing for knowledge. The men whom your educational methods have developed show two distinct sides. They are men of profound learning and high academic attainments. But at the same time they possess the extraordinary initiative and organizing capacity of the qualified business man. They are ever ready to step into the arena of public affairs and give the people the advantage of their learning and experience in a most unselfish way.

"Every American university it seems to me, is built up on the motto: 'Mens sana in corpore sano.' The spacious, airy lecture rooms; the palatial well-equipped gymnasiums; the perfect play grounds; the marble swimming pools and the club rooms and dining halls with their air of refinement all this is inducive to cultivating the best physical health without which the perfect mental equilibrium is impossible.

"Your keen interest in sports has produced and is producing a virile race, self-reliant with its best individual qualities developed.

"As to the training and education the young man should receive, to bring out what is best in him to grapple with the new social conditions there are both in the United States and in Germany certain doubts. Some men of fame and experience are pointing out that the university does not equip its graduates to be workers in the world's hard work. But these men, I am happy to say, seem to be in the minority. If we count the number of men of university training in the United States and Germany during the last three decades, we clearly see that our people have made up their minds, that higher education has come to stay. The proportion of persons of university training in these two countries which are the most energetic in educational work, is ever increasing. We are now almost surprised to behold how slow we have been in casting off habits which now seem to us almost mediaeval. If we hold fast to the sacred traditions of the Fatherland which you have chosen as yours, we need not fear that this modernization of higher education will mean the loss of these traditions. There is no reason why scholarship should fall because industry and science are rising.

"The best answer to the pessimist who warns his young friend to beware of the college, which retards and even cripples his career, is to look up the rolls of our leading universities and the account of the lives of their graduates. Neither here nor in my own country have I met a graduate who regretted his university education or the time spent in acquiring it. On the contrary I only have heard expressions of regret by men who are members of the still amazingly large army of the untrained.

"Of course boys who dislike study or who are indolent should never be selected for a higher education which is apt to make them pessimists or social rebels. Whether a boy should be prepared for a higher education or not is a personal question altogether.

"Keep in mind that the accumulation of knowledge alone is of but secondary value as regards the advantages of a university education.

"Its primary value lies in the acquisition of the power of thought without which the full enjoyment of life is not possible. A trained mind teaches you to better discern and appreciate all that is noble and beautiful in life. It makes you more reasonable, above all it teaches you self-control wherein lies the success of the individual and the true greatness of the nation.

"Man can have no more beautiful life before him than the young man of the South. Just as proverbial as are the splendid qualities of the Southern man, displayed in war, just as proverbial is the beauty of the Southern landscape.

"The era of prosperity of the South has arrived, and its latent treasures are being developed. Its finished products of iron, steel, coal, coke and cotton are already reaching practically every market of the world.

"Now capital is constantly being invested, new companies organized and the older ones are increasing their capital stock. 'Go South' is becoming the password among the able-bodied men landing on the shores of the New World and looking for work on the farm or in the factory.

"It requires no prophetic eye to see the position the South will occupy after the Panama canal has drawn the markets of the world closer to her factories and seaports, and more intimately connected her with your great trade emporium in the Philippines, lavishly endowed with limitless raw materials. What you behold today seems to my eyes a shadow of what the future has in store for you. But you, my younger friends, have a vast field of work and great responsibilities before you. I am glad to be able on this occasion to wish you well with all my heart and to say one parting word to those among you who are preparing to face the battle of strife. 'If you want to win the goal of true national greatness there is but one straight line—follow that leadership which stands for the highest integrity, the most effective energy and the most earnest patriotism in your country.'"

GLASS SUIT

Regarding Montana Mine Won By Stockholders.

Helena, Mont., June 30.—Litigation of long standing, involving the Basin and Bay State mining companies as defendant in a suit for $140,000, has been decided by the supreme court favorably to Massachusetts and eastern stock holders in that company. The plaintiffs were James and Alexander Glass, well known mining men, who alleged that they had turned over to the company $140,000 worth of stock of the concern to be sold by the defendant, the proceeds to be used in paying the defendant's debts, consideration for this being an agreement by the company that the Glass brothers were to be respectively vice president and trustee and general manager and trustee treasurer.

It was alleged that the company violated its agreement by ousting the plaintiff in October, 1899, and failed and refused to deliver the stock to plaintiffs.

In the lower court the decision was in favor of the defendant, the court having sustained that motion for judgment on pleadings. This the supreme court affirmed, holding that the contract under which the stock was delivered to the company was void as being directly contrary to an express provision of law and within the inhibition provisions of the civil code.

CLEVER SCHEME

By Which Morgan Saved $1000 on Pearl.

New York, June 30.—The reason J. Pierpont Morgan recently went abroad, according to excellent authority, was not that his business acumen had needed sharpening with a vacation. The excellent authority is a well known Fifth avenue jewelry firm, which not long ago received a fine pearl so strikingly handsome that one of the partners said:

"Let's send it down to Mr. Morgan and let him have first say on it."

He could have it for $5000, the accompanying note said. Mr. Morgan was delighted and after closely inspecting it, wrapped it in tissue paper and thrust it into his trousers' pocket.

Calling his cashier, Mr. Morgan instructed him to draw two checks, one for $4000 and the other for $5000. The one for $5000 he placed in the box that had contained the pearl and sealed it. The $4000 check he inclosed in a letter to the jewelers, in which he wrote that if the firm was willing to accept that amount the pearl might be returned to him at once, otherwise to keep the box and return the $4000 check.

The jewelers accepted the $4000 offer and later heard of Morgan's $1000 coup.

Birthplace of Our Flag.

It is gratifying to note that the building known as the "birthplace of the flag" is to be preserved, and to that end the government has decided to purchase the house. The fact that the nation did not secure the house of so sacred a symbol of national life long ago has often been wondered at. It is also gratifying to note the remarkable success of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in curing indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, nervousness, headaches and malaria, fever and ague, and it is to be wondered at that sickly people will continue to suffer when the Bitters will cure them. Women, too, who value their health should not delay in taking the Bitters. It is unequalled as a tonic for their weak organs, inducing regularity and preventing many of the ills they are subject to.

Lads Given Burial.

Joseph Runk, one of the lads who was drowned in the lime-kiln slip yesterday, was buried this morning. The services were held in the French church and interment was made at Cavalry cemetery.

The funeral of John Dandrea will be held tomorrow from the French church and the body will be interred beside that of the Runk boy. The aunt of young Dandrea was unable to pay the expenses of the lad's funeral and the boy would have been buried as a county charge, had not Miss Elsie Blake and J. Allyn Laurie of the Parlor theater, succeeded in raising a purse among the employes of the theater and their friends to defray the expenses. The amount raised was sufficient to provide a proper burial for the orphan lad.

GOLD DISCOVERY

In Wyoming Where Scraper Can Handle Ore.

Billings, Mont., June 30.—Advices from Saratoga, Wyo., say what is believed to be an important gold discovery was made on Jack creek a few days ago by former Mayor Charles P. Clemmons and comjanion. astV beds of gravel of unknown depth and extending along the creek valley for several miles have been located. The gravel runs from $6 to $11 in gold to the ton and the ore can be handled with a scraper.

YOUNG PASTOR FATALLY SHOT BY A BURGLAR.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, June 30.—Burglars raided this place this morning and as a result Rev. C. H. Mayce, a young pastor of several small churches in Story county, who is here attending the state Sunday school convention, will probably die. He grappled with a burglar and was shot through the intestines. Several other places were entered and valuables taken. The burglars escaped, though one suspect has been arrested.

Found Dead In Bed.

George Merrill, a seaman, about 45 years of age, was found dead in his rooms at the Saratoga hotel yesterday. Coroner Boyer was summoned, and after making an examination of the body, declared death to be due to consumption.

Merrill was a member of the Lake Seamen's union at Saginaw, and papers found among his effects showed that he had been a sailor for many years. Several discharge papers from marine hospitals were also found, which would indicate that he had been suffering from a severe illness for some time past.

The body lies in Durkan & Crawford's undertaking rooms awaiting advice of relatives.

GRAND JURY BEGINS ON SLOCUM INQUIRY.

New York, June 30.—The federal grand jury today began its investigation of the General Slocum disaster. One of the grand jury's subpoenas, it was learned, was served on James K. Atkinson, secretary of the Knickerbocker Steamship company, who is one of the board of directors and transportation and traffic manager of the company. According to the evidence given at the coroner's inquest Atkinson made a personal inspection of the General Slocum twice since she was put in commission for this season. Atkinson's counsel said he would obey, but that he will refuse to testify unless under stipulation that he will not be indicted.

GLOUCESTER SCHOONER SUNK BY DEUTSCHLAND.

New York, June 30.—The Gloucester, Mass., fishing schooner, Harry G. French, was sunk in a collision with the Hamburg American liner Deutschland about ten miles west of Nantucket lightship early today. Capt. McKay and his crew of sixteen men were rescued and brought here on the Deutschland, but they lost all their personal effects and the schooner's papers. The steamer was not injured.

PROGRESS IS GOOD

Work at Superior Entry Going Forward at Rapid Rate.

Molds Removed From Twenty Blocks Built Under Water.

The new pier construction work at Superior entry is progressing rapidly and without any further delays. All of the machinery for performing the work is running smoothly, and unless there are breakages, now unlooked for, the substructure of concrete will be laid by fall.

The only hitch in the work was caused through some slight defect in one of the concrete travelers, but this was soon remedied. The special machinery made here at the head of the lake has given no trouble.

Although the plant has been in operation but a few weeks, thirty-one of the large monolithic blocks have been constructed under water, and the molds have been removed from about twenty of them.

Under the direction of Assistant United States Engineer Coleman, who has charge of the pier work under Capt. Charles L. Potter, engineer for this district, alternate blocks were first made and then the intermediate blocks were put in as the first concrete placed hardened. By this means only the side pieces of the molds were necessary in manufacturing the intermediate blocks. The work has now progressed far enough to demonstrate that both methods of laying the concerte are successful.

With the rising temperature of the water in the bay the time for the hardening of the concrete has been shortened from four to three days. It will take even less time for the concrete to set as the water gets warmer.

The manufacture of concrete has made a large inroad on the sand that was pumped on to the government ground on Wisconsin Point.

Many of the visitors at the point have supposed that the sand originally found on the point was used in the concrete, but such is not the case, tests by the engineers showing that the point sand was too fine for the purpose.

Several hundred thousand cubic yards of coarse sand were pumped in by a hydraulic dredge, filling in several acres of what was formerly a swamp ground.

The gravel, or pebbles, used in the concrete is taken to the entry in scows and unloaded on a stock pile.

APPEAL TO VOTERS

Madison, Wis., June 30.—W. D. Connor and Henry F. Cochems, chairman and secretary of the Republican state central committee, have issued a strong address to the voters of the state. They say:

There is absolutely no foundation for the claim that the stalwarts had a majority of the convention upon any theory. Taking the claims of the stalwarts that the temporary organization should have been composed only of delegates who held credentials signed by the chairmen and secretary of the respective county committees, excluding contested delegations, the administration would have had a clear majority in the temporary organization of 95 2-3 votes. Including contested delegates having perfectly certified credentials, the majority for the administration will be found to be 24 2-3. Therefore, under their own theory, which has neither good common sense nor a suggestion of justice to recommend it, the stalwarts would have been unable to control the convention.

In order to show the absurdity of their proposition, it is only necessary to call attention to the fact that delegates from Calumet, the second district of Grant, Pierce, Portage and Washburn counties, which were uncontested, and against whom not even a question could be raised as to their right to seats in the convention, would have been absolutely denied the right to participate in the temporary organization.

The plan pursued in perfecting a temporary organization of the state convention is the plan which had been adopted by prior state conventions, and also followed by every national convention. Contests were heard and determined by the state central committee and a temporary roll prepared by it, but the permanent roll was made up by the state convention itself, acting under its temporary organization. Every contest was voted upon and determined separately by the state convention.

Summing up the facts in reference to the state convention, it may briefly be stated that the temporary roll of the convention was composed of 952 uncontested delegates, 515 1-3 of whom were favorable to and voted for the renomination of Governor LaFollette and other officers of the present state administration, and 436 2-3 of whom were favorable to the stalwarts. Of the 108 contested delegates, there were seated 59½ favorable to the administration and 43½ favorable to the stalwarts, making a total of 574 5-6 in favor of the administration and 485 1-6 in favor of the stalwarts, a clear majority for the state administration of 89 2-3 votes.

The delegates at large, Isaac Stephenson, Governor LaFollette, Senator Stout and W. D. Connor, elected to represent the state in the national Republican convention, were denied seats in that convention by the Republican national committee. The stalwart contestants were seated without any effort upon the part of the national committee to examine into the merits of the contest, and without any consideration whatever of the records and evidence.

The delegation, headed by Isaac Stephenson, submitted arguments to the national committee and rested their entire case upon indisputable facts and original credentials and records submitted to the national committee for their inspection. The stalwarts, in their argument, falsely stated the contents of such documents, and upon such false statement attempted to build a case which would entitle them to seats in the convention. The lack of truth in their statements could have been determined by even the most casual examination of such original records.

These records were placed upon the table in the committee room, and the national committee was requested to examine them, or appoint a sub-committee to do so, that they might become acquainted with the actual facts of the case and the falsity of the stalwart claims. The hearing was closed. The parties interested left the room, knowing to an absolute certainty that if the original records were examined it would be utterly impossible for the national committee to state facts sustaining a decision in favor of the stalwarts. The national committeemen, for reasons best known to themselves, but easily inferred, neither examined a single document, in any manner, to determine the facts, nor did it deliberate upon or discuss the merits of the contest for a single moment, but arrived at a decision within less than one minute from the time arguments closed.

We appeal to the voters to support the primary election law submitted to them by the legislature for their approval. The recent campaign in this state as conducted by the stalwarts caused good citizens to blush for shame. Money was freely used to influence the voters; intimidation and threats were commonly resorted to to force men to vote against their convictions; many employers threatened employes with the loss of positions if they did not vote in accordance with their dictation. By similar methods great corporations forced their employes to do their bidding.

The state central committee purposes to conduct the most vigorous campaign ever known in the history of Wisconsin. It appeals to all good citizens to give their active support to President Theodore Roosevelt, Governor La Follette and the remainder of the state ticket.

Grand Forks, N. D., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Van Praagh's bunch nearly broke the hearts of the local fans by taking two games from the Tigers here yesterday afternoon, and kicking them down the percentage table until they bumped up against Crookston.

The visitors secured sweet revenge for the double-header on Decoration day when the Tigers shut them out for eighteen successive innings. Owens, who was one of the pitchers maltreated at that time, was in the box for the first game yesterday and with the exception of one bad inning, had the home team at his mercy. Two unearned runs were presented to the visitors in the second, and they got two more in the fifth on Corrigan's two-bagger which brought in Ball and Owens. The Tigers tied the score in the sixth, by falling on Owens for two-doubles and a single, which with an overthrow by Owens netted four runs.

"Hank" Gehring won the second game in spite of the team behind him. The White Stockings had six errors chalked up against them, but Gehring stuck out fifteen men and scored the winning run by landing the ball over the fence in the last half of the ninth inning.

The Tigers landed on Gehring in the first inning for two singles and a two-bagger, which with a base on balls netted three runs. Then Gehring settled down and made a game, uphill fight for the remaining eight innings.

A single, a base on balls and Corrigan's tripple netted three runs in the third. Quillan's three-bagger brought another in the fifth and Corrigan's single scored Gehring in the seventh, tieing the score.

Nagel and Martin had sensational catches to their credit.

Six out of ten from the Tigers.

Revenge for the Decoration day trouncing.

The White Stockings have not yet lost a series.

Owens and Gehring make a formidable pair.

Three games at Fargo, and then home again.

Yesterday's victories gives Duluth a long lead in the race.

Only one game separates Crookston and Grand Forks, and the Woodpeckers may be second in the race by tonight.

Corrigan's hitting was very timely yesterday. He had three hits in the two games and all of them came when needed.

Duluth has the highest percentage of any of the big league leaders with the exception of the New York nationals with .729.

Gehring's list of strike-outs in the second game yesterday equalled the Northern league record established at Winnipeg by Noldin.

The Superior and Winnipeg game was postponed yesterday on account of rain. No game was scheduled for the Crookston and Fargo teams.

Takes Game From Kelly-How-Thomson In Commercial League.

The Patrick team defeated the Kelly-How-Thomson nine last evening in one of the regular Commercial League games, by the score of 6 to 3.

The game was played on the grounds at Thirty-second avenue west in the evening, and was called at the end of the fifth inning on account of the wet grounds.

The hardware men gave Rondeau wretched support, making eleven errors in the five innings. McDougall was hit freely but good support kept the score down.

FIND OF ORE

On Martin Nelson's Farm South of Tower.

Tower, Minn., June 30.—A farmer, named Martin Nelson, who resides on a tract of land in 7, 61-15, about one mile south of the town, was digging post holes on his place a week or ten days ago, when, at a depth of two feet, he came upon some soft iron ore. The discovery was made in a low, swampy place, and it was the first time that Mr. Nelson had ever suspected the presence of iron ore on his place. There were no surface indications to betray ore at depth. He dug into the ore a little deeper, but water interfered and he ceased work. Louis Johnson and others have taken an option on the property and will explore it.

NARROW ESCAPE

From Death In the Powers-Simpson Sawmill.

Hibbing, Minn., June 30.—James King, employed in the Powers-Simpson sawmill, had a narrow escape from death. While adjusting a belt, his overalls caught in a revolving shaft, and in his struggle to free himself, all his clothing was torn off, but not before he had been thrown around the shaft a dozen times or more. The machinery was stopped as soon as possible, but not until King had released himself. The man was picked up in an exhausted condition, but examination proved that no bones were broken, and that beyond a number of bruises and a general shaking up King was none the worse for the mishap. He was removed to his home, and expects to be able to resume work in the mill in a few days.

EX-SENATOR MITCHELL DEAD

Wisconsin Statesman Passes Away After a Lingering Illness.

Milwaukee, June 30.—Former Senator John L. Mitchell died at 7 o'clock last night after a lingering illness. He had been at death's door for the past ten days, and his entire family was at his bedside when he died. He had recently resigned as a member of the national board of Soldiers' home on account of his failing health, a successor having been appointed at the last session of congress.

JOHN L. MITCHELL.

John L. Mitchell was born in Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 19, 1842, and was educated in the public schools, military school, Hampton, Conn., and at Dresden, Munich and Geneva. He served in the Wisconsin volunteers, 1861-4. Was state senator, 1872-3 and 1875-6. Was appointed member of board of managers of national home for disabled soldiers in 1886, and held the position until a short time ago. Was a member of congress, 1891-3 and United States senator, 1893-99.

BELIEVES IN RACY TALK.

Advice to Young Preachers at Chicago University.

Chicago, June 30.—Dr. Lawrence shocked an audience of demure divinity students at the University of Chicago yesterday afternoon, when in the course of a lecture on "The Modern Minister and His Congregation," he acknowledged his belief in the need of sensational pulpit methods.

According to Dr. Lawrence, sermons must be "featured and instruction must be placed before the audience in unexpected guise if the people are to be held. The young preachers were told that they could not state facts in an ordinary manner and be listened to for long. The preacher who would have large audiences all the time, he said, must always have something extraordinary to offer his hearers.

"Exaggeration in the pulpit it allowable," said Dr. Lawrence. "The preacher in this rushing, sensation-loving time is justified in coloring and exaggerating for the sake of attracting his audiences and keeping them keenly interested. Of course this statement is not an apology for lying, but the preacher today who states facts in ordinary language just as they are does not get a hearing. I think the people always make allowance for the exaggeration after the sermon and so no harm is done."

"Dr. Lawrence does not like the very emotional preacher, however.

"The tearful preacher has no place any more," he declared. "The people despise him. They would rather have frowns and scowls than overworked tenderness."

Many of Dr. Lawrence's colleagues in the ministry do not agree with his views on exaggeration and expressed themselves forcibly on the subject.

Some books which have been recently added to the public library, which will be of special interest to the Daughters of the American Revolution are "Early Connecticut Marriages," and "Early Massachusetts Marriages," as found on ancient church records prior to 1800. These are edited by Frederick W. Bailey, of the bureau of American Ancestry. There is also "A Genealogical and Ecclesiastical History of New Britain, Conn.," and a recent gift of "The General Register of The Society of Colonial Wars."

Among other genealogical works which the library has are, Savage's Genealogical dictionary of the first settlers of New England, showing three generations which came to this country before May 1692, in four volumes, published in 1860. This is a scarce work now and often hard to find.

"The Field Genealogy," in two volumes, presented to the library by Marshall Field; the "Wolcott Memorial," presented to the library by Mrs. Stephen Merchant, containing some of the most illustratricus names in our country's history. The "Register of the Sons of the American Revolution," presented by the society, and "American Ancestry," in ten volumes.

Duluth Gets Mention.

Duluth occupies a rather prominent place in two of the most extensively read of the July magazines. In the Ladies' Home Journal one of the city's lovellest children is represented and in Harper's Magazine for the midsummer month the city itself is spoken of at length. "The Spirit of the West" is the title of an article by Henry Loomis Nelson, L. H. D., which appears in this number of the magazine and in the article Duluth is used at some length as a city typical of the growth of the West and in which the people are representative of the Western type, the kind with "no wool in their minds."

Bath Tubs of Glass.

Brooklyn Eagle: No longer can the cleanly, hygienic porcelain bath tub be reckoned the leader in bath tubs, for this essential household requisite has now a rival—an importation from Germany. This latest development in bath tubs is of glass, thick plate glass, and molded in one piece. Of course, in the homes of the very wealthy there are bath tubs of much more costly material than plate glass, but this newest comer is designed for ordinary use, the same as the porcelain type. There are not very many glass tubs obtainable yet, but those that have arrived are attracting attention, particularly from feminine observers, for the glass looks so bright and clean and fresh. These glass tubs are mounted in the same fashion as those of porcelain.

THE EVENING STORY.

THE DELINQUENT

By Frank H. Sweet.

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"You remain and study the lesson two hours," said the white-haired schoolmaster, grimly. "If you do not get it in that time I shall punish you, as I would any of the other boys. I shall make no exception."

The "boy" was a stalwart, finely-formed man of 20, with clear eyes and good-natured face. There was a humorous apprehension of the situation in his eyes as he raised them to the old man, who was scarcely more than half his own weight. But all he said was, "That's right, schoolmaster; you mustn't show partiality. But I've done the best I could.

The schoolmaster regarded him for some moments with unqualified disapproval, then turned and walked toward his desk. But half way there he paused suddenly, a cloud coming to his face. After a little hesitation he returned to the man.

"I do not want to fail in my duty to any of the boys, Calvin Hepstead," he said, "and if I have misjudged you in any way, in jot or title, I wish to rectify it. You have been with me three months now, and have learned the letters and a few figures. But there you suddenly stop, through obstinacy or indifference or inability. I do not know which, though I judge the former. Since the Indian summer brought you line-upon which the skin began to rise. A half dozen more lines rained alongside it in quick succession, and then the ruler fell as though the punishment were over. But Hepstead was still smiling.

"Hold out you other hand," ordered the schoolmaster, grimly. Then, as the man complied and that hand was also crossed with lived lines, "Now, go. Tomorrow we will commence over again."

"We'll say goodby tonight, schoolmaster," Hepstead answered. "I'm goin' away—back into my woods."

There was no anger in the voice, no trace of resentment—nothing, indeed, but friendliness and exultation. The schoolmaster stared.

"Why did you submit to the punishment, then?" he demanded.

"Oh, it was comin' to me, I guess. I didn't learn the lesson, an' I don't want any partiality. I always give what I owe an' take what's due me. Ye may tell the boys goodby tomorrow, an' say I'd like to have seen more of 'em. Generally I've been kept in recesses an' at noon an' night, so ye ain't had much chance to git acquainted. Likely I shall never be out this way any more."

"And you are going away, said the schoolmaster, with strong condemnation in his voice. "I have not had much faith in you, Calvin Hepstead, but I thought better than this. You came here for an education, and have been with me only three months. I have never had a scholar quite so weak as you, and," throwing out his hands with a sudden gesture of renunciation, "I do not wish to remember that you have been with me. My life is teaching, and I do not like failures. Now you may go."

"I want a few words with ye, first," insisted Hepstead. "We mustn't part in misunderstandin'."

"I do not wish to hear. Go!"

He was turning away when Hepstead caught him suddenly in his arms, as he might a child, and then seated himself upon a chair with the wrathful schoolmaster struggling upon his knees.

"Easy, easy, Mr. Peters," he said, soothingly. "I jest want to say a few words an' then ye can go. Mebbe ye did git a little ahead in that lickin' an' this'll sort o' even up. Now ye say I'm the weakest scholar ye're ever had, an' I guess likely ye're right. But it's this way. You've been brung up in learnin', an' I've heerd say your pa an' grandpa was schoolmasters. Letters an' figures are mixed up thick in your blood. With me it's dif'runt. My pa an' grandpa didn't know their letters, like me. We belonged to the woods."

"Why didn't you stay there?" snapped the schoolmaster, still struggling to release himself.

"Well, ye see I'd done some good-sized things that brought me friends an' a pretty big pile o' money, an' I s'pose I got to feelin' mighty friendly toward myself. When my friends said the only thing I needed was education, an' kept on sayin' it, I got to thinkin' mebbe they was right, an' come here."

"H'm!" The schoolmaster ceased to struggle against the impossible and sat quietly upon the knee. "And now you are going back to show your friends that they were mistaken in their good opinion."

Hepstead laughed with the gleefulness of a boy at the approaching holiday.

"No," he answered. "I've just thought some more an' found 't would be a mistake to keep on makin' a mistake. I'm meant for the woods. I've done good work there, an' can do more, an' it's a strong, hearty life. I could study an' git an education, I know, for I've never yet set out for a thing that I didn't git; but 't would be the best part o' my life. I'm slow at such things, an' would have to dig out every letter an' figger with a pickax, one at a time. An' in the end would it be wuth the trouble? All my int'rust is back yonder in the woods, an' we don't need much learnin' there. Then I've got this."

He allowed one hand to slip down over the schoolmaster shoulder until it reached the other hand, which had drawn a small package fsom his pocket. This was carefully untied and opened and then held before the schoolmaster's face.

"Know what 't is," he asked.

"Why—I think—yes. It is a faded rose bud, a wild variety that grows among the rocks."

"That's right," with a rapturous chuckle. "The Indian summer brought it. There's a girl back where I come from, the prettiest an' best one in all the world, but she's like me in not knowin' a letter or figger. When I come here she bid me Godspeed, for even though she believed the learnin' would draw me away from her, she thought 't would be for my good. That rose bud was picked at our first understandin', an' her sendin' it means she ain't so strong on learnin' herself, an' can't give me up; an' I, schoolmaster," with a sudden boyish laugh that shook his huge frame, "made up my mind ten days ago that I was payin' too big a price for the learnin'. I'm goin' back to her, straight. That's all. Now ye can go. I only wanted ye to understand the reason. Mebbe there's back a girl somewhere an' at some time that you used to know."

He released the prisoner and rose to his full height, stretching himself finally from the thraldom of the schoolroom. The schoolmaster stood for a moment gazing at the floor. Then he held out his hand.

"I wish you well, Hepstead," he said, in a low voice. "It may be you are right."

COMBINE ON DIVORCE.

Mother and Son File Applications Together.

Chicago, June 30.—Mrs. Francis Elmira Day, mother, and Thomas W. Day, son, both filed suits for divorce yesterday. Evidently they had succeeded in getting a club rate in the legal line, for they had the same attorney. They saved time by filing together. To add peculiarity to another public case they made the same charge. Mrs. Day, in her bill, said that Mr. Day deserted her, while Mr. Day, in his bill, said that Mrs. Day deserted him. The mother also charged cruelty, but the son had no such complaint.

It is said that the mother and son, finding themselves in the same position, came to Chicago from New York state to console one another.

THEY GET ORDERS

Police Directed to Enforce the Fourth of July Ordinance.

No Cannon Crackers, No Dynamite Canes, No Pistols.

The dynamite cane fiends are apt to find themselves in trouble if they attempt to follow their usual custom next Monday. The following bulletin has been posted at police headquarters by Chief Troyer:

"All members of this department are hereby commanded to strictly enforce the ordinance regulating the sale and discharge of fireworks within the city of Duluth. Sections 5, 6 and 7 of said ordinance read as follows:

"'Section 5. No person licensed to carry on the business mentioned in the first section of this ordinance shall sell what are known as dynamite canes, dynamite cartridges, or pistols for the explosion of any other explosive than paper cartridges; nor shall any such person sell what are known as cannon crackers exceeding four inches in length or three-quarters of an inch in diameter.

"'Section 6. No person shall within the city of Duluth explode or cause to be exploded any dynamite cane, dynamite cartridge or any pistol with any explosive other than paper cartridges.

"'Section 7. Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance, shall upon conviction, be fined in the sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars or imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding thirty days.'"

Last year the dynamite cane fiends did no little damage in the business portion of the city. Several large panes of glass were broken, and the glass prisms along the sidewalk suffered heavily. Two or three runaways also resulted from the explosion of dynamite cartridges and the ordinance was passed with a view to preventing such damage and danger of loss of life in future.

The order of Chief Troyer assures the citizens of safety from too ardent celebrating on the approaching holiday, and nervous women and children need not hesitate about turning out to see the celebrations. The large list of other attractions for July 4 also promises to restrain the wholesale burning of powder which has been the principal feature of the holiday during the past two or three years, when Jupiter Pluvius interfered with picnics and other outings.

SMITH HAS BAD RECORD

But It Does Not Include the Murder of His Family.

Helena, Mont., June 30.—Nothing is known here of John Smith's reported killing of his wife and children to prevent their disclosing his connection with the murder of Night Policeman Frederic Stevens, at Havre, Mont., as related in the Winona, Minn., dispatches. Considering Smith's eventful career in Montana, however, officials declare that Smith would not hesitate to perform such a deed should occasion arise.

Smith served a term in the Deer Lodge penitentiary for burglary, and was released about a year ago. May 11 last there was a jail delivery at Kalispell, and Smith, who was awaiting trial on a burglary charge, was among those who escaped. Telegraphic descriptions were sent throughout the state, and May 16 Policeman Stevens, at Havre, found a man rifling the till of the Chestnut saloon, and recognized Smith as the artist. Smith, however, escaped into the railroad yards, where he secured a railroad bicycle and proceeded westward. Stevens on horseback overtook the prisoner, and, compelling him to hold up his hands, started to march him to town. When within a short distance of the city, Smith suddenly whipped out a revolver and opened fire, hitting Stevens in the abdomen, inflicting wounds from which he died next day. A Posses scoured the country in search of Smith, but to no avail.

He was next heard from in Wisconsin, where he is alleged to have killed Sheriff Harris, of Eau Claire, while trying to resist arrest on the charge of having killed the Havre policeman. If Smith killed his wife and child, as reported, it was not done in Montana, as the records do not show the perpetration of any such crime in this state.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Murder Attempted In the Streets of Iron Mountain.

Iron Mountain—In front of a crowd of fifty section men, who were distributing sand along the Chapin mine divide, G. V. Gentilli, a miner, fired five shots at his brother-in-law, Joseph Fondeccio, a miner, one of the bullets entering the abdomen of Fondeccio, penetrating his intestines. One of the bullets also struck Fondeccio's 5-year-old son in the leg, the latter having hold of his father's hand at the time. The shooting occurred on one of the principal streets here. Fondeccio pursued his assailant for two blocks, when he dropped. An exciting chase was then instituted, 100 men and boys, headed by Deputy Sheriff Michela, pursuing Gentilli, who headed toward the woods and up a high hill for a half-mile. Several times Gentilli leveled his 32-caliber revolver at Michela and others in an attempt to shoot. An empty shotgun was passed to the officer at the top of the hill, who commanded Gentilli to halt, and, seeing himself surrounded and being exhausted and chased by two ugly dogs, he surrendered. He then feigned drunkenness and said he meant no harm.

The men are from the South of Italy and are said to have quarreled frequently. Fondeccio is in a precarious state. Gentilli is reported to have said he meant to take his own life could he have reached the woods. Both men are married.

Sault Ste. Marie—John L. Zurbrick, immigration inspector in charge of the Soo station, has been transferred to Detroit. Last year 23,000 immigrants were examined here. Frank M. Jewell has been appointed Zurbrick's successor.

When the shaft being sunk on the Bushman farm, near the Soo, by Albert Widdis, of Detroit, who believes gold will be found in that locality, reached a depth of about fifty feet quicksand was struck and it was necessary to use steel caissons. These were taken to the farm a few days ago and it is expected that the work will proceed satisfactorily from now on. The sand extends for a distance of fifteen feet. The shaft has not reached a sufficient depth to bring forth golden results as yet, and probably will not until a depth of at least ninety feet is attained.

Menominee—George Gagnon, a sorting gap employe, while trying to remove a large log from a sluice in the river at Menominee, was swept through the sluice with only a small log under him. He came out at the bottom without falling off the log and was uninjured by the terrible experience.

Ironwood—Jacob Ringdahl and Matt Niemi, two Ironwood bicyclists who ran into a man, seriously injuring him, were convicted in Judge Shea's court of violation of the city ordinance regarding fast bicycle riding on the public streets, and were given the limit, $25 fine or sixty days in the county jail. They were short of coin and took the sixty days.

Newberry—Philip Charboneau, employed as teamster, D. N. McLeod's logging camp in Alger county, was fatally injured by being struck on the head with a gin pole used in the work of loading logs. A load had been completed and Charboneau was in the act of loosening the chain which fastens the gin pole, when several of the top logs rolled off, sending the pole back with great force. The pole struck him on the head, while one of the logs rolled on to his body, fracturing a leg. Charboneau was taken by special train over the Sucker River railroad to Grand Marais, but lived only half an hour after arriving there. Nothing is known of his relatives.

Remorse Drove Hegland to Suicide, Think Balfour Citizens.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Driven to suicide through remorse is the way citizens of Balfour account for the taking off of Nels Hegland, early this month. Hegland shot away one side of his face. He was taken to his old home at Appleton, Minn., and died a day or two later. Two weeks after his death the badly decomposed remains of Paul Peterson were found at Balfour. Peterson had been missing a week or ten days prior to the Hegland suicide. Peterson was a man of quarrelsome disposition and he and Hegland were enemies. Citizens of Balfour now believe Hegland murdered Peterson, hid his body, took his money, supposed to be $800, and then, brooding over the crime, committed suicide. The Statesman, published at Balfour, has a long article along this line.

The release of W. J. Hurst from the penitentiary is reported. Hurst was a deputy marshal in this state for many years and two years ago was charged with using railway passes and at the same time turning in expense accounts for railroad fare. The custom had been prevalent from time immemorial and was not generally regarded as a serious matter.

Hurst entered a plea of guilty, as he expected only a fine and possibly a short jail term. Judge Amidon regarded the matter more seriously and sent him to the penitentiary for two years. Fred W. Schindler, another old-time deputy, was up on the same charge and some more serious matters. He was given five years.

Neighbors found the dead body of Winton Paden in a well in Towner county. Paden was walling the well with stone and had carried down some straw to burn out the gas at the bottom. It is supposed the gas or the smoke asphyxiated him.

As a result of a family row in which he struck his daughter with a baseball bat, Nick Pull has been held to the district court.

Grand Forks—Arthur Harris, son of a minister of Denhigh, N. D., was sentenced to two and a half years for forging a check.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Beginning with the new school year, the Sioux Falls college will have a new president in the person of Rev. E. J. Jordan, Ph. D., of Fremont, Neb., who will succeed Rev. A. J. Finch, who recently tendered his resignation. The new president is highly recommended and it is expected he will make the college one of the most flourishing in South Dakota.

The Milwaukee Railroad company has decided to grant a warehouse site on its right-of-way to Torrance Brothers at Tabor. The application was rejected some weeks ago, and Torrence Brothers resorted to the railroad commissioners for a hearing.

Summit—The stockholders of the Farmers' Elevator company will hold a meeting on Saturday for the purpose of discussing the question of disposing of the elevator at this place, which is owned by the company. Owing to a lack of support, the elevator has been operated at a loss.

Aberdeen—The promoters of the Commercial club say that the incorporation papers have been signed by over 100 business men and that practically every business concern in town is back of it. A meeting has been called for tonight to perfect the organization and elect officers. The club will give especial attention to the business and industrial interstas of the city and clubrooms for the entertainment of visitors to the city and for the social enjoyment of the members will be fitted up.

Canton—Gilbert Voyan, chief of the fire department, is in a critical condition, owing to an accident sustained at a fire a few evenings ago. While kicking in the glass door to a room containing some of the fire apparatus, one of his legs was cut by glass, and he is weak from loss of blood.

The Interstate Epworth assembly, which holds its first annual meeting in this city the first twelve days in July, promises to be the greatest gathering of its kind ever held in this part of the state. The program includes some of the finest platform talent that has ever appeared in the West. Mrs. John A. Logan will be among the lecturers on the first day and will be followed on succeeding days by Dr. Thomas Nicholson, Bishop J. F. Berry, Bishop W. F. Oldham, Bishop J. W. Hamilton, Dr. Daniel F. Berry, president of Grinnell college; Professor Hinton White, lecturer and traveler; Dr. Thomas Green, the Wesleyan quartet, and the Volfe Ladies' quartet, etc. Dr. Julius Olson will deliver the oration on the Fourth.

Miller—Sanotor Saltmarsh says the wool clip is not more than half what it was last year, though the price, 20 cents a pound, is the best here for years.

A special feature of the Fourth here will be the laying of the cornerstone of the new Masonic Temple. Grand Master I. W. Goodner, of Pierre, will be in charge.

WEST DULUTH

A Carrie Nation, the second, has her abode in West Duluth. Instead of a hatchet, she carries on her campaign with a homely pine plank. The person in question also differs slightly from the Western Carrie, in that her smashing efforts are made neither in the interests of the W. C. T. U. or newspaper notoriety. They are, or were, to preserve peace in the home, and nothing else.

The rear room of a West Duluth confectionery store, where a game of penny ante was in progress, was made the object of her attack this week. Anyone desiring to know the exact location of the building in question may satisfy his curiosity by making a tour of the alleys back of the stores along Central avenue. The object of his search will be either newly nailed up, or will boast of a brand new window. Little was left of the old sash and glass but a few shattered fragments.

A certain couple were married in West Duluth last summer. Their peace and happiness, according to common report, was complete until within the last few weeks. Then the unwise husband began to stay out late nights. It was only natural that domestic difficulties should arise. The man came in for curtain lectures quite frequently on the evil of his ways, and was warned to turn back into the straight and narrow path. But warnings fell on unheeding ears. He was accused of playing cards for money, while the partner of his joys and sorrows was left at home to entertain herself as best she might. This might not have been so bad but for the fact that it was known abroad that the game in question was nothing more than the "penny ante," and somehow made the price of a new bonnet playing penny ate?

By a little expert detective work the fond wife located the quiet game, and Tuesday night she prepared for and made her attack. Stealing along the alley she sought out a window from which a ray of light was peeping. She softly tried the door. It was locked. The time was 11:45 p. m. She applied her eye to the crack through which climbed the feeble ray of light. The crack was just large enough to disclose the head of her erring spouse. He had a seventeen-cent stack of chips before him, and was looking hungrily after a departing 24-cent pot.

There were six men in the game. With a startling suddenness the end of a six-foot plank crashed through the window, smashing sash and glass to bits. The players ducked under the table.

"I'm cut to pieces; I'm cut to pieces!" wailed one who had been struck by some flying bits of glass.

"Aha! I thought you didn't play cards," came a female voice from the window.

The men had no idea how many policemen might be backing the white face and angry eyes glaring at them from the darkness of the night, so they cannot be blamed for the wild stampede that followed. One player placed his hands on the top of the six-foot partition and vaulted over it to safety, while the others bolted for the door. It is said they did not stop running for from two to ten blocks. All disappeared except the husband, and he meekly escorted his wife home.

BLOW AT CHAIN GANG

Is Aimed By Federal Judge In Georgia.

Macon, Ga., June 30.—A decision involving the authority of municipal courts to sentence violators of municipal ordinances to "chain gangs" has been rendered by United States District Judge Emery Speer.

The case came up on a writ of habeas corpus, applied for by Henry Jamison for release from custody from the superintendent of the county chain gang.

Judge Speer decided that the superintendent was without authority to hold the negro, and directed his immediate release. Judge Speer severely scored the chain gang methods, and said:

"Indeed, it may be with entire accuracy declared that the voluminous and exhaustive preparation of the city attorney at the subsequent examination by the court has evoked no shred of authority, either American or English, where a sentence by a police magistrate to a public chain gang, with the ignominous accessories of fetters, the stripes, lash and degradation of convict life has been sustained or ever palliated.

"Under the American system the chain gang has no place in the jurisdiction and procedure in the courts where trial by jury is not a right of the accused."

Judge Speer concluded with an argument made by him twenty years ago, and which he reaffirmed. "Though the color line expert may so declare, this is no color line case. It is a negro today. It will be a white man, yea, a white child and a white woman, tomorrow. In this court the law is equal, and so are all."

"SHAPE" TESTS

To Be Applied to Chicago School Teachers.

Chicago, June 30.—A "physical beauty test" is the latest ordeal for Chicago teachers and women candidates for positions in the public schools are toiling with exercisers, visiting the masseurs and eating breakfast foods like mad in an endeavor to put on weight.

A rule of the board of education that applicants shall satisfy the medical examiners that they are of "proper size, height and weight," and the announcement that candidates will be graded according to their physical development, has led to the tissue building struggle. Of the 650 women who are taking the academic examinations, more than 100 are seeking to attain a common point.

HEARING REFUSED.

Cripple Creek, Col., June 30.—Judge W. P. Seeds of the district court refused to give a hearing today on the application for writs of habeas corpus for three union men who claim to have been unlawfully detained in prison since June 6. He left today to attend the National Democratic convention at St. Louis as a delegate.

NEWSPAPER INFLUENCE.

The Minneapolis Tribune is one Republican paper in this state that has not worked itself into a frenzy over the gubernatorial fight and it is now pointing out to the Dunn and Collins organs that have been denouncing their opponents the extremely awkward position they will be in if the convention nominates the candidate they have been abusing in all the moods and tenses. Says the Tribune:

"The Tribune has not cared to take part in the campaign of defamation of contending candidates for governor that has disgraced the Republican press of the state. We would not lie about a Democratic yellow dog as our esteemed contemporaries have lied about men, one of whom they will be begging people to vote for in a few weeks. What influence do these reckless journals expect to exert in the electoral campaign? Do they think their readers have no memories? The Pioneer Press in St. Paul and the Evening Journal here seem destitute of intellectual power to realize the future consequences of their present acts. That is one reason, among others, why neither has much influence in public affairs. This exacts common sense as well as a sense of decency. We are inclined to think that most sober-minded Republicans intend deliberately to make the best of whatever result may come from the state convention. The furibund partisans will have to do the same thing, little as they may like it. They are the whole thing in a campaign for the nomination; but they are a drop in the ocean of electors. There are not enough uncompromising enemies of either Collins or Dunn to make a bolting mass convention, representing nobody but themselves. These ranters make a deafening noise; but electoral results are reached without their aid."

There is another reason why none of these papers has much, if any, influence in public affairs: They are party organs, and when they are not squabbbling among themselves over their party's nominations, they are attacking the Democratic party without reason or decency. In this respect the Tribune is no better than the others. There is nothing the Republican party and its leaders do which they do not praise. There is nothing the Democrats do which they fail to criticize and denounce. Is it any wonder that they are without influence with the people? Is it strange that they are valueless in guiding public opinion? It is because of the general disgust of the reading public with this course of the party organs that the independent press has gained the front rank in influence. The people want the news unbiased by partisan prejudice, and to get it they turn to the independent newspapers. They want opinions that are not twisted in an endeavor to benefit this or that political party, and again they turn to the independent journals that are not tied down by party ties and are not influenced by a desire to conceal the truth that adversely affects one of the parties or benefits the other. The day of the party organ has ended, as far as any influence it exerts is concerned. It is the independent newspaper, free and untrammeled by partisan prejudice and affiliations, that is looked to by the public for unbiased news reports and honest opinions.

THE ISSUE CLEAR.

Although perhaps a mine owner himself, Benjamin B. Lawrence, of Denver, has made the Colorado issue clear. He writes a letter to the New York Sun, in which he seeks to justify the course of Governor Peabody in deporting union miners by pointing to the fact that the governor of Missouri deported several thousand Mormons in the '30s and that Vallandigham was deported from a loyal state during the civil war. Mr. Lawrence might have pointed out also that Roger Williams was once banished from Massachusetts because of his religious opinions.

It is the common trick of the individual who seeks to defend a wrong to point to precedents therefor and consider the wrong fully justified. That is the way the Republican party's violation of constitutional and statutory law is usually justified by the Republican press.

While Mr. Lawrence seeks to uphold lawlessness in the state government of Colorado the general public will be thankful to him that he has made clear the underlying cause of this antagonism to the Western Federation of Miners and this resort to official anarchy in order to break up the union. He says:

"The Western Federation of Miners are here in the state of Colorado to carry out a well-organized plan for the control of the politics of the state and by this means to become owners of property and ultimately dictators, as it were, in state matters.

"The troubles in San Miguel and Teller counties have been due to the effort being made in these counties to bring about this result. They elected in these counties a number of the county officials, and the local judges were partial to their cause. Bit by bit various county officers were appointed by the union and the law was enforced by these officials for the benefit of the union. The county offices in their possession, the next step seemed quite easy; the control absolutely of the property in the country through the levying of heavy taxes. Owners of property being unable to pay these taxes, the property would be sold, in this way gradually mines and other property would fall into the hands of the federation. * * * They are supported in this radical action by the unions, and very largely by the press of the country. Any one who has mined in Montana must grant that that state is entirely under the domination of the federation. * * * It is the control of politics of this state that the federation is ... and they have undoubtedly already ... a very substantial support, particularly in the ... senator Patterson and his newspapers. Senator ... owedly is on the side of the federation and ... take political capital from siding with them, ... e senators have in the state of Montana. If Senator Patterson can hold the Federation of Miners together as a balance of power, it may be possible for him to win the state for the Democrats. All good citizens of the state would deeply deplore any such catastrophe. Unless Governor Peabody is re-elected for governor of the state of Colorado, I fear for the future of the state, if not the country."

So it is apparent that Governor Peabody's action is taken with the sole purpose of preventing the state from falling into the hands of the Democratic party, even though a large majority of the people of the state are in favor thereof.

It is not, then, a question of preventing crime, but to prevent the people from controlling the state. It is not to prevent acts of violence, but to drive the socialistic element out of the state, whether guilty of any crime or not. No wonder that nearly every Colorado mine-owner who has aired his views on this affair has taken the side of the governor.

The theory of republican government is that the majority shall rule. A majority of the people of Colorado, having decided that there should be public ownership of monopolies or that they should be so taxed as to kill that monopoly, the men interested in ownership of mines, backed by the Republican state government, has decided that the majority shall not rule; that there shall be no public ownership; that the will of the people of the state shall be defeated by unlawful means.

That is the situation in a nutshell. That is the reason that officers chosen by the majority are compelled to resign under threats of death; that is the reason that men are confined in bull pens without trial; that is the reason that writs of habeas corpus and the constitutional right of jury trial are denied.

The question in Colorado is whether the majority or the minority shall rule. The state government is at present with the minority, which is seeking to gain the ascendancy by unlawful methods and if Governor Peabody cannot secure his election by fair means he intends to do it by deporting members of the majority.

The union miners of Colorado are mainly native-born American citizens, with a liberal sprinkling of foreigners from the best European races. They are intelligent voters and know what they want. If their demands are supported by a majority of the people of Colorado there is no reason why they should not control political affairs even to the extent of compelling government ownership of the mines.

A FREE PRESS.

In these days of government by injunction, imprisonment without trial or charges and the destruction of newspaper properties with sanction of the authorities, a decision comes from a federal court in North Carolina which is as refreshing as a southern breeze in early spring.

Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, had criticised a decision of District Judge Purnell. For this he was adjudged guilty of contempt of court and sentenced to pay a fine of $2000, or spend a term in the penitentiary.

Judge Pritchard of the United States circuit court reverses this judgment and orders immediate liberation of Editor Daniels. In rendering his opinion, Judge Pritchard said:

"That newspapers sometimes engage in unwarranted criticism of the courts cannot be denied. In some instances they construe the liberty of the press as a license to authorize them to engage in wholesale abuse of the court, but these instances are rare and do not warrant a departure from the well-settled principles of the law as declared by congress and construed by the courts. If judges charged with the administration of the law are not to be criticized on account of their official conduct, the liberty of the press is abridged and the rights of individuals are imperiled."

It is true, as Judge Pritchard says, that newspapers often exceed the limits of legitimate criticism and frequently make charges that are untrue, but no cause can be permanently injured by unjust or untruthful criticism. Right and justice must prevail in the end, no matter what may be done to prevent.

It is not right for a newspaper to take sides before or during the progress of a trial, but once a verdict is rendered, the court, the jury and the verdict are all legitimate subjects of criticism. It is just as fair to criticise the verdict or rulings of court or jury as it is to criticise the acts of any public officer charged with the enforcement of law. Those individuals who hold up their hands in holy horror when a newspaper dares to condemn the decisions of the supreme court of the United States are needlessly alarmed. If the criticism is unjust or untruthful it will be of on avail. A supreme court that cannot survive criticism of its decisions ought to have no place in this government. All courts should follow the law instead of the election returns. If the laws are wrong the people will change them.

There have been too many attempts of late to abridge the right of free speech and a free press. Judge Pritchard's wholesome decision comes at an opportune time.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

The next move will be the notification of President Roosevelt of a nomination that he dictated himself. It is a time-honored custom, but it looks awfully silly.

Once plain Clara Ward, of Detroit, Mich., later the Princess de Chimay, later the mistress of fiddler Rigo, has at last found her affinity in Joseph Peppino Riccardi. She says of him: "He is as good as he is good-looking. Now, I know the difference between caprice and love. My marriage with de Chimay was a caprice; my attachment for Rigo was another caprice. But now my heart is consumed with the flame of true love." Clara Ward was a very beautiful and talented woman. It is hoped that she may have found true happiness at last.

Conventions do not always represent a majority of the party. More often they obey the wishes of a small minority. The people do not rule. Not many years ago one man in Ely cast all the ballots that were cast at a Republican caucus. He put the whole bunch of printed tickets in the ballot box and then made out credentials to the delegates previously agreed upon. Of course those delegates were not averse to government by the few. When the people actually rule the only conventions held in this country will be the national conventions. All other officers will be nominated by direct vote.

HOTEL GOSSIP

N. A. Young, principal of the public schools at Soudan, was at the St. Louis yesterday on his way to St. Paul. Mr. Young could probably have been e delegate to the Republican convention at St. Paul, so his friends say, if he had known in advance that he would be able to go, but having other business to attend to, turned the chance over to others. He said to a reporter that the Dunn sentiment was pretty strong in his neighborhood, as well as that for Roosevelt.

The schools at Soudan the past year had an enrollment of 333, the fact that the Minnesota mine is shut down, having no apparent effect on the interest in education, and showing that most of the inhabitants interested in mining are remaining and expect the mines to reopen, rather than to move away and engage somewhere else in pursuit of a living.

James Cardie, the Cass Lake conductor, had on exhibition today at the St. Louis hotel an oarlock for row boats that is quite neat and practically non-loasble. The lock can be taken out and hinged at the side of the socket so that the oarsman can paddle with the secure feeling that his oarlock is safe from the bottom of the water or the bottom of the boat, for it is attached to the socket all the time, whether in or out. The contrivance is the invention of a friend of Mr. Cardie's.

Friends in this city of Walter T. Smith, formerly sierk at the Hotel Superior in Superior, have received word that a benefit was recently tendered him by friends, owing to his recently having gone blind. Mr. Smith resides near Milwaukee and the benefit took the form of an automobile raffle, the machine being won by Otto Best, manager of the Olympic Bowling alley, in Milwaukee.

Henry Van Mergen, of the Spalding, took a chance on the automobile, and is now numbered among the "also rans."

A traveling man reports a pretty good one that he heard in a small town in Michigan. He was selling some goods there and had occasion to go into the barroom to wash the grit from his palate.

A couple of well-dressed young men came in and walked up to the bar. When the bartender walked over toward the young man who had evidently invited the other one to take a drink said:

"Two beers. What'll you have?" This last was addressed to the other, who instantly replied:

"One of 'em."

Another man who heard this said he did not think it as good as a conversation he once heard. In his travels he had to stop at a farm house over night and in the morning there was on the table everything that the heart or stomach could desire in the way of variety, especially jam and jelly and biscuit. The biscuit were hot and calculated to make an eater want more. It appeared from the conversation that they had been cooked by a new girl.

"I've eaten worse biscuit than these," remarked the farmer's wife.

"Yes, I've eaten yours," said the farmer.

There was not much conversation between them during the balance of the meal.

HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

Washington Post: The country is giving more attention to sports, physical culture and health foods than ever before. If the passion for these endures and there is virtue in exercise and truth in heredity the American of tomorrow will be a giant, who will live far beyond the allotted span and preserve his hair, teeth, sight, digestion and complexion to the end.

The gospel of fresh air is being preached in every home. Sunburn, wind-tan and big hands are the fashion. The anemic girl is not a belle, and there is no longer a demand for the wasplike waist. It is more in harmony with the times for a maid to beat a punching bag than to thrum lightly on the guitar. Perhaps this is well. Air, sunlight, rational exercise and proper food are nature's restoratives and preservatives of health, and health is a great fortune.

In many newspapers more space is given to sports than to politics, and more space to physical culture than to modes in dress. Health food advertisements are everywhere. One feature of the health food vogue is that all thees foods are vegetable. Are we breaking away from the immoderate drinking of spirits? The old world seems to be going ahead in the right direction.

Medical Use of Whiskey.

The Hospital: Whiskey as an alternative to wine may undoubtedly be employed medicinally with advantage in certain cases, both for men and for women. But this is very different from the constant recommendation which is suggested, as if, indeed, doctors regard whiskey as a sort of panacea for every disease under the sun, and take a perfect delight in urging its consumption upon their patients. As a matter of fact, there never was a time when medical men were more slow to prescribe the use of alcohol in any form than they are in the present day, nor a time when so many refrained from advising its use at all.

ROOSEVELT AND PARKER.

Wrong Indulgence In Abuse of the President.

Nashville Banner (Dem.): Some Democratic politicians and editors seem to think that the surest way to secure Democratic success in the coming presidential election is to pour the vials of wrath and abuse upon Mr. Roosevelt and constantly hold him up to scorn and contempt, making the attack upon his personal character the chief effort and purpose of the campaign. This is an entirely mistaken idea. Legitimate criticism of the president and his record may be severe enough and may be made effective to a degree, but a campaign of unstinted abuse and ridicule will not advance the Democratic cause. Such a campaign may please many who consider only the surface signs of politics and who have a fixed determination to vote against Mr. Roosevelt and do all in their power to defeat him, but the Democracy to win must secure the votes of many thousands of people who are not bitterly biased against the president and who would have no sympathy with a campaign of abuse.

President Roosevelt's personal weaknesses and temperamental failings and his unassumed unfitness for the high position to which he was elevated by the death of President McKinley may be better emphasized and rebuked by placing a Democratic nominee in the field whose character, qualities and record shall by contrast show the American people the better and safer way for the government in the election of a Democrat who can be trusted to uphold the highest standard of the chief executive office in a manner that will involve no risk and arouse no apprehension of an erratic departure from conservative principles.

There is danger, too, of an exaggeration on the part of Democratic campaigners of the dissatisfaction among Republicans with Mr. Roosevelt or their disposition to desert him on account of his peculiar personal characteristics. There may be many Republicans in some of the doubtful states who would vote for a strong, safe and conservative Democrat upon a sound and safe platform in preference to Roosevelt, but few, if any, would leave their party to vote for a Democratic candidate who by his character and record does not strongly appeal to their respect and confidence, and even they might be turned back to the support of their own party candidate by a personally abusive course on the part of Democratic speakers and journals.

The Brooklyn Eagle, an Independent Democratic paper, which is earnestly advocating the nomination of Judge Parker, in an able article contrasting the personalities of Roosevelt and Parker, and showing the advantage the Democracy would have in this regard if Parker should be nominated, warns Democrats against overindulgence in abuse of the Republican candidate. Says the Eagle:

"Those Democratic friends should bear in mind that Mr. Roosevelts' unopposed nomination does not merely indicate the weakness of Republican partisans, who dare not challenge it, but it also indicates that he is a very strong character, and that, to be beaten at all, he must be opposed by a man who will allay the apprehensions aroused by the very excess of his masterfulness. For these reasons and others the Eagle has advocated the nomination of Alton B. Parker against Theodore Roosevelt. If Mr. Parker be nominated on a platform capable of support and with a Democrat for vice president worthy of confidence, the Eagle will feel able—and in duty bound—to prefer the Democratic to the Republican cause this year. But all the requirements must be fairly met. Judge Parker, on a bad platform, will not be 'enough.' Judge Parker, on a passable platform, with an unfit or an incompetent candidate for vice president, will not be 'enough.' We expect to be naturally considerate toward the Democracy, which is returning our way, and naturally censorious toward Republicanism, to which we are traditionally opposed. But party to us is a choice, not a prescription; an alternative, not a bondage; a preference, not a fetich, and we wish the words which we have just used to be very distinctly borne in mind. They will be significant here. They should be regarded as significant by all who here look for information or for suggestion."

The point made by the Eagle is that the Democratic nominee must be a man whose character and conservatism will be in such contrast with the impulsiveness and erratic-alness of Roosevelt as will convince thoughtful voters who are not indissolubly wedded to party that the government at Washington could be wisely awarded to the Democracy. Says the Eagle:

"The election of Roosevelt would bring about an unrestrained Republicanism. The election of Judge Parker, on a right platform and with a right running mate, would restore a restrained Democracy to federal control, in part. The qualities of the two men would antithetically be those of a wise jurist and those of a heady genius. Under conditions thus candidly set forth, the identification of judicial qualities with executive government, for four years, might be a wise result for thoughtful Americans to bring about. Parker, on a right platform and with a right running mate, could disturb nothing permanently desirable. Mr. Roosevelt, chosen for a full term, and under impact of none of the McKinley traditions from which an election on his own account could release him, can easily be conceived of as a man of risk and of shock, as well as of genius and of surprise. * * * Democracy will rise to the plane of principle as it should be by the nomination of Judge Parker. A choice between a genius and a jurist, a genius with all of his liabilities, and a jurist with all of his certitudes of studious serenity, constitutional poise and careful action, will be presented to the country by the nominations already practically forecast."

This view of the presidentiol issue can be well maintained in the campaign without resort to a character of abuse which would tend to make many voters, otherwise amenable to dignified argument, resent a method which appeals alone to prejudice. This view also makes more potent the demand for a Democratic candidate who can command the full respect and confidence of the country. It makes the suggestion of Hearst as the Democratic leader an absurdity, and it makes unadvisable the nomination by the Democrats of any man whose political record is such as to have weakened public faith in him.

"I have known more people to be crushed and trampled to death at the wedding of a viscount and a two-millionaire's daughter, than at the wedding of a duke and a ten-millionaire's daughter."

Philadelphia Press: Mrs. Nuwed—Here's the bread I started to make today. Isn't it too annoying?

Mr. Nuwed—Why, it isn't baked at all.

Mrs. Nuwed—I know it isn't; that's just it. I put plenty of baking powder in it, but it doesn't seem to have worked.

Philadelphia Press: Tommy—Gracious! See how dirty your clothes are. Won't your mother be mad, though, when you go home?

Willie—No she won't. She bought a box of "Imperial Grease and Dirt Eradicator" from a peddler today and she ain't had a chance to use it yet.

Judge: Cobwigger—What are you crying about, my dear?

Mrs. Cobwigger—I have just been reading the old love letters you sent me before we were married.

Cobwigger—That's funny. I was reading them myself the other day and they made me laugh.

Washington Star: "What do you understand by the term 'civilized people?'"

"Civilized people," answered the blunt barbarian, "are those who have been lucky enough to survive after being beaten by a superior power."

Washington Star: "Zeb," said the colored man's employer, "I'm afraid you are getting a little lazy."

"No, suh," was the earnest reply, "I isn't lazy. I kin do as much work as any two o' dose other men, but I's tryin' to keep f'um showin' off."

She could dodge a dozen autos,
She could skip before a trolley,
And the Brooklyn bridge approaches
She considered safe and jolly.

But her knees would sadly wobble,
And her courage all would dwindle,
When she got into a pasture
With an inoffensive brindle.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

St. Cloud Journal Press: Brother Cotton of Duluth made one of the best seconding speeches of the bunch, and the best thing he said was that seconding speeches were unnecessary as Roosevelt had already been nominated by the American people.

Perham Enterprise: In an editorial discussion of the price of wheat, last Saturday, the Minneapolis Journal truly stated that Liverpool is the world's regulator of prices. And still the foolish farmers of the northwest will uphold the Republican party with its robber tariff, which imposes a double price on nearly everything they must buy, while they are compelled to sell their wheat and other products in open competition with the markets of the world.

Goodhue County News: And Lind's speech, one of his finest, turned the tide. He announced forever his retirement from politics. He thinks he means it. He believes when politics reaches around and grasps him again he will shake off the clutch of public demand. Maybe he will. He has sworn off before.

Sauk Center Herald: Now that it is reasonably certain that the "stand patters" and the "tariff boosters" will be in the ascendency at the national convention it is proper to call attention to the fact that reciprocity is good Republican doctrine. The most valuable asset in all the world to a producer is a market. If a man cannot sell the articles he makes, outside of what he consumes himself, the work and money spent in making the article is lost. It is worse than lost, it is a criminal waste of money and effort. Our productions increase faster than our home demand and the only way we can widen our markets is by a judicious system of reciprocity.

Clay County Herald: Minneapolis kept a little boy behind iron bars all night recently and made his poor mother put up $1, all because the lad went in swimminbg without wearing a bathing suit. If the mill city would be that aggressive in dealing with its bribers and bribetakers the population at the stae penitentiary would be much larger than it is today.

St. Paul Globe. It is impossible to speak of Miss Keller without paying a tribute to the men and women who are working so persistently for the improvement of the condition of the defectives. Helen Keller's college career was made possible by their work. What they have accomplished has meant a great deal to her, but it means even more to the deaf, dumb and blind in the various institutions for defectives. With only a little help, Miss Keller's intelligence would surely have enabled her to find a way out into the light, but those others who are not so well endowed mentally would face a dark future, indeed, were it not for the efforts of those who are devoting their lives to the mitigation of their misfortune.

Albert Lea Tribune: "Hondooed by Lind" should be the epitaph placed upon the slab that marks the last resting place of the Hearst boom in Minnesota. It is one of the cases where the bosses overrode the wishes of the people and not an uncommon spectacle in the Democratic party. The Tribune offers its condolences to the unfrocked Hearstites and trusts they will lay more secure plans for humiliating their enemies in the state convention to be held in August.

Fairmont Sentinel: Swan J. Turnblad, editor of the great Swedish newspaper, Svenska Amerikanska Posten, can be elected governor of Minnesota on the Democratic ticket by 25,000 majority. He is a gentleman of ability and character, fitted by nature and education to discharge the duties of chief executive.

Graduation Essay.

Los Angeles Herald: The pretty girl graduate's essay will be on "The Transcendental Tendencies of the Era," but the first and most important consideration is this: The front and back of the material is gathered at the upper edge and attached to the yoke and shirred at the waist line; a deep bertha ruffle outlines—

PRIMARY REFORM.

"As to the abolition of state conventions, I do not think that would be necessary, even with direct nomination of state officers. Some kind of gathering is necessary for the promulgation of party principles, the building of party platforms and the training of the younger Republicans as they grow up."—Congressman Bede on primary reform.

Detroit Tribune: The Duluth congressman has a sane outlook and speaks with the conviction of a man who was nominated and elected by direct vote of the people. No alarm lest he encourage an ignorant suffrage in the belief that it is capable of self-government distorts the Bede theory of Republican statesmanship.

He is just as honest in his belief that the abolition of the purchasable delegate system is a good thing as he is in his conviction that party gatherings for the exchange of unbought opinion should obtain prior to every election. And he states the three purposes of such a gathering without any fear of prejudicing the direct nomination system, without any fear that machine promoters will ape his candor.

The educative value of a political gathering is incalculable to the young voter. But if the young Republican is to imbibe the principles of corruption at machine-stacked conventions, where he sees party nominations based on the violation of party principles and finds himself either one of the purchased and labeled delegates or sits an ostracized political freak contemplating his uselessness to his party so long as he retains his decency, the education is illuminating but not ennobling. A party convention which in truth formulates a platform reflecting the best thought of the voters is a powerful instrument of self-government. But what shall we say of a party convention, like that held in Grand Rapids, where the principles were defiled and the party promises shamelessly repudiated?

We want the party gatherings, our system of government demands them, demands, too, that they be gatherings of honest partisans who gather without price to enunciate principles, not to sell them, and to educate the young Republicans in political honesty and courage. And it is a miserable party that cannot get together for this purpose without accepting railroad passes and accepting a reward of political pap for cheap political services.

From Duluth, Michigan.

Detroit Tribune: Heading a dispatch from Duluth, a Boston contemporary with illuminated initials says: "Michigan goes for Hearst." At the Hub they still think the Amalgamated mines are on the Chicago drainage canal and that Lake Superior is part of the Detroit park system.

A Concealed Motive.

He talks about the tariff in a lengthy learned way,
And your brain gets kind of dazzled as you listen day by day;
He offers observations upon ratios now and then,
And shows how mathematics might relieve his fellow-men.

He pictures all the havoc and distress that may be made
If we don't restrict these combinations in restraint of trade.
He gathers up statistics and assures us that he can
Conduct the country on a strictly scientific plan.

And as you stand and wonder at his liberal array
Of facts, likewise the beauty of the things
he has to say,
You humbly bow your head and try to listen and to learn
And never dream that getting office is his chief concern.

Independence In Journalism.

Boston Herald: How many party organs are there left among the great newspapers of the country? They can be counted on one's fingers, and the few that are left are not always to be relied upon as truly loyal. The most marked change in American journalism of late years has been its development of independence.

FIGHT FOR CASH

Second Will of Man With a Pyrotechnic Career.

Francis T. Tumblety Won Fortune as a Quack Doctor.

Baltimore, June 30.—A second will of Dr. Francis T. Tumblety, who achieved international notoriety as a quack physician and a hater of women, and who was once suspected by the police of the Jack-the-Ripper murders in Whitechapel, London, was filed for probate in the Orphans court here this week. It is expected to prove the forerunner of litigation over his estate. He left $130,000 in cash with Henry Clews & Co., of New oYrk, and his total estate is valued at $170,000.

Dr. Tumblety was born at Rochester, N. Y., in 1834. He sold newspapers on the canal boats and later was employed as steward by a physician, who had an office in the rear of a drug store, and catered to a questionable practice.

Tumblety had no education, having grown up on the lots of Rochester, but he must have learned much from the physician, enough at any rate to start him on the road to success as a quack physician. He disappeared from Rochester for about ten years, and then reappeared as a physician of wealth and eccentric habit.

He dressed expensively and hardly spoke to the acquaintances of his boyhood. He was a 6-footer and wore a high hat and a long fur-lined overcoat. He generally rode a large white horse. When he chose to walk he was accompanied by a greyhound and a valet. He spent money lavishly, buying champagne by the case and cigars by the box.

Next he made his appearance in Pittsburg as the "Great American Herb Doctor," and made money fast. He made a picturesque display by riding about followed by a mounted footman in livery, and his practice included some of the best families of the city, until it was discovered that he was a quack. During the civil war Dr. Tumblety made a great splurge in Washington. He pretended to be a colonel in the army and a member of the staff of Gen. McClellan. He gave many dinners and was seen everywhere, at the state, war and navy departments and at the first-class hotels.

He pretended to be engaged in official business for the government, and was always accompanied by his dogs and his valet. He wore the uniform of a cavalry officer, with medals on both breasts.

He said that he had practised in the armies and leading hospitals of Europe, and had diplomas from the foremost institutions of America and Europe. It was only at a great personal sacrifice that he was able to accept a position in the army, but it gave him an opportunity to remain in Washington and continue his private practice.

He had a fondness for entertaining military officers in uniform at his suite of rooms in one of the prominent hotels. He would appear as host dressed in a fancy embroidered coat with medals on each breast, cavalry trousers and riding boots, and spurs fit for a show window. His dinners were furnished by the best caterers in Washington.

Whenever asked why he did not invite women to his functions he would launch a tirade against the sex. He said that he regarded all women as so much cattle, and that he would rather give a friend poison than introduce him to any woman.

He said that when a young man he fell desperately in love with a girl who seemed to reciprocate his affection. He married her, but before the honeymoon was over he discovered that her character was of the worst and thereupon he gave up the society of womankind. He kept at his Washington apartments a grewsome display of anatomical specimens of women.

After a time, exposure drove Tumblety from Washington. He slipped away to St. Louis, where he was arrested for wearing, unauthorized, the uniform of an army surgeon.

Tumblety loved notoriety. He was arrested in St. Louis in consequence of sending anonymous letters through the mails to the authorities stating that he was the double of Governor Luke B. Blackburn, of Kentucky, who had falsely been accused of spreading yellow fever through the Northern cities during the civil war by means of infected rags.

He took every occasion to deny that Harrold, who was hanged as one of Booth's confederates in the assassination of Lincoln, was his former valet. He once told his friends with a display of apparent grief and chagrin that he was being burlesqued at a concert hall in Washington.

A friend of mine went to see the alleged burlesque and found the reproduction wonderfully like the original. The supposed personator of Tumblety sang a song, "The Doctor," and was followed about the stage by two big greyhounds exactly like those owned by him. Tumblety sued the music hall proprietor for libel. One night a large man jumped from the audience to the stage and said:

"See here, you infernal scoundrel, Mr. Tumblety is a friend of mine, and I will not let such an effigy as you make him ridiculous."

The man grabbed the mustache of the supposed actor and gave it a vigorous twist, snatched off his cap and pulled his clothes away. The act exposed the personator as Tumblety himself.

Tumblety was abroad during the Whitechapel horrors, and owing to his well-known antipathy for women and his habit of collecting medical specimens, the police of London arrested him in connection with the murders. They released him for lack of evidence. Later they sought to arrest him on a new law, which was passed after the publication of "The Maiden Tribute" in the Pall Mall Gazette, but he got away.

He amassed a fortune, but his declining years were spent in apparently abject poverty. He died in St. Louis two years ago.

Henry Clews & Co., the New York bankers, and Maj. Joseph R. Kemp, of this city, are the executors of his first will. Among the bequests are $1000 to Cardinal Gibbons and $1000 to the Home for Fallen Women.

Contest Dismissed.

The contest in the case of Frank Lucas against John F. Healy, in which the plantiff sough to secure land filed upon for a homestead by the defendant, is dismissed, according to a ruling received at the local land office yesterday from Washington, reversing the decision of the Duluth register and receiver, who recommended a cancellation of the entry. Healy said that his reason for leaving the land was that he had been injured while erecting his cabin, so that it was necessary to secure immediate surgical attention. The claim involved is located in the Big Fork country.

Hayward, Wis., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Chippewa Indians of the Lac Court O'Reilles band have commenced a ten-day dance on their reservation, seventeen miles from this place. This is a war dance and will be participated in by a large number of Indians from all parts of the country. Ten members of the Kickapoolus and Pottawanimies arrived here Tuesday night from Topeka, aKs., and more are expected before the big dance is over. CONFIRMS AWARD.

Judge Cant Files Order In Condemnation.

Judgb Cant has filed a final order of confirmation of the award of the commissioners appointed to estimate the damages to property owners in the vicinity of the land traversed by the Alden Lake branch of the Minnesota & North Wisconsin railway line, against which land the railway company instituted condemnation proceedings some time ago.

A stipulation has also been filed dismissing the action so far as the Napa Valley Wine company, F. L. Dever, Andrew Gulbranson, Mathew Beck and others are concerned, the award having been accepted by the parties named.

In confirming the award the court directs the clerk of district court to enter judgment for the other respondents in the suit in cases where no appeal is taken.

The amount of the award has been paid into the court by the railway company, but several appeals from the estimate of the commissioners are still pending.

Among the respondents are the Weyerhaeuser interests, the state of Minnesota and county of St. Louis. The awards were made May 9 by a commission comprised of George W. Buck, J. A. Scott and John Dow.

The railway company sought to condemn certain parcels of land and demanded a right-of-way to the waterflow in the Cloquet river, all of which, it was claimed, was necessary for the construction of the Alden Lake branch road. Opposition to the petition was made by the Weyerhaeuser interests, and the testimony closed last week.

KING HOMEWARD BOUND.

TO HONOR DULUTH

Commercial Club to Celebrate Coming of New Steamer Duluth.

Dinner For Officers and Local Representatives —Fine Vessel.

Tomorrow evening, at the Commercial club, will be given a dinner to celebrate the intial trip of the new package freighter Duluth, the largest on the lakes, of the Western Transit company, which is due to arrive in the city about noon tomorrow, having passed Sault Ste. Marie this morning at 7 o'clock. The boats of the line usually make the run from Buffalo to Duluth in seventy-two hours, sometimes sixty-nine, but on her first trip it is deemed inadvisable to push the Duluth.

Plates for about seventy-five people will be laid tomorrow evening at the dinner, which will be for the officers of the boat, several of the employes G. I. Douglass, Jr., the local agent of the Western Transit company, and Mr. Douglass will probably preside.

The vessel is 401 feet over all, 50 feet beam and 30 feet molded depth. She has a cargo capacity of 6600 tons and is propelled by one vertical quadruple expansion engine, having high pressure cylinders, first cylinder 30 inches, second 43½ inches in diameter. The low pressure cylinder is 63 inches with a common stroke of 42 inches. The machinery is from the Detroit Engine works.

She is arranged for loading and unloading conveniently, having thirteen hatches spaced to twenty-four-foot centers. She has five compartments in her hold in adition to her water bottom. She has wide gangways which make her easy of access and hatches and gangways are arranged to accommodate the new style of clamshell buckets used in handling ore.

There are two complete electric lighting plants to alternate in case of accident.

The boat was christened Duluth in honor of the commercial importance which the Zenith City holds. When she was launched Oct. 31, at Chicago, the bottle broken over her bow contained Appolinaris water, and the breaking was by May Lillian Haskell, aged 12, said to be the youngest sponsor who ever christened a boat.

The comander of the new Duluth is Capt. Donald Gillis, who has been a master in the Western Transit line ever since it was organized in 1884, before which time he was with the old Western Transportation company. He has commanded the following steamers: Fountain City, 1884; Vanderbilt, 1886-7; Idaho, 1888-9; Boston, 1890-; Syracuse, 1893-4; Harlem, 1895-8; Troy, 1899-1903.

THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS

Upheld In the Decision of Circuit Court Judge.

Asheville, N. C., June 30.—Judge J. G. Pritchard of the United States circuit court yesterday filed his opinion in the case of Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, who had been fined $2000 for contempt of District Judge Parnell.

"The force of opinion in this country for the freedom of the press has restrained the free exercise of the power to punish this class of contempts, and in many jurisdictions statues have been enacted depriving the court of the power to punish them. It was taken from the federal courts by act of congress of 1831, which act deprives those courts of the common law power to protect by this process their suitors, witnesses, officers and themselves against the libel of the press, though published and circulated, pending the trial of a case therein.

"That newspapers sometimes engage in unwarranted criticism of the courts cannot be denied. In some instances they construe the liberty of the press as a license to authorize them to engage in wholesale abuse of the court, but these instances are rare and do not warrant a departure from the well-settled principles of the law, as declared by congress and construed by the courts. If judges charged with the administration of the law are not to be criticised on account of their official conduct, the liberty of the press is abridged and the rights of individuals are imperilled. There may be instances where the publication of editorials, or other matters in newspapers, would bring the author within the limitations of the statute. For instance, if a newspaper should publish an article concerning a trial which was being considered by a jury, and should send a copy of the paper containing such article to the jury, or a member thereof, during the progress of the trial, for the purpose of influencing them in their decision, it would present a question whether such conduct would not be misbehavior in the presence of the court, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice.

"It appears that the distinguished judge who adjudged the petitioner to be in contempt of court exceeded the authority granted in the act of 1831, and that the court was without jurisdiction. Such being the case, the judgment of the court is void and, therefore, annulled. In view of the foregoing, the court finds that the petitioner is unlawfully restrained of his liberty, and it is, therefore, considered and ordered by the court that the said Joseph Daniels be discharged from the custody of the marshal of the United States court, and that he go hence without delay."

SUED BY HIS DOCTOR.

"A doctor here has sued me for $12.50, which I claimed was excessive for a case of cholera morbus," says R. White, of Coachella, Cal. "At the trial he praised his medical skill and medicine. I asked him if it was not Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy he used as I had good reason to believe it was, and he would not say under oath that it was not." No doctor could use a better remedy than this in a case of cholera morbus, it never fails. Sold by all druggists.

REFUSES COUNTY AID.

Fisherman Near Lester River Prefers to Suffer.

John Johnson, an aged and infirm fisherman residing near the mouth of Lester river, has refused to accept county aid, preferring privation to becoming a county charge. He has lived near the river for thirty years past. Hans Anderson, his partner, aged 73 years, was taken to the county poor farm yesterday.

The two men are well known characters in the locality where they lived. They were missed from their usual vocation and an investigation showed both to be ill and in straightened circumstances.

Temporary aid was given them by the people at Lester Park and a visit was paid them by one of the poor commissioners.

Anderson accepted the aid offered, but Johnson refused, saying he would rather stay in his hut and get along the best way he can rather than become a county charge.

The little hut that sheltered the two fishermen for the last quarter of a century offers little protection in bad weather.

Judge Cant has granted a stay of thirty days in the proceedings instituted by City Attorney Bert Fesler in behalf of several taxpayers, who have appealed from the action of the council in allowing the estimate of Oscar Anderson on acount of a contract for cement walks. Exception to the aproval of Anderson's claim is taken on the ground that the work he contracted for was sub-let to John Lowry, and that this is a volation of a city ordinance and deviation from the terms of the contract.

The amount stipulated in the agreement between the council and the contractor is $3,329.26.

TO CHANGE CAMP

Y. M. C. A. Juniors May Be Taken to Deerwood This Year.

Longyear Lake Does Not Give Quite the Desired Site.

The annual camp of the junior department of the Y. M. C. A. will probably be held at Deerwood this year in place of Longyear lake near Ely.

For two seasons past the boys have gone to Longyear lake. The site on which they camped has not been altogether satisfactory, but it was the best that could be found. This year the officers are trying to find a site where they can establish a permanent camping ground, and build shacks to be used every summer.

Next Tuesday Secretary Bevis and Secretary McLeod of the junior department will leave for Deerwood to search for suitable camping ground which will combine all of the advantages of a safe and level bathing beach, good fishing, good boating facilities, and a smooth and level camping ground. The mosquitoes proved to be too attentive last season at Longyear lake and attempt will be made this year to find a spot which is not infested with them.

Arrangements are already being made for the trip, which will take place during the early part of August. The boys will spend from ten days to two weeks in camp, and will be in charge of the secretary and a local physician who takes a great deal of interest in the Y. M. C. A. work. The camp proved to be so popular last year and the boys enjoyed the trip so thoroughly, that an increase in the number is looked for this season. Secretary McLeod expects to have anywhere from 75 to 100 boys in the camp.

Last year the total expense to each boy, including the railroad fare and the board while in camp, amounted to $6. A special rate has been secured from the railroad company this year, on condition that the boys go to Deerwood, and the cost of the trip is not likely to exceed that of last year. The boys secure all of their vegetables from neighboring farmers and keep the table well supplied with fish, so that the cost of their board is reduced to a nominal figure.

The members of the junior department have been looking forward to the trip for weeks past, and not a few of the lads have started in to earn the necessary $6, since school closed, by selling papers and working as messenger boys in the stores.

SUCCUMBS TO HIS ILLNESS

Philip Wolfrom, Promising Young Artist, Dies In East.

Philip Wolfrom, son of Louis Wolfrom, of 303 Forty-third avenue east, died of paresis, at an asylum on Long Island, N. Y., yesterday afternoon.

His father and another son, James Wolfrom, left for the East this afternoon to attend the funeral. Miss Anna Wolfrom, the decedent's sister, is now in New York, having been there some time looking after her brother. The burial will be made at Hudson City, the young man's former home.

Philip Wolfrom, who was 35 years of age, was a promising artist. He had a natural talent for art and spent five years in study at home and abroad, establishing a creditable reputation among the critics. In France he studied under the renowned Jerome.

Mr. Wolfrom began a model in clay to represent a cowboy on horseback, but the Spanish-American war breaking out at that time he changed the design to that of a rough rider. Before he completed the model his health failed. The succeeding two years he spent in trying to regain his health, finally opening a studio in New York. This was destroyed by fire and the loss, together with bad health preyed on his mind until it weakened and for three years past he has been under medical care at Eastern hospitals.

During the past winter Mr. Wolfrom, the father, received letters from his son indicating good prospects for recovery and hopes were entertained that he might follow his vocation again.

SUIT IS DISMISSED.

L. R. Martin's Action For Value of Horse Adjusted.

The suit instituted by L. R. Martin, of this city, against the State Live Stock Sanitary board and local health officers, to recover damages for a horse which was alleged to have the glanders and was killed by order of the authorities, has been dismissed in district court by stipulation.

The terms by which settlement was effected were that the sanitary board should appoint a person to appraise the value of the horse. John McKay, a veterinary surgeon of this city has been appointed for that purpose.

The horse was a valuable animal, and Mr. Martin insisted that it did not have the glanders. Opinions of various veterinary surgeons called to examine it differed.

Mr. Martin, it is said, sent parts of the horse, claimed to be affected by glanders, to expert veterinary surgeons at Chicago, where tests were made by inoculating dogs, rabbits and other animals, no single case of glanders developing.

The owner protested against the killing of the horse at the time it was pronounced diseased, but the state live stock sanitary board ordered the animal killed and the order was carried out.

Mr. Martin was represented by H. B. Fryberger.

YOUNG MAN WRITES

Letter From Julian Renfro, Stricken Dumb at Chicago.

Tells of Manifestion of Which Much Has Been Published.

E. S. Davis, general secretary of the Young Men's Christian association at Proctor, is in receipt of a remarkable letter from Julian Renfro, the young man who, professing disbelief in God and following his statement with a challenge to the Almighty to demonstrate His power, was suddenly stricken deaf and dumb.

The modern miracle, as it was quite generally called, occurred in Chicago, May 31. It attracted a good deal of attention all over the country and was widely commented on by press and pulpit. Mr. Davis, feeling that a statement from Renfro himself regarding the facts of the case might help in the association work, wrote the young man, hardly knowing whether to hope for a reply or not. The reply came, however, taking the form of a long letter, setting forth the facts and giving present and past beliefs of the former doubter. The letter, written at Renfro's home at Shreveport, La., is as follows:

Mr. E. S. Davis,
Proctorknott, Minn.

Dear Brother:—Your communication was gladly received this evening. I am indeed happy to do what I can in the way of enlightening anyone on this manifestation of the Divine power.

I thank you for the sympathy you express regarding my affliction, but, dear brother, I consider it a blessing and not an affliction. God's will, not mine, be done. I asked for a manifestation and a proof of His power and existence, and He was kind enough to give it to me.

I doubted the existence of a god, but as I had heard and read so much of a god it was my earnest desire to know and feel it for myself. I had not always doubted the existence of God, for once I was a member of the M. E. church, but so many things had happened here of late and I had seen so much suffering and crime unalleviated and unpunished I came to the conclusion that if there was a god, and a just one, he would not permit all this. But now I see that God, in His infinite power and wisdom, doeth all things well. All doubt has been brushed away from my heart and mind.

I shall relate in as brief a manner as possible the facts of God's visitation. On Tuesday night, May 31, three other young men and myself were playing a game of whist. We had argued on the existence of a god several times prior to this, but had always discontinued the discussion when it became too heated. On the night in question we had discontinued the game and rose preparatory to retiring. In some way the discussion of religion was started again, and in the heat of the discussion I, not as a defy or in a boastful manner, but because I firmly doubted the existence of a god, told the boys that not unless I was stricken deaf and dumb would I believe that there was one. In an instant, from the southeastern portion of the room (overhead) a bright face, as of an angel, shone out. A flash of anger from its eye, as of lightening, struck me down.

I was rendered unconscious and a physician was called, but he understood nothing, thus could not relieve me, so he went away. Since then I have felt perfectly well, only I am devoid of speech and hearing, yet I am contented and as happy as one could be. I have no cause for sorrow, for in my heart there is perfect sunshine and happiness.

Doubt God I cannot; serve Him I must. My life is His to do with as He sees fit. I have every reason to believe that He wants me to work in His vineyard, and have every assurance that He will lead and protect me, and in His own appointed time restore both sense of speech and hearing. Till then I shall do all I can by writing and studying His word.

I would like very much to tell you all particulars, but owing to the great number of letters similar to yours I shall be obliged to omit a goodly portion of them. However, I shall be pleased, yea happy, if this will do you any good in your work, and hope that you will write again, when I shall be able to give you a more complete account of the affair.

Ever since leaving Chicago I have, while wide awake, received manifestations of God's presence in the affair and of His love for mankind. Tell all with whom you come in contact that there is a God, an all-wise God, an all-powerful and divine God. Tell them that what they can understand of His words to accept freely, and what they do not understand, accept on His promise. He is God, and beside Him there is no other. He is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother, and is ever present in the time of need.

When it is His pleasure to restore both of my senses I shall go out in the field to work. I hope in my course over the broad world in my fight against Satin and sin I shall meet you, and that I shall some day be in that part of the country, for my field is the world. I shall go forth into all the world preaching His word, for He has told me the world, not a state or city, will be my field.

Pray for me as I shall do for you. I wish you much success in your work, and hope that the few words I send may do some good. I shall be pleased to hear from you at any time and shall be pleased to answer any letters from any that wish to write me, only ask them to enclose return postage, as I have quite a number of letters to write and stamps alone amount to quite a bit, and God has seen fit to choose a poor (as to financial ability) representative.

May the God of glory, that all-wise and all-powerful God that I am serving bless you and keep you safe. Be firm, steadfast and unmovable; praise Him forever; trust him implicitly and He shall abide in you and you in Him.

"My prayer is that you may grow in grace and the favor of God. I am yours in Christ, St. Julian Renfro.

No. 253 Elm street.,
Shreveport, La.

"Praise the Lord God forever."

Renfro was born of religious parents in Shreveport, but did not take kindly to the solemn teachings of his mother, and left home several years ago, going to Chicago and taking up work in the office of a North Side tannery as shipping clerk. Last fall he formed a close friendship with several young men, and it was with three of these that he was playing cards just before he was stricken. During the religious discussion spoken of in the letter Renfro is reported to have said:

"There may be demonstrations of God about me, but I do not understand them. Fellows, if God would demonstrate Himself to me in some way—for instance, if He should strike me deaf and dumb or blind—I might admit His existence."

One of the men was about to reply to the argument when he noticed Renfro turn pale. The next moment the skeptic threw his arms out before him as if warding off a blow, then he convulsively placed his hands before his face. An instant later he fell forward to the floor.

At first Renfro's companions thought him dead, and then they concluded he was shamming. Eventually they rushed out, one for a physician and another for water. The letter tells of the events following.

SILVER TO GAIN

In Value During the Next Two Years, It Is Predicted.

Demand In Orient For Mexican Money Since War Started.

New York, June 30.—The war in Manchuria and Korea is requiring vast local expenditures in those countries by both Russia and Japan, and these expenditures are made in the greatest part in silver currency.

The Chinese and Koreans are familiar with Mexican silver coinage and prefer payments to be made in that coinage. The consequence is that Russia and Japan have for months absorbed the Mexican coinage of the Philippines, Hongkong and Shanghai and disbursed it at the seat of war. This last week a Japanese loan has been placed in Mexico and will be paid for by Mexican silver, removing several millions of dollars in the white metal from Mexico and transferring it to the far East.

Strong interests are rapidly securing control of the important lead-silver mines of the United States and Mexico, and have already in hand the control of the production to a very marked degree by purchases of some properties and leases of others.

There will be, during the coming two years, a gradual increase in the price of silver bullion, the gain in value being the result of a greater use of silver in subsidiary currency in America and in Europe, and as silver is the currency of Asia, there will be a wider spread and a greater demand for silver money of all denominations by the people on that great continent.

India is prosperous as compared with former periods of her history. Commerce and manufacturing never were of so great a volume nor of so high values as they are at present in that great empire.

The merchants were never so well protected as now, and at no time since the country was opened to Europeans has there been so much actual prosperity among the many millions and so little suffering and distress. Two years of successive fair crops have kept famine away, and two years of greater exports to other countries have brought in currency to the people.

Less than two years ago the interest rate of the Bank of Bengal was 7 per cent per annum, and on Thursday of last week the same bank reduced the rate from 4 per cent to 3 per cent per annum. This was caused by the great increase in currency in India and of the funds at the disposal of Indian merchants and exporters arising from the sale of Indian products abroad. India produces some cotton, which has brought good prices. India is largely increasing her production of gold from her mines at Mysore and other points, and this gold is exported and its value in silver is sent to India or placed to the credit of Indias' bankers. India is exporting greater quantities of tea than ever before, and that is adding to her currency, and all these are contributing to the bettering of financial conditions of all classes even to the poorest paid tillers of the soil.

As the inhabitants of any country increase their purchasing power by an increase of currency and trade increases as purchasing power of the masses of the population increases, India will demand more silver from Europe and America with each succeeding year.

As stated above, Russia and Japan find it absolutely necessary to have silver for disbursement in Manchuria and Korea, and however the war results those two great domains will hereafter be opened to the trade of the world, and like India, they will absorb and retain many millions of dollars in silver annually. China, devoted to her ancient usages, customs and traditions, may adopt steam and electric railways, encourage and promote electric lighting systems and even buy bicycles and automobiles, but no man now living will behold her people give up the hoarding of silver bullion or cease the use of silver money. With the use of silver increasing in every portion of the known world and with the most important of the silver-producing mines passing into control of strong financial and inuflential business interests, a continued rise in the price of silver bullion can be confidently counted upon.

As with other articles in universal use, the metal tin has lately largely increased in value owing to the greatly increased demand. This great demand is mostly from the different countries in Europe, and as no other metal is in such extensive household use as tin and its field is in the greatest part that of domestic purposes, this sudden and rapid demand, it is fair to suppose, arises from a bettering of conditions of European populations and an increase in their purchasing power.

Students of social and economic conditions recognize as an established fact that an increase in purchasing power of populations is first manifested in an increase in purchases of breadstuffs and other food supplies; next, in purchases of articles for domestic use, necessities for the household; then increases in purchases of clothing, followed by demand for tools and building materials. The trade reports for two to three years last past have steadily borne the statistics of increased demand for food supplies from nearly every country under the sun. Many countries have increased their demands for the classes of articles that follow extensive purchases of provisions, and when the European countries send forth such pressing demands for the metal that is so largely used in the household it is proof positive of widely spread increase in purchasing power of communities heretofore unable to provide themselves with that which they needed and desired.

The value of this information as to the greatly increased demand for tin is therefore not confined to dealers in this metal or in articles into which the metal is manufactured, but it is valuable to all manufacturers and producers as the forerunner of greater activity in numerous other branches of trade and commerce.

Our manufacturers and business men have for two years anxiously watched the trade of our own country, doubting the permanency of our great prosperity and fearful of a collapse of values.

Today even the most timid and despondent have to confess that throughout the whole land there is nothing but sound, stable, strong financial conditions, and that values of all agricultural productions are well maintained; that manufacturers are in profitable lines of business; that labor is in good demand and fairly paid; that moneyed institutions were never so well supplied with cash, and that currency was never so well and thoroughly distributed among the people. Real estate values, whether of town, city, village or farm property, are firmly held after good advances.

These are the conditions in the United States today, and this in the face of declines in stocks of great enterprises, that twenty years ago such declines would have caused the panic that timid souls expected to come the last two years. Today, instead of fearing panic, the best-informed people are looking forward to a still greater activity and a long-continued advance in values to a much higher plane. The conditions of European populations have largely improved, and their financial conditions are stronger and more powerful than ever in history. This improvement abroad will have its effect here, and the demands of Europe will grow greater for the products of America year after year. The coming increase in the business of this country will be the result of the increase in the purchasing power not only of the United States, but of the inhabitants of Europe, Asia, Africa and the isles of the sea.

THE MACHINE ELEMENT CONTROLS CONVENTION.

Joplin, Mo., June 30.—The Democratic state convention to elect thirty-six delegates to the national convention at St. Louis, last night selected the following delegates-at-large:

United States Senator Stone, Governor A. M. Dockery, Congressman Champ Clark and Congressman D. A. Dearmond.

Thirty-two district delegates were also chosen. The convention was controlled by the so-called "machine" element, which is opposed to the faction which is supporting Joseph W. Folk, of St. Louis, candidate for governor.

The convention endorsed Senator Francis M. Cockrell for president by adopting the following resolution:

"Recognizing Senator Frances M. Cockrell as one of the ablest and most distinguished Americans and one who has the respect of the entire nation, we hereby instruct the delegates to the national convention to support him for president of the United States as long as his name is before it and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination."

The delegates were instructed to vote as a unit on all questions in the national convention.

COURTED, WOOED,

Married, Separated and Divorced Within Thirty-Six Hours.

All Happened Because Bride Wanted to See Boat Races.

New York, June 30.—Courted, wooed, married and separated—all within thirty-six hours—such is the romance experienced by pretty Edna M. Mosier, one of the brightest and most vivacious school girls of Courtland, N. Y., and Warren H. Jarvis, of Ithaca, also of the Empire state. The principal actors in this recent romance are now separated and estranged, and will go on record, fearing no duplication of their folly by any loving couple the wide world over.

According to current report the romantic incident which prompted the young girl to take such an important step in life without more forethought, was her great desire to see the celebrated regatta at Ithaca, at which she had longed to be present, but was prevented by her mother, who continually refused permission to her daughter to view the aquatic sport.

As the story is reported, the married couple met for the first time about five weeks ago, but at that time love was far distant from their thoughts. The day before the races, however, so it is said, Jarvis encountered the pretty school girl by chance while on her way home from school, and by mutual agreement took a long walk, during which time Jarvis gave expression of his love, which had just sprung into life, the girl likewise furnishing evidence of her affection for him.

When they left each other at 6 o'clock that same evening, it was agreed that they should meet again at 7:30 o'clock on the normal school grounds. The appointment was kept, and in the shadow of the walls of the school buildings they made the plans for their marriage. After an hour they went to the home of the Rev. David W. Keppel, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, of Courtland, N. Y., who performed the marriage ceremony. After marriage they took a train to Ithaca.

The next day, the races over,, the young married couple began to realize their true position, being without means to provide for themselves, and it just dawned on them that they must acquaint their respective parents with the fact of their marriage, although they had only been together less than twenty-four hours from the time they took their first walk, arranged for the marriage and were united in wedlock.

They thereupon made known to Mr. Jarvis' parents, who reside in Ithaca, the fact that they had entered the matrimonial arena and were now husband and wife, to remain together through life inseparably.

A scene ensued which frightened the young couple and gave them an inkling of what encouragement they could expect from their parents.

Within a short time two greatly astonished and sorrowing mothers, the bride's mother having been apprised of the marriage, and hastening to Ithaca, were taking part in a heated conference, resulting early the next morning in both appearing in court, when articles were signed annulling the marriage. Thus about thirty-six hours after marriage the legal separation took place.

The two young people are now drifted apart, although their love for each other is unabated, as is evidenced by the following letter received a few days ago by Edna from Jarvis:

"My Dear, Dear Edna:

"Oh, Edna, my heart is broken; to think that we have been parted, just when we were so happy together. I haven't slept much since, thinking of you all hours of the day and night. You don't know how much I love you. Oh, if I could only see your dear, sweet face again. Edna, do you love me yet? Do you think of me? Remember how happy we were.

"I hope you will never forget me, for I am thinking of you all the time. They are teasing the life all out of me here in Ithaca, but if you were only here I would not mind it. Remember the last walk we had together? It was like a dream to me. Why did they separate us? I would have done everything in my power to make you happy. Now, my dear Edna, write me a nice, long letter, and tell me what you think of the whole affair. Your own husband,

"WARREN."

The pretty young schol girl who formed a matrimonial alliance with Jarvis, with whom she had previously been acquainted only a very short time, and was forced by the courts to separate from him, gives her version of the episode, as follows:

"I met Mr. Jarvis about five weeks prior to our marriage. We were married by the Rev. D. W. Kepple, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Cortland, N. Y. It was no case of love at first sight on my part. I was married on the impulse of the moment, not realizing what I was doing. I deeply feel the humiliation I have brought upon myself. I was 16, Oct. 25, 1903, and was a student in the graduating class of the Cortland normal school.

"When I was introduced to my husband's mother, she was greatly astonished and asked him how he expected to support a wife. Continuing further, she said: 'Your father will disapprove of your marriage, Warren, as you are too young and not self-supporting.'

"We were then invited to the home of my husband's sister, two miles south of Ithaca, where we were royally entertained. Subsequently my mother, two sisters and a brother arrived for the purpose of bringing me back to Cortland or leaving me with Mr. Jarvis.

"I admit that I have never been allowed to remain out after dark or keep company with young men, as my mother considered me too young. The question of the annulment of the marriage took place the morning following the wedding at the home of Mr. Jarvis, all the parties concerned being parents. Later we all went to the office of Attorney O. N. Kellogg, where articles were drawn up and signed by Mrs. Rebecca Jarvis, mother of Mr. Jarvis. It was decided to postpone further legal action in the matter for the present."

RESTRICTING THE OUTPUT

Cleveland, June 30.—The Iron Trade Review has this to say concerning market conditions, in its current issue:

The first half of 1904 ends with a restrictive movement underway in the iron trade that promises to bring pig iron production back to the February basis, when the output was at a yearly rate of less than 15,000,000 tons. The extent of shut downs of rolling mills and steel works on July 1, and the length of the idle period cannot be fully determined at this writing but will be considerable. Scale disagreements will cause some interruption, particularly in sheet and tin plate mills. There is a disposition among blast furnace operators to prevent the accumulation of their product so that the idleness of the mills will not necessarily mean further weakening in the pig iron market.

In spite of general preparations for curtailed output, there has been more than a fair volume of inquiry for pig iron and for steel products in the past week. The pig iron situation gives token of more life and the proportion of inquiry resulting in business is probably greater than in finished material.

REDUCTION IN GRAIN RATES

Has Been Agreed Upon By Atlantic Coast Railways.

New York, June 30.—A reduction in east bound grain rates has been agreed upon by the Atlantic Coast Trunk line railroads. It will take effect tomorrow and is made to equalize the rates prevailing on the Canadian lines. The export interests of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore will be thereby put in a position to compete with the Canadian grain dealers.

Under the new tariff, all grain from Buffalo is placed upon a three cent basis. This is a reduction of 1 cent per bushel on wheat and flax, ¾ cent per bushel on corn and ½ cent per bushel on barley. No reduction is made on oats, because the export movement is limited.

A three-cent rate on wheat means that grain can be brought from Chicago and placed alongside ship for 4½ cents and counting floating elevator charges of 7-8 cent per bushel net, can be placed on board ship for 5 1-8 cents.

NARROWLY ESCAPES

To the Shore After Being Imprisoned By the Tide.

San Francisco, June 30.—Andrew Johnson, of 413 Fulton street, found good walking out to the rocks at Land's End yesterday morning and good fishing after he got there. An hour later he was gazing wild-eyed and dismayed across a stretch of breakers between himself and the shore, wondering who had moved his rocky perch out to sea.

Johnson mounted the rock at about 10 o'clock, bent on a few hours' fishing. He failed to observe that the low tide, which had permitted him to reach the rock dry shod, had already turned, and his interest in the sport was so great that he did not note the fact until a wide and deep stretch of water had cut him off from shore. Under ordinary circumstances Johnson could easily have made his way to the shore with nothing worse than a wetting to remind him of his carelessness. But at this particular point the formation of the shore is so rocky that the berakers dashing against the crags makes the way practically impossible an hour after the tide serves.

It was some time before Johnson could attract the attention of people on shore, and it was hours longer before help could reach him. During the hours of waiting he was obliged to fight the fast-rising breakers on a none too comfortable and a decidedly slippery foot hold, and when finally rescued he was both drenched to the skin and exhausted.

The particular rock on which Johnson had his uncomfortable and dangerous experience is a short distance from the shore inside Land's End, about at Baker's point, and a half mile perhaps from the Baker's beach boathouse of the United States life saving service. About 11 o'clock his predicament assumed serious aspect. The surf is heavy at Baker's beach, and the combers which rolled in dashed spray all over him and threatened to wash him from the rock.

Flood tide was late in the afternoon yesterday, and so Johnson's chances did not improve as the time wore on. The water around the rock at high tide is probably not more than twelve feet deep, nor is the distance to shore at all great. It is the surf which is dangerous. He might easily have been driven against a rock just behind the one upon which he was by the breakers and been beaten to death in a few minutes.

It was not until quite late in the afternoon that notice was taken of the fact that he was in trouble and that steps were taken to rescue him. A man and a woman perceived that he was in straits and the police were notified. Mounted Officer Greggains rode to the Golden Gate life staving station and notified Capt. George H. Varney, who set out with a crew of six for the Baker's beach boathouse. He previously telephoned to Capt. John S. Clark of the Fort Point station, asking him to go to Johnson's aid, but the telephone failed to work, and Clark did not find out what was wanted until later.

Varney and his men twice tried to launch the heavy surf boat, which is kept in the boathouse, but the surf all along the beach at that point makes getting out a boat of the type of this surfboat a difficult task. The beach shoals off sudenly and the breakers are big. Upon his second attempt Capt. Varney's boat filled. He desisted and again telephoned to Capt. Clark at Fort Point.

Meantime Johnson was being watched by a large number of persons on the cliffs. Every now and again a bigger breaker than common would strike him and nearly make him lose his footing.

Capt. Clark started to the rescue in a whaleboat with a crew of six about 4:40 o'clock. The distance is about two and a half miles, but it was done in about fifty minutes' time. The rescuers were obliged to hug the shore closely, which tended to make their work the harder, owing to the called to Johnson to get down the rock in fine style. Just as it approached Clark had his men stop rowing and he and they donned their life belts. He caled to Johnson to get down the rock as close to the water as possible, because there was the risk that the boat might be driven against it.

Then the captain and oarsmen deftly shot the bow of the craft almost under Johnson's feet. Johnson jumped into the boat, and the onlookers cheered. Johnson stood up in the boat and waved his hat, and the excitement was over. The life savers, after wigwagging to Capt. Varney, made sail and returned to the Fort Point station, Capt. Clark took the chilled man to the station, gave him some stimulants and supper and sent him home by the street cars.

He carried home no fish.

MUST PAY UP TO GET CREDIT

Purchaser's Standing Will Be Revealed to Cleveland Merchants.

Cleveland, O., June 30.—It may soon be impossible for the dishonest to obtain credit at the big retail Cleveland stores and business houses.

The credit man is becoming more and more a responsible factor in the business life of the city and it is his judgment which saves big losses to his firm every year. Few Cleveland people know of the existence of the Retail Credit Men's association, but hundreds of them are known to the members of the organiaztion, which has a membership of seventy credit men from leading Cleveland retail stores.

"Ninety per cent of the rtail business of Cleveland is done on credit," said an official of the association yesterday, "and it is very necessary that the merchants should protect themselves."

In the near future the members of the Retail Credit Men's association plan to elect a secretary who will devote his entire time to looking after the business of the organization and supplying information regarding "dead beats" and "slow pays' to the different credit men.

Not only have the credit men a plan to have a paid secretary and open headquarters, but they have a plan whereby any member can obtain information relating to the standing of any person who does not pay his or her bills.

A list of undesirable buyers will be kept by the association. Opposite the name of a "poor pay" will be placed a number to designate the firm which is or has been trying to collect a bill.

The credit men who desire to obtain information regarding the person whose name has been presented will call up the firm indicated by the number and will receive the desired information. The printed lists containing the names of "dead beats" and "slow pays," which are brought before the members of the association at their meetings.

"To illustrate the good our association does us," said a credit man yesterday, "I had occasion recently to press the payment of a bill of long standing. I informed the man that his name would come before the association. Next day I received a check from him."

USED LEFT HAND

And Thieving Negress Is Now a Prisoner.

Philadelphia, June 30.—It was all because she had a penchant for usng her left hand oftener than her right hand that the police learned of the whereabouts of Annie Connor, a negress, who is wanted in New York city for the alleged theft of a number of stylish gowns belonging to Edith Granger, who lives at 247 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, that city.

With the dresses concealed in a trunk the accused woman fled from New York a week ago without leaving any clew behind. It was known, however, that she had friends in this city, and as it was thought she would come here the police were requested to be on the lookout. In furnishing a description of the negress Miss Granger said in her letter: "She is very much left-handed, and as she writes and does nearly everything with her left hand she may be recogniezd in this manner."

Detective Doyle, the night sleuth of the city hall force, took up the search for the accused woman, and locating her at a house on Bancroft street, below Bainbridge. As far as her appearance was concerned she answered the furnished description in nearly every particular, but in order to be certain that he was not making a mistake the sleuth induced the woman to write a letter, and as she did it with her left hand he concluded that he had the right person and arrested her.

The woman, according to the detective, subsequently confessed and gave information that will result in the recovery of the stolen gowns. She was remanded by Magistrate Kochersperger pending extradition.

AURORA, ILL., CASHIER AN EMBEZZLER.

Chicago, June 30.—Col. Jacob H. Plain, cashier of the German-American National bank of Aurora, Ill., has been arrested, charged with the misappropriation of $60,000 of the funds of the bank. The alleged peculations have extended over a period of three years, during which time bank examiners have several itmes gone over the affaiis of the bank and reported all correct. When the shortage was finally discovered by a special bank examiner, Mr. Plain was arrested. When brought before United States Commissioner Foote the prisoner waived examination and was held to the July term of the federal grand jury under bonds of $10,000.

Mr. Plain has turned over all his private accounts to the directors of the bank and his father and brother have made good part of the bank's deficit. The capital stock of the institution is unimpaired and is in excellent shape to withstand any run that may develop as a result of Plain's alleged shortage.

MAINE REPUBLICANS ARE FOR RECIPROCITY.

Bangor, Me., June 30.—William T. Cobb, of Rockland, was nominated for governor by the Republican state convention. Only one ballot was required, Mr. Cobb having 36 votes to spare over four other aspirants for the nomination. Hearty receptions were accorded to Senator Hale, who presided, and Congressmen Burleigh, Littlefield and Powers who were among the delegates.

The platform adopted declares for protection, the reciprocity of Blaine, Arthur, Harrison, McKinley and Dingley; endorses the administration of President Roosevelt and pledges support of the national Republican ticket.

COURTED, WOOED,

Married, Separated and Divorced Within Thirty-Six Hours.

All Happened Because Bride Wanted to See Boat Races.

New York, June 30.—Courted, wooed, married and separated—all within thirty-six hours—such is the romance experienced by pretty Edna M. Mosier, one of the brightest and most vivacious school girls of Courtland, N. Y., and Warren H. Jarvis, of Ithaca, also of the Empire state. The principal actors in this recent romance are now separated and estranged, and will go on record, fearing no duplication of their folly by any loving couple the wide world over.

According to current report the romantic incident which prompted the young girl to take such an important step in life without more forethought, was her great desire to see the celebrated regatta at Ithaca, at which she had longed to be present, but was prevented by her mother, who continually refused permission to her daughter to view the aquatic sport.

As the story is reported, the married couple met for the first time about five weeks ago, but at that time love was far distant from their thoughts. The day before the races, however, so it is said, Jarvis encountered the pretty school girl by chance while on her way home from school, and by mutual agreement took a long walk, during which time Jarvis gave expression of his love, which had just sprung into life, the girl likewise furnishing evidence of her affection for him.

When they left each other at 6 o'clock that same evening, it was agreed that they should meet again at 7:30 o'clock on the normal school grounds. The appointment was kept, and in the shadow of the walls of the school buildings they made the plans for their marriage. After an hour they went to the home of the Rev. David W. Keppel, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, of Courtland, N. Y., who performed the marriage ceremony. After marriage they took a train to Ithaca.

The next day, the races over,. the young married couple began to realize their true position, being without means to provide for themselves, and it just dawned on them that they must acquaint their respective parents with the fact of their marriage, although they had only been together less than twenty-four hours from the time they took their first walk, arranged for the marriage and were united in wedlock.

They thereupon made known to Mr. Jarvis' parents, who reside in Ithaca, the fact that they had entered the matrimonial arena and were now husband and wife, to remain together through life inseparably.

A scene ensued which frightened the young couple and gave them an inkling of what encouragement they could expect from their parents.

Within a short time two greatly astonished and sorrowing mothers, the bride's mother having been apprised of the marriage, and hastening to Ithaca, were taking part in a heated conference, resulting early the next morning in both appearing in court, when articles were signed annulling the marriage. Thus about thirty-six hours after marriage the legal separation took place.

The two young people are now drifted apart, although their love for each other is unabated, as is evidenced by the following letter received a few days ago by Edna from Jarvis:

"My Dear, Dear Edna:

"Oh, Edna, my heart is broken; to think that we have been parted, just when we were so happy together. I haven't slept much since, thinking of you all hours of the day and night. You don't know how much I love you. Oh, if I could only see your dear, sweet face again. Edna, do you love me yet? Do you think of me? Remember how happy we were.

"I hope you will never forget me, for I am thinking of you all the time. They are teasing the life almost out of me here in Ithaca, but if you were only here I would not mind it. Remember the last walk we had together? It was like a dream to me. Why did they separate us? I would have done everything in my power to make you happy. Now, my dear Edna, write me a nice, long letter, and tell me what you think of the whole affair. Your own husband,

"WARREN."

The pretty young school girl who formed a matrimonial alliance with Jarvis, with whom she had previously been acquainted only a very short time, and was forced by the courts to separate from him, gives her version of the episode, as follows:

"I met Mr. Jarvis about five weeks prior to our marriage. We were married by the Rev. D. W. Kepple, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Cortland, N. Y. It was no case of love at first sight on my part. I was married on the impulse of the moment, not realizing what I was doing. I deeply feel the humiliation I have brought upon myself. I was 16, Oct. 25, 1903, and was a student in the graduating class of the Cortland normal school.

"When I was introduced to my husband's mother, she was greatly astonished and asked him how he expected to support a wife. Continuing further, she said: 'Your father will disapprove of your marriage, Warren, as you are too young and not self-supporting.'

"We were then invited to the home of my husband's sister, two miles south of Ithaca, where we were royally entertained. Subsequently my mother, two sisters and a brother arrived for the purpose of bringing me back to Cortland or leaving me with Mr. Jarvis.

"I admit that I have never been allowed to remain out after dark or keep company with young men, as my mother considered me too young. The question of the annulment of the marriage took place the morning following the wedding at the home of Mr. Jarvis, all the parties concerned being parents. Later we all went to the office of Attorney O. N. Kellogg, where articles were drawn up and signed by Mrs. Rebecca Jarvis, mother of Mr. Jarvis. It was decided to postpone further legal action in the matter for the present."

RESTRICTING THE OUTPUT

Cleveland, June 30.—The Iron Trade Review has this to say concerning market conditions, in its current issue:

The first half of 1904 ends with a restrictive movement underway in the iron trade that promises to bring pig iron production back to the February basis, when the output was at a yearly rate of less than 15,000,000 tons. The extent of shut downs of rolling mills and steel works on July 1, and the length of the idle period cannot be fully determined at this writing but will be considerable. Scale disagreements will cause some interruption, particularly in sheet and tin plate mills. There is a disposition among blast furnace operators to prevent the accumulation of their product so that the idleness of the mills will not necessarily mean further weakening in the pig iron market.

In spite of general preparations for curtailed output, there has been more than a fair volume of inquiry for pig iron and for steel products in the past week. The pig iron situation gives token of more life and the proportion of inquiry resulting in business is probably greater than in finished material.

REDUCTION IN GRAIN RATES

Has Been Agreed Upon By Atlantic Coast Railways.

New York, June 30.—A reduction in east bound grain rates has been agreed upon by the Atlantic Coast Trunk line railroads. It will take effect tomorrow and is made to equalize the rates prevailing on the Canadian lines. The export interests of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore will be thereby put in a position to compete with the Canadian grain dealers.

Under the new tariff, all grain from Buffalo is placed upon a three cent basis. This is a reduction of 1 cent per bushel on wheat and flax, ¾ cent per bushel on corn and ½ cent per bushel on barley. No reduction is made on oats, because the export movement is limited.

A three-cent rate on wheat means that grain can be brought from Chicago and placed alongside ship for 1½ cents and counting floating elevator charges of 7-8 cent per bushel net, can be placed on board ship for 5 1-8 cents.

NARROWLY ESCAPES

To the Shore After Being Imprisoned By the Tide.

San Francisco, June 30.—Andrew Johnson, of 413 Fulton street, found good walking out to the rocks at Land's End yesterday morning and good fishing after he got there. An hour later he was gazing wild-eyed and dismayed across a stretch of breakers between himself and the shore, wondering who had moved his rocky perch out to sea.

Johnson mounted the rock at about 10 o'clock, bent on a few hours' fishing. He failed to observe that the low tide, which had permitted him to reach the rock dry shod, had already turned, and his interest in the sport was so great that he did not note the fact until a wide and deep stretch of water had cut him off from shore. Under ordinary circumstances Johnson could easily have made his way to the shore with nothing worse than a wetting to remind him of his carelessness. But at this particular point the formation of the shore is so rocky that the berakers dashing against the crags makes the way practically impossible an hour after the tide serves.

It was some time before Johnson could attract the attention of people on shore, and it was hours longer before help could reach him. During the hours of waiting he was obliged to fight the fast-rising breakers on a none too comfortable and a decidedly slippery foot hold, and when finally rescued he was both drenched to the skin and exhausted.

The particular rock on which Johnson had his uncomfortable and dangerous experience is a short distance from the shore inside Land's End, about at Baker's point, and a half mile perhaps from the Baker's beach boathouse of the United States life saving service. About 11 o'clock his predicament assumed serious aspect. The surf is heavy at Baker's beach, and the combers which rolled in dashed spray all over him and threatened to wash him from the rock.

Flood tide was late in the afternoon yesterday, and so Johnson's chances did not improve as the time wore on. The water around the rock at high tide is probably not more than twelve feet deep, nor is the distance to shore at all great. It is the surf which is dangerous. He might easily have been driven against a rock just behind the one upon which he was by the breakers and been beaten to death in a few minutes.

It was not until quite late in the afternoon that notice was taken of the fact that he was in trouble and that steps were taken to rescue him. A man and a woman perceived that he was in straits and the police were notified. Mounted Officer Greggains rode to the Golden Gate life staving station and notified Capt. George H. Varney, who set out with a crew of six for the Baker's beach boathouse. He previously telephoned to Capt. John S. Clark of the Fort Point station, asking him to go to Johnson's aid, but the telephone failed to work, and Clark did not find out what was wanted until later.

Varney and his men twice tried to launch the heavy surf boat, which is kept in the boathouse, but the surf all along the beach at that point makes getting out a boat of the type of this surfboat a difficult task. The beach shoals off sudenly and the breakers are big. Upon his second attempt Capt. Varney's boat filled. He desisted and again telephoned to Capt. Clark at Fort Point.

Meantime Johnson was being watched by a large number of persons on the cliffs. Every now and again a bigger breaker than common would strike him and nearly make him lose his footing.

Capt. Clark started to the rescue in a whaleboat with a crew of six about 4:40 o'clock. The distance is about two and a half miles, but it was done in about fifty minutes' time. The rescuers were obliged to hug the shore closely, which tended to make their work the harder, owing to the called to Johnson to get down the rock as close to the water as possible, because there was the risk that the boat might be driven against it.

Then the captain and oarsmen deftly shot the bow of the craft almost under Johnson's feet. Johnson jumped into the boat, and the onlookers cheered. Johnson stood up in the boat and waved his hat, and the excitement was over. The life savers, after wigwagging to Capt. Varney, made sail and returned to the Fort Point station, Capt. Clark took the chilled man to the station, gave him some stimulants and supper and sent him home by the street cars.

He carried home no fish.

MUST PAY UP TO GET CREDIT

Purchaser's Standing Will Be Revealed to Cleveland Merchants.

Cleveland, O., June 30.—It may soon be impossible for the dishonest to obtain credit at the big retail Cleveland stores and business houses.

The credit man is becoming more and more a responsible factor in the business life of the city and it is his judgment which saves big losses to his firm every year. Few Cleveland people know of the existence of the Retail Credit Men's association, but hundreds of them are known to the members of the organization, which has a membership of seventy credit men from leading Cleveland retail stores.

"Ninety per cent of the rtail business of Cleveland is done on credit," said an official of the association yesterday, "and it is very necessary that the merchants should protect themselves."

In the near future the members of the Retail Credit Men's association plan to elect a secretary who will devote his entire time to looking after the business of the organization and supplying information regarding "dead beats" and "slow pays' to the different credit men.

Not only have the credit men a plan to have a paid secretary and open headquarters, but they have a plan whereby any member can obtain information relating to the standing of any person who does not pay his or her bills.

A list of undesirable buyers will be kept by the association. Opposite the name of a "poor pay" will be placed a number to designate the firm which is or has been trying to collect a bill.

The credit men who desire to obtain information regarding the person whose name has been presented will call up the firm indicated by the number and will receive the desired information. The printed lists containing the names of "dead beats" and "slow pays," which are brought before the members of the association at their meetings.

"To illustrate the good our association does us," said a credit man yesterday, "I had occasion recently to press the payment of a bill of long standing. I informed the man that his name would come before the association. Next day I received a check from him."

And Thieving Negress Is Now a Prisoner.

Philadelphia, June 30.—It was all because she had a penchant for using her left hand oftener than her right hand that the police learned of the whereabouts of Annie Connor, a negress, who is wanted in New York city for the alleged theft of a number of stylish gowns belonging to Edith Granger, who lives at 247 West One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street, that city.

With the dresses concealed in a trunk the accused woman fled from New York a week ago without leaving any clew behind. It was known, however, that she had friends in this city, and as it was thought she would come here the police were requested to be on the lookout. In furnishing a description of the negress Miss Granger said in her letter: "She is very much left-handed, and as she writes and does nearly everything with her left hand she may be recognized in this manner."

Detective Doyle, the night sleuth of the city hall force, took up the search for the accused woman, and located her at a house on Bancroft street, below Bainbridge. As far as her appearance was concerned she answered the furnished description in nearly every particular, but in order to be certain that he was not making a mistake the sleuth induced the woman to write a letter, and as she did it with her left hand he concluded that he had the right person and arrested her.

The woman, according to the detective, subsequently confessed and gave information that will result in the recovery of the stolen gowns. She was remanded by Magistrate Kochersperger pending extradition.

AURORA, ILL., CASHIER AN EMBEZZLER.

Chicago, June 30.—Col. Jacob H. Plain, cashier of the German-American National bank of Aurora, Ill., has been arrested, charged with the misappropriation of $60,000 of the funds of the bank. The alleged peculations have extended over a period of three years, during which time bank examiners have several itmes gone over the affairs of the bank and reported all correct. When the shortage was finally discovered by a special bank examiner, Mr. Plain was arrested. When brought before United States Commissioner Foote the prisoner waived examination and was held to the July term of the federal grand jury under bonds of $10,000.

Mr. Plain has turned over all his private accounts to the directors of the bank and his father and brother have made good part of the bank's deficit. The capital stock of the institution is unimpaired and is in excellent shape to withstand any run that may develop as a result of Plain's alleged shortage.

MAINE REPUBLICANS ARE FOR RECIPROCITY.

Bangor, Me., June 30.—William T. Cobb, of Rockland, was nominated for governor by the Republican state convention. Only one ballot was required, Mr. Cobb having 36 votes to spare over four other aspirants for the nomination. Hearty receptions were accorded to Senator Hale, who presided, and Congressmen Burleigh, Littlefield and Powers who were among the delegates.

The platform adopted declares for protection, the reciprocity of Blaine, Arthur, Harrison, McKinley and Dingley; endorses the administration of President Roosevelt and pledges support of the national Republican ticket.

SLIGHTLY LOWER

Wheat Has Decline But the Weakness Is Not Marked.

English Markets Higher and Other Foreign Markets Lower.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 30.—The wheat market was lower today and the tone from the moment of opening was bearish, though during the morning there was a rally from the low point. Prices started out unchanged but did not hold. The strength in the Liverpool market, which closed ½d higher, aided the price somewhat and prevented a heavier decline. London closed 1/16@⅛d higher, but other foreign markets were all lower. Paris fell 1¼c to 1¾c, Berlin ½c. Buda Pesth 1¼c and Antwerp was unchanged.

The weather was generally favorable, though there was some crop news from the Northwest that was not entirely favorable.

Argentine shipments of wheat this week are not expected to exceed 800,000 bus.

The daily option in Duluth lost ¼c and September ⅛c; in Minneapolis July fell ¼c and September was a shade lower; in Chicago July closed a shade lower and September a shade higher, and in New York July was ¼c lower and September a shade higher.

Car receipts at Duluth were 16 against 42 last year, and of Minneapolis 197 against 188 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 213 against 230 last year. Chicago received 6 against 22 last year. Winnipeg receipts were 137 against 198 last year.

Primary receipts were 294,000 bus, last year 363,000 bus. Shipments 131,000 bus, last year 63,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 81,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged to ¼d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅛@¼c lower. September oats closed ⅛c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 258,000 bus., last year 510,000 bus. Shipments, 356,000 bus., last year 765,000 bus. Clearances were 26,000 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was quiet throughout the morning. The July option opened unchanged at 92⅝c, fell to 92c at 9:50, sold at 92¼c at 11:07, at 92⅛c at 11:25 and then advanced to 92⅝c at noon and closed there, a loss from yesterday of ⅛c. The September option also opened unchanged at 82c, fell to 81⅝@¾c and closed ⅛c lower than yesterday at 81⅞c.

Cash offerings were dull and there was no change in the basis of prices.

Flax was fairly active, most of the trading being in the October option. July sold ⅛c up to $1.09½, but settled back to $1.09 and closed there. October moved within a range of ⅛c and closed unchanged at $1.11⅛. The September option advanced ¼c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Sentiment of the Wheat Pit Again Bearish.

Chicago, June 30.—The wheat market today was subject to considerable liquidation as a result of an improvement in weather conditions in the Southwest. Sentiment in the pit was bearish, but the firm tone of cables held prices fairly steady. September opened a shade lower to ¼c higher at 81⅛@¼c to 81¾c and eased off to 80⅞@81c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 219 cars, against 153 cars last week and 252 cars a year ago.

Influenced by a weak undertone in corn September wheat sold off to 80¾c. Late in the day a firmer feeling developed on an improved demand resulting from reports of rain in Kansas. The market closed firm with September showing a shade advance at 81¼@¾c.

The feature of trading in corn was liquidation of July. As a result, the nearby delivery was weak. Buying of September by commission houses on the higher cables held the distant futures steady. September opened a shade lower to a shade higher at 48¾c to 49¾c and held within the opening range. Local receipts were 250 cars, 18 of contract grade.

The selling of July continued throughout the day and a weak tone prevailed at the close. After selling off to 48¾@49c. September closed ⅛@¼c lower at 48½c.

Oats were steady on a fair scattered demand, with only light offerings. September opened a shade higher at 32½c, sold at 32⅛@¼c and reacted to 32c. Local receipts were 128 cars.

A firm hog market had a supporting influence in the provisions pit, all products showing slight gains. There was some buying credited to outside interests and no selling of importance. September pork opened 5c higher at $12.87½ and sold up to $12.92½. September lard was up 2½c at $7.07½. Ribs were up 5c at $7.55.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Cincinnati Price Current: Large well-filled heads general in winter wheat. Damage by rust in Illinois, and by rains in West. Local and slight in aggregate. The condition as a whole are not materially changed. Corn moderately late. Weedy in Kansas and Missouri, otherwise in prime condition. Oats generally favorable.

• • •

A Kansas City message reads: "Message from Hayes City says: Weather fine. They reported yesterday that harvest would begin today. Midland Elevator company say they have reports and the weather all along the Union Pacific; their man from Russell, Kas., in today says damages does not amount to anything. Have heard nothing from farther south yet."

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: Message from Russell, Kan., says: "Had heavy rain here Tuesday night, and will not be possible to get into the wheat fields within ten days."

George H. Lyons, of Omaha, estimates the spring wheat area of Nebraska 10 per cent larger and winter wheat 35 per cent smaller than last year. In a letter to the Calumet and Western Grain company he said that harvest would begin about the 7th or 8th of July. The shortage in the winter wheat area was due, he said, to the dry weather last fall, the acreage being partially taken up by spring wheat seeding. He reports the oats condition fine, but corn having too much rain.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Market closed a shade firmer than yesterday. The map did not show as much rain in the Southwest as yesterday's reports would indicate, and better weather is predicted for tomorrow. This caused some reselling and some pressure from bear interest. The pressure is at no time, however, very great. Stocks are very small, and with cash wheat at usual premiums the bears do not sell with much confidence. Foreign markets are showing more strength. The market is likely to have all the fickleness of the weather, but the cash demand, while not large, is supporting cash prices very well, and until stocks begin to accumulate we are inclined to think we would buy wheat on the breaks.

Corn—It was another day of liquidation by scattered holders of July stuff. There was not much of any other feature to the market. The weather is, on the whole, favorable to the crop. Receipts are fair and the demand slow. The expectation is that corn will be delivered on July contracts tomorrow. Where it will land will be watched with interest.

Oats—There was some pressure from scattered liquidation this morning. We doubt if it doubtful whether any oats will be delivered on July contracts tomorrow. We still advise buying September and December oats on the soft spots.

Provisions—It was a rather quiet market with a firm tone. Receipts are about the same as a year ago. The action of the market indicates that July liquidation is well completed, and as a result of it we are inclined to think that the outside holdings have been reduced somewhat, although they are still liberal. Other things being equal, there should be some upward reaction, now that liquidation is over.

• • •

B. E. Baker's Chicago Grain Letter: Wheat—The situation did not appear nearly so bullish this morning. Prices were remarkably stubborn on the morning's decline and recovered the loss led by buying of old July by a local bull house. The bullish sentiment created yesterday had not entirely worn off with the improved weather and better crop reports and the more favorable forecast. The Snow report of yesterday was to some extent offset by another today which was more optimistic in regard to the central counties of Kansas. St. Louis advices suggest the new crop movement is on the increase. The Northwestern Miller reports too much rain during the past week for the crop. The North Dakota crop bulletin reports the same condition in the low lands but reports theerop as a whole in fine shape. The Northwest and Southwest were at times prominent sellers of the Sept. option. Estimates for tomorrow, 10 cars.

Corn—Liquidation of July corn continues. Trade was light and local with the news more favorable. Less was heard of poor crop prospects. Reports from Illinois were uniformally optimistic and Snow states the prospect west of Newton, Kas., was much better, the corn being of firm stand and good color. Estimates tomorrow 200 cars.

Oats—July oats yielded to further liquidation while the deferred futures were firm with a light trade. While crop reports are entirely satisfactory there is nothing in them to suggest a large crop will not be harvested. Northen Illinois and Wisconsin have received beneficial rain. The demand for old oats is much less keen which is affecting the July. The sample market was ½c to 1c a bus. lower. Estimates for tomorrow 107 cars.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat was quite active but nervous and irregular, averaging little trade, limited as to new business. The news was less tinged with bullishness and buying orders seem to play out suddenly on all sharp advances, so that, as we expected, the market acts heavy and declines easily. Entire West and Northwest has the promise of fair weather. Millers bought little wheat in anticipation of a general shut down tomorrow night. Samples of growing wheat from Manitoba was shown that measured 30 inches and the geenral crop stand is much better than a year ago. It is thought that the trade is well eevned up and with the continuation of favorable weather and crop reports any important price changes will be toward a lower level and it should prove right to sell wheat on any further advance.

STRONGER TONE

To the Stock Market But the Dullness Continued.

Prices Eased Off Toward the Close on Profit-Taking.

New York, June 30.—Prices of stocks today rose a shade over last night's level, but the market was narrow and unimportant. The taking of a 1200 share block of Canadian Pacific lifted it ½ and Metropolitan Street Railway rose as much.

The narrow fluctuations afforded but little opportunity for successful trading. Considerable Metropolitan Street Railroad changed hands between 111¼ and 111½, and a large block of Pennsylvania was boukht. The tone generally was firm and most stocks ruled from ¼ to ⅜ up. Detroit Southern preferred and North American advanced a point and Consolidated Gas 1¼.

The market was more active than yesterday and quite firm. D. & H. and General Electric rose a point and Central of Jersey fell 1½. There were sales of 100 shares of New York & Harlem at 400 and of 150 shares at 405. The preceding sale was on Dec. 30 last of 20 shares at 395, but the last full share lot sold at 414. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Profit taking lowered a few stocks but the general market remained substantially unchanged. Metropolitan Street railroad lost its early advance while Manhattan made a belated rise of ⅝. General Electric improved 2 points and Westinghouse Electric nearly 3.

Speculation during the afternoon was practically inanimate. Changes were confined to ⅛ either way and there was no perceptible tendency. Leading stocks were quoted at the higher prices of the morning. American Steel foundries and the preferred dropped 1, while New York, Chicago & St. Louis first preferred improved 1½.

Louisville & Nashville touched 110; New York Central and St. Louis first preferred jumped 3½ and Pacific Mail 1. There was no eddy in the general market. The closing was rather easy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market has continued dull, but stronger in tone today. Advances scored in Canadian Pacific and St. Paul were most noteworthy. Otherwise the gains were very small. News was unchanged and trading was professional throughout the day. The whole market being of the holiday kind. Pennsylvania was active, but sagged down. The bond market continues to show strength.

• • •

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today at the opening showed a little more animation and there was a somewhat more hopeful feeling prevalent. Shortly after midday, the market became dull and towards the close eased off on some profit-taking. The immediate course of the market will depend to some extent on the Democratic nomination next week. The market closed steady.

• • •

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is a trifle more active with prices a trifle higher. Both are due probably to some covering of shorts on account of the approaching holidays. That is about all there is to it. The action shows how stocks can be bought without advancing prices. Nothing else can be said of it. It is a waiting market pending the action of the Democratic convention and a little further crop developments. We still feel that the better class of railroad stocks should be bought.

• • •

Randolph to Paine, Webber & Co.: Transaction are very small. In spite of the intense dullness and the triple holiday with the St. Louis convention immediately following, there was not the slightest pressure from any quarter to sell. Covering purchases were urgent in Metropolitan because of intimations from sources that the recent decline in the stock may not have been due to liquidation, and because of the rumor that there is a deal on between this road and the interborough company wil not down and it is believed Mr. Belmont is anxious to be indentified with all the traffic roads of Manhattan.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 30.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $166,965,872; gold, $65,179,915; silver, $27,846,194; United States notes, $12,306,438; treasury notes of 1890, $27,595; national bank notes, $14,712,084; total receipts this day, $2,990,874; total receipts this month, $47,886,515; total receipts this year, $541,186,746; total expenditures this day, $647,000 total expenditures this month, $36,967,000; total expenditures this year, $587,539,072; deposits in national banks, $115,525,309.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, June 30.—Close: Money on call easy at 1¼@¾ per cent; closing bid 1¼, offered at 1¾; time money easy, 60 and 90 days 2 per cent, six months 3@3½ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 3½@4 per cent. Sterling exchanges steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87.10@15 for demand and at $4.85.35 for 60-day bills; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88; commercial bills, $4.84½@85. Bar silver, 56⅜c; Mexican dollars, 46c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds firm.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 30.—The cotton market opened quiet at an advance of 1@6 points, in response to better Liverpool cables and a rather lower July condition report from a leading local authority. With the weather generally favorable, the demand was limited to the covering of smaller shorts, while there also seemed a disposition to liquidate long lines for over the holidays, and the market by the end of the first hour had lost all its advance, with prices net unchanged to 8 points lower. Trading was dull.

Cotton spot closed dull; middling uplands, 10.85; middling gulf, 11.10. Sales, 598 bales. Futures closed barely steady: July, 10.20; August, 10.20; September, 9.65; October, 9.50; November, 9.42; December, 9.47; January, 9.50; February, 9.53; March, 9.56.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The firmness of the railroads today is explained as due to the existence of a considerable short interest and a belief on the part of bull traders that July interest and dividend disbursements will bring in enough new investment business to at least sustain prices. The market is selling in anticipation of the holidays and the coming Democratic convention has not yet materialized. Coppers were very quiet, but prices averaged slightly higher. It is expected that United States Mining will declare a dividend of 50c per share tomorrow.

TIONESTA ASHORE

Big Passenger Steamer Grounds on Whitefish Point.

Captain Lost Bearings In Dense Fog—Vessel Uninjured.

Grand Marais, Mich., June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The big passenger steamer Tionesta of the Anchor line, with a fair list of passengers from Duluth to the lower lakes, went ashore three miles above Whitefish point in a dense fog early today. The steamer ran two feet out, and is resting on a sandy bottom. The boat is not leaking, and the weather is fine for wrecking operations in getting the Tionesta afloat. Tugs have been sent for from Sault Ste. Marie. Whitefish point, where the big steamer is fetched up, is the projecting point of land into Lake Superior above Sault Ste. Marie. The captain turned in too soon, thinking he had passed the point.

HUNTING FOR CARGOES.

Chicago, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Vessel agents were hunting for cargoes today, but little business offered today as they have been, with no signs of improvement in sight. Another drop in coal freights will send a good many of the smaller carriers to the dock until September.

CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

Cleveland, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Freight conditions are unchanged here, and will remain so until the United States Steel corporation announces its requirements. This is expected, however, to occur during the present week.

BUSINESS OF PORT.

Although the business of Duluth for the present month will fall below the June average, the report of the customs office will show a greater number of arrivals and clearances than was expected would be the case from the indications the first half of June. Up to last night there had been 224 clearances from the local port and 203 entries.

One thing the present month will make a good showing in is consumption entries, or entries of boats with merchandise. There have thus far been 32 such entries, while the previous record, that of June, 1903, was 26 entries. There will be more to add to the list today, bringing the total up to 35 or more.

THE CREDENTIALS COMMITTEE NAMED

And Began Meeting at Once to Hear the Contestants.

Senator Clapp's Plea For Harmony Soothed an Indignant Delegate.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state Republican convention held two short sessions today and then, following out a program agreed upon by the leaders of the partisans of the various candidates, adjourned until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. The leaders had been in conference since last evening, trying to devise a plan whereby the numerous contests might be settled with as little friction as possible, and it was finally determined to allow Chairman Clapp to appoint a credentials committee of fifteen, seven members to represent the Dunn interests, seven the Collins adherents, and one the Eddy candidacy and to adjourn the convention until this committee had acted.

This agreement was not reached until the convention had taken a noon recess and the delegates who were not in the confidence of the leaders were rather disappointed when the adjournment was suggested, but after a number of motions and counter motions the suggestion prevailed and the convention adjourned. The plan for the adjournment was agreed upon because it was feared that if the session continued throughout the day the excitement, which had rapidly been reaching fever heat, would render the delegates uncontrollable and trouble would ensue.

The committee on credentials met at 3 o'clock and at once began the work of hearing the merits of the various cases presented to them.

St. Paul, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The delegates to the Republican state convention were again slow in assembling in the afternoon. Col. C. W. Johnson, who had been selected as temporary secretary, announced that the credentials from Rock and Isanti counties had not been turned in. This occasioned further delay, and it was 2:30 p. m. before the convention was called to order. Mr. Ward moved that a committee of fifteen be appointed on credentials. This was carried. United States Marshal Grimshaw of Hennepin moved the appointment of a committee of nine on permanent organization, one from each congressional district. At the suggestion of the chair, this was amended so that the committee could be appointed irrespective of location.

Senator Laybourn of Duluth moved a committee of nine on resolutions.

A Hennepin county delegate made a point of order that as the convention had not been permanently organized these committees should not be appointed now, but the chair overruled this point, and the motion prevailed.

The chair then appointed the credentials committee, as follows, the list having been agreed to by the leaders of the principal contestants:

Ward, of Alexandria; Hartley, of Duluth; Seward, of Marshall; Feig, of Kandiyohi; Anderson, of Winona; Stevens, of Polk; Benedict, of Blue Earth; Nelson, of Kittson; Dodge, of Rice; Somerville, of Brown; Wilson, of Goodhue.

The chair then suggested a recess until tomorrow morning in order to give the committee time to act.

Senator Brower, of St. Cloud, moved that notice be given by the credentials committee to all parties at interest in the contests as to the time and place of the meeting of the committee. This was agreed to and it was announced that the committee would meet at 3 o'clock at the Ryan hotel.

Senator Laybourn announced a meeting of the committee on resolutions at 8 o'clock.

United States Marshal Grimshaw of Hennepin announced a meeting of the Collins supporters and drew upon himself a storm of mingled cheers and hisses, the latter predominating. Chairman Clapp sharply rebuked the delegates for their adverse reception of Mr. Grimshaw's announcement and his ruling was greeted with cheers.

A delegate from Goodhue objected to the naming of Mr. Wilson on the credentials committee because Mr. Wilson was not a delegate. Chairman Clapp answered that the list as announced had been agreed to by the leaders of the two principal factions in the interest of harmony.

The delegate, who proclaimed himself a Dunn supporter, demanded to know whether the people of Goodhue county were entitled to elect their delegates or whether the candidates for governor had that right.

Chairman Clapp finally soothed the indignant delegate by a further plea for harmony, and after a number of motions and counter motions, an adjournment was taken until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Chairman Clapp did not announce the committees on permanent organization or resolutions. United States Marshal Grimshaw will be chairman of the first-named committee, and Senator George R. Laybourn of Duluth will preside over the committee that is to formulate the platform.

TAMMANY LEADER

States His Position With Regard to Candidates.

New York, June 30.—Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall, made a statement today as to his attitude with reference to the National Democratic convention. He said:

"I would like to say, in view to the reports that I am booming a candidate for the national convention that I am booming no candidate. I am instructed for Parker, but I have not changed from my original position. I still hold that Cleveland is the strongest man that can be nominated."

"Tammany delegates being instructed for Parker, how can they go to St. Louis and work for Cleveland?" Mr. Murphy was asked.

"I am instructed for Parker," was the reply. "That is all I have to say about that."

"Is there any possibility that the Tammany delegation may be released from its instruction after the first ballot?"

"I can't say anything as to that."

CLARK COMES HOME.

THE SMITHS.

Not a Country But Has Known of This Big Family.

The United States cannot begin to hold the Smiths, says the New York Press. That fact becomes at once apparent to the student of foreign directories.

That is nothing to the discredit of the two great strongholds. Neither does it reflect disparagingly against the Smiths. All the countries do their best to accommodate the Smiths and the Smiths do their best to be accommodated, but by sheer force of numbers they are obliged to seek additional territory.

New York alone provides a home for so many Smiths that it takes more than twenty-five columns of the city directory to enumerate them. Other American cities, emulating the example of the metropolis, do equally well by the Smiths, according to the general population.

Even in Europe it is impossible to get away from the Smiths. There is not a town on the continent big enough to assert itself to become established in trade. There is a Shanghai Smith and a Canton Smith. Smith of Shanghai is described as a "maker of fine cabinets." Smith of Canton is an auctioneer.

RUSSIA'S PEOPLE.

The partisans of Russia are wont to claim that the sympathies of Americans in the war between Russia and Japan should be with the former country, because not only are the Russians fellow-Christians with ourselves, but they are of the same race, whereas the Japanese are alien in religion and in blood. With this theory Karl Blind take direct issue in the North American Review. Prof. Blind cites history to show that when the Russian kingdom was founded there was a mere sprinkling of Slav people toward the west of the territory, while the great plain in the north was occupied by Ugrian, Finnish and Tartar tribes, kindred to the Turanian or Mongol stock.

It is worthy of notice that this Mongolian strain was strongly reinforced through the invasion of the Golden Horde, in the beginning of the thirteenth century. In view of tch facts as these, it seems ridiculous to regard Russia as the champion of the Aryan race against the so-called "yellow peril." Prof. Blind takes occassion to protest against the supposition on which the fear of the "yellow peril" is founded, that non-Aryan races are atural enemies of European culture, and he points to the Finns, the Moors in Spain and the Magyars as affording conclusive proof of the falseness of that idea.

A VEGETARIAN FOR THE NAVY.

Our vegetarian friends are somewhat elated at the noticably perfect physical condition of W. C. Adair, a young Ohio boy, who passed his physical examination for entrance to the Naval academy with flying colors, and who is far stricter in his diet that some who teach the principles of this cult says the New York Telegram.

He eschews soup, fish and butter, all of which many who call themselves vegetarians partake of with freedom. To his knowledge he has not eaten a mouthful of animal food in the last two years.

The question before him now is whether he shall be able to find the Naval academy menu and in the living that is provided on shipboard—if he continues in the naval service—a sufficient variety of vegetable foods properly to nourish and strengthen his system. The mess table is not always so well adapted to the requirements of a vegetarian during a long trip at a sea as it might be on land.

Unquestionably his experience, however it results, will afford a fine opportunity for the vegetarians. If he gets along finely we shall hear the vegetable diet extravagantly extolled, and if he doesn't perhaps the United States will catch it for not providing a better vegetable diet for its sailors.

Meanwhile, as the price of meat continues its ascension, we all are becoming vegetarians—as our pocketbook feels the pressure.

WOMEN CYCLERS OF CATHAY.

The queen of Siam is an ardent cyclist, and is attended by Siamese ladies when taking a ride, this naturally setting a new fashion to her subjects. The cycling infection has now spread to the adjoining territory of Burma; for in Akyab a bevy of young Burmese women are the most intelligent and progressive in the East, in some respects even enjoying more liberty than their European sisters; so that it is only natural that they should take the lead in cycling. Mohammedan women in the East wear trousers, so that the "divided skirt" has in this instance preceded the bicycle.

WANTED GORMAN'S ADVICE.

Senator Gorman's friends (and foes) know that his qualties as leader are at least masterly, but how far they trust to his judgment may not be so well known to the reading public. One of the statesman's friends had a dream not so long ago which he is telling and it makes clear the whole Maryland political situation, says the New York Times.

He was standing before Heaven's gate and St. Peter was just opening it. As it swung back the venerable warden asked the name of the new arrival and proceeded to look up his record in a great book. Then he said "Enter!"

The Marylander hesitated. He looked all around him and scratched his head, but he did not advance toward the open gate.

"Why do you hesitate?" asked the saint. "Enter!"

"Well, I hope it's all right," said the other slowly, "but I do wish I could have a word with Gorman before taking so important a step."

WILL SEEK OFFICE

Carl J. Tufte Would Be Third District Commissioner.

August 31 Last Day For Filing Declarations With Auditor.

Carl J. Tufte, of 1805 West Superior street, a well known druggist of the West End, has signified his intention of going before the people for the Republican nomination for county commissioner in the Third district, by filing his declaration of intention with the county auditor, this morning.

The district is at the present time represented on the county board by Ole Berg, the only Democrat elected at the last county elections.

Mr. Tufte is the only Republican that has filed for nomination in that district thus far. Mr. Berg, it is understood, will be a candidate to succeed himself, but he has not yet filed.

The impression has been given that Aug. 18 is the last day for the filing of declarations of intention. This is wrong, for the last date of filing is twenty days prior to the primaries, which will be held Sept. 20. The last date for filing, therefore, is Aug. 31.

Several prospective candidates for nomination had their calculations upset by the announcement in the morning paper that the last date for filing is Aug. 18, and the county auditor's office had several calls by 'phone this morning to learn if the date was correct.

Following the state convention, it is expected that the candidates for county offices, who have hopes and aspirations, will begin to come from under cover, and that a number of filings will be made in the next two months.

Burrows is determined to close out everything in his store, no matter what the loss.

M. J. BRYAN'S SUCCESSOR

Geo. H. Anthony of Pittsburg To Be General Agent Here.

George H. Anthony will succeed M. J. Bryan as general agent of the Wisconsin Central at this point and is exepcted to be here tomorrow, from Pittsburg, where he has been stationed last for the Wisconsin Central interests. Mr. Bryan came here from Pittsburg and has been promoted to the general agency at Milwaukee, the home office of the Wisconsin Central.

Mr. Anthony is said to be one of the best known traffic agents in the country, having served in that line of work for 25 years. Prior to being stationed in Pittsburg he represented the Wisconsin Central in Chicago for six years after having been four years at Detroit. For 18 years he was connected with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, part of the time having been spent in Mexico.

It is understood that Mr. Anthony's transfer from Pittsburg to Duluth is largely the result of his own desire, as he is a western man by birth and rearing and prefers the western country. He is understood to be thoroughly grounded in the railroad business and a man of genial and friendly disposition. He is a man of family and is expected to shortly establish his household in Duluth.

Mr. Bryan said today that he did not know how soon he would leave Duluth, as he wished to stay long enough to introduce Mr. Anthony to the company's friends here. He believes he will go by the first of the week, if not before.

EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

Chairman Buck Acknowledges Entertainment of Convention.

Secretary H. W. Eva, of the Commercial club, has received the following complimentary letter from Chairman H. I. Buck, of the state central committee of the Democracy, which is one more evidence of the excellence of the arrangements which the Zenith City made for the visiting delegates to the State Democratic convention last week:

Winona, Minn., June 29, 1904.—Commercial club, Duluth, Minn.; Gentlemen.—On behalf of the Democratic State Central committee I desire to extend to you and to the people of Duluth our sincere thanks for your hospitalities during the late convention. Your arrangements were perfect and the attention you paid the visitors was beyond my expectation and beyond any claim on our part. We are all impressed with the spirit of pride in your city which you show, and shall ever in private and public extol Duluth to the world.

You are the "salt of the earth" although dwelling by the great "unsalted sea" and it is our wish that "your shadow may never grow less." Yours very truly,

H. L. BUCK,
Chairman State Central Committee.

A TRUTHFUL RECOMMENDATION.

Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson brought back a good story from Richmand, Va., which he utilized Saturday at the Twentieth Century club to illustrate a point, says the Boston Globe.

"A lady who had had considerable trouble with her servants engaged a new one upon the recommendations produced, and for a week or two everything seemed satisfactory. After a while the husband's favorite brandy began strangely and rapidly to diminish and the wife, by observing the girl, became convinced that she was responsible for the disappearance, and discharged her. A few days later the servant returned, and in distress and tears besought her former mistress to give her a recommendation. The lady was puzzled as to what she might say, but finally concocted this: 'I have not been entirely satisfied that this young woman is just what I wanted, but I something good inside of her.'"

NOT READY YET

Neither Russia Nor Japan Will Listen to Peace Overtures.

Russian Fleet Safely Back In Harbor of Port Arthur.

Washington, June 30.—While the officials here are satisfied from their private advices that the recent visit of King Edward to his nephew, Emperor William, was not brought about by a purpose to initiate a movement toward the restoration of peace between Russia and Japan, there is reason to believe that some very careful and discreet inquiries as to the opportunities of some such overtures at this time, have emanated from Washington. It may be stated that the result has been to disclose the fact that neither of the belligerent powers is yet in a humor to sue for peace, nor even to entertain overtures from any third power on that subject.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—An official dispatch received from Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, the commander of the Russian military forces at Port Arthur, says that the squadron of Rear Admiral Withoft re-entered that port after repulsing five torpedo boat attacks. It contains no further details, so far as can be ascertained. It does not mention any damage to the Russian ships.

JAPS OUTMANEUVER

The Russians at Battle of Fen Shai Pass.

Tokio, June 30.—Detailed reports of the capture of Fen Shai pass on June 27 show that the Russians were driven from an exceedingly strong position, dominating the Shi Muncheng road. In this engagement the Russian losses were again heavier than those of the Japanese. The Japanese outmaneuvered the Russians by working around the enemy's right flank and attacking them in the rear.

In the meantime the Japanese column, which had been assigned to make a frontal attack met and routed 10,000 infantry and cavalry posted near Weinchapantsu. This happened on Sunday, June 26. At dawn on Monday the Japanese renewed the attack. The Russians poured a deadly artillery fire upon the attackers and the Japanese artillery secured a new position and delivered a heavy cross fire upon the Russian lines of defense. While this was proceeding the Japanese infantry and engineers cleared the obstructions from the Russian rear and closed in on the enemy. The Russians broke and fled at 11:30 Monday morning.

The Japanese gained and retained possession of the heights. The Russians left ninety dead behind them on the heights. This number of dead does not include those found in the valleys. The Japanese lost 270 killed or wounded in the flanking and frontal attacks.

RUSSIANS WITHDRAW.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—The following dispatch from Gen. Kuropatkin to the emperor dated June 29, was received today:

Toward 8 o'clock in the morning of June 27, our troops having dislodged the enemy's strance guard composed of cavalry and infantry, occupied the station of Senu Chen, but at 9 o'clock it was discovered that a brigade of the enemy's infantry was advancing in front while other columns were turning our detachments left flank. The town of Senu Chen, which is surrounded by walls, was also occupied by the Japanese. Consequently at 11 o'clock our troops slowly withdrew. As regards losses, we only know as yet that an officer and ten men were wounded.

CORRESPONDENT NOT DEAD.

New York, June 30.—The Morning Post's correspondent telegraphs, according to a World dispatch from London, contradicting the report that War Correspondent E. F. Knight of the Post staff was killed recently.

EXPLOSION AT ARSENAL.

St. Petersburg, June 30.—An explosion last night, believed to be the result of an outrage, destroyed a portion of the arsenal at Cronstadt, including the chemical laboratory.

REPUBLICANS OF MICHIGAN

Detroit, Mich., June 30.—At the Republican state convention which opened today, Hon. E. L. Hamilton, the temporary chairman, spoke as follows:

"Last week at Chicago we nominated Theodore Roosevelt for president and Charles W. Fairbanks for vice president, and we present them with equal pride to our friends and to our foes.

"It is a well known legal maxim, 'if you have no case, abuse the plaintiff's attorney.' Translated into politics, this means, if you have no principlese, abuse the opposing candidate.

"Some days ago Governor Vardaman, of Mississippi, is reported to have said 'the issue this year is Roosevelt.'

"That suits us. We are ready to maintain the affirmative of that issue.

"In the three years since Theodore Roosevelt went into the White House to the sound of bells tolling for the death of William McKinley, he has lived in a light compared with which the light that beats upon a throne is only a candle light, and has disclosed no weakness, and has given to this republic an administration of incorruptible integrity, sleepless vigilance and undaunted courage.

"Gentlemen on the other side don't like Mr. Roosevelt; they say he is indiscreet.

"If this be so, then his is the indiscretion which protects American labor and American industry and at the same time restrains corporate combinations within the bounds of law; which protects American agruculture; sends rural mail routes to every farmer's door; reclaims millions of acres of public land for homestead settlers; establishes the republic of Cuba; establishes civil government in the Philippines; digs the Panama canal; defines Alaskan boundaries; reorganizes our army; strengthens our navy; strengthens the Munroe doctrine; protects China from dismemberment, and at the same time reduces taxation and reduces our public debt. If this be indiscretion, give us more of it.

"Gentlemen on the other side don't like Mr. Roosevelt; the craft of his diplomacy is to tell the truth and shame the devil and go straight from promise to conclusion and he sometimes goes across lots.

"Gentlemen on the other side don't like Mr. Roosevelt; he is physically and morally brave and he has proved it.

"During the civil war some people came to Mr. Lincoln and asked him to remove Gen. Grant and he said: 'I can't spare Grant; he fights.' We can't spare Theodore Roosevelt; he fights, but he fights fair and he fights for the right.

"Our friends on the other side are a good deal like men on the deck of an ocean steamer; they can storm and rave and expound; they can walk backward or forward or they can stand still, or they can sit down or they can go below, but the ship will keep straight on its way."

INWARD PAIN OF A KING.

No monarch seemed more fitted to grace a throne than he, says the New York Sun. He looked every inch a king. Some thought he felt it. His beautiful queen stood at his side, radiantly happy. Precious jewels sparkled at her throat, and she, too, seemed content with all the world. The palace beamed with a myriad of lights. The court band played the sweetest music.

He listened, but it could not satisfy that gnawing feeling in his stomach. Would that the ceremonies were over!

They entered the banquet hall. How appetizing the meal looked! He did not wait for grace, but began selecting the dish nearest him. But he cast it aside with a yawn; then tried another, with the same result. What cruel mockery was this? Why was a king thus tormented? There was no chance yet of appeasing his appetite. He must wait. The ceremonies would soon be over.

The hours flitted slowly, but, like the last chapter in the book, the end came at last. All the guests had departed. The lights turned low. The music still played, but very softly. The queen had left him. And the curtain fell amid great applause.

With his kingly robes still on him he sought the manager of the show, who was just sliding out of the stage door, and wanted to know if the ghost had walked.

"No," said the manager, politely, "and," he continued, "if business does not get better it never will walk."

"I've got to eat, you know, Mr. One-nightstand, and I won't be bluffed," the player said, in his kingliest manner. The gnawing in his stomach was dreadful. "I want some money."

"How much" asked the manager.

"The price of a square meal."

"We must not let him starve," ruminated the manager. "Tomorrow night is Saturday, and who knows? That may yet pull us out of the hole."

So he tossed His Majesty half a dollar and departed.

Where good food for little money is sold the actor man went. The night wore on. It was soon early morning. Actors from other companies joined him and he was invited to have something. He did and soon became happy. They bade him good night and left him fast asleep, dreaming that once more he was a king.

A LITTLE MORALIZING.

On the subject of education and business, the Adrian Telegram is moved to relate that a few years ago a high school superintendent rebuked school boys for carrying the paper after school hours, as an occupation beneath the dignity of a pupil, although by so doing they were keeping out of mischief and earning a little money. The same paper has since that time seen a high school graduate "humped over on a delivery wagon," having by inattention failed to work up in the grocery business with a firm which was anxious to promote him had he shown merit. Here is opportunity for a column or two of moralizing, but there is only room in this paragraph to remark that brains and a business bent are God-given and bound to triumph; that education is a fine thing; that work by a pupil is not dishonorable, and that "the fool who hath been sent to Rome" not much "excels the fool who hath been kept at home."
